No iron chain, or outward force of any kind, could ever compel the soul of man to believe or to disbelieve; it is his own indefeasible light, that judgment of his; he will reign and believe these by the Grace of God alone.

Oh, what beautiful eyes! has often been heard in life's journey when you face one another in conversation.

Another great gift is health, but let me conduct you to the human eyes that are but the silent tongues of the immortal soul and mirrored windows, reflect, faithfully and true, the surging passions, dreamy ideals and uncertain hopes, which men and women have been so strangely and liberally endowed.

The speech-gifted tongue can frame words to conceal real thoughts which should not be; but the eyes, whose vocabulary is limited to noiseless movements, seldom, if ever, indulge in untruthful assertion or false promises.

The words of the voice and the language of the pen may, and do deceive, but seldom is it that the eyes carry messages of deception; they might well be designated palaces of truth, tabernacles of wisdom, the holy temple of intuition, a divine power of mind, which is seldom at fault and not often in error. Another great gift of the Eternal God.

Children's Corner — TELL US A STORY

DURING the short war with the United States in 1812-14, an American privateer captured a small Welsh collier in the Irish Channel. The captain of the privateer, noticing in the cabin a strange little box with a slit init, asked what it was. "Ah," replied the Welshman, "I an my poor fellows drop a penny apiece in that box every Sunday to help to send missionaries to the heathen." "Indeed," exclaimed the American, "that's a good thing." A brief pause ensued, and then the victor suddenly said, "I won't touch your vessel nor a hair of your heads," and, summoning his men, he returned to his own ship, leaving the collier with the missionary box to go his way rejoicing. God has said, "Them that honor Me I will honor," and He never fails to live up to that promise.

THE conspiracy has succeeded, and the drunkard is slain by the very man who has placed him in authority. What a scene is this! Murder follows murder. It is not merely the wretched drunkard who is slain, but all his relatives, and if anyone is known to have been his friend, he pays for it with his life.

What a week is this for the unhappy nation! If such a bloodthirsty wretch remains as masters of the situation, who can hope for safety?

"Man, proud man, dressed in a little brief authority," he cannot but see that this state of things will not be endured for long. He may thus disport himself in the capital, but what will they say in the camp? Will the usurper's bodyguard suffice to protect him from another claimant to the throne? We shall see. From the city towers the invading force is seen approaching. They come nearer and nearer—at last they make the assault, the town is captured, and the traitor flies to hide his dishonored head. The victorious general hastens to secure him, but lo'c! Columns of smoke and fire are seen from a certain quarter of the city—he has escaped capture after all. Here, whence he sent forth his murderous orders but a very few days ago, the suicide ends his dishonored life.

MAHOMETANISM

AS John Stuart Blackie sees it, Mahometanism is a sort of Calvinism without spirituality, an idolatry of law without mercy, and of energy without love. It elevates the divine omnipotence into tyranny, and crushes human dependence into slavery. It robs the Church of its soul by sinking it in the State, and it robs the State of its function as a conservator of rights by changing it into an apostleship of dogmas. Everywhere and in all cases it is the enemy of free Individualism, and as the intellectual absolutism of Plato annihilated liberty for the sake of the divine omnipotence; but it is better for the world in the long run that liberty should exist largely with the risk of anarchy, than that society should be shaped by absolute law with the certainty of becoming a machine.

Some of our churches have more breaking power than engine power.

I BELIEVE GOD

EVEN in the awful hour of peril; when everything spoke of danger and imminent death, the man who knows God is able thus to express his triumphant conviction. No storm, however fierce, can shake the faith which is built upon experience. No gale can shift from his moorings the one whose life is anchored to the sure Word of God. He may not be able to explain the why and wherefore of his circumstances, nor to come at the reason of his present embarrassment. But this he knows, that God is faithful; and for his part, although every evidence of sense seems to contradi t his assurance, he still believes God. Such a man is he despair of the adversary. With faith unshaken and unsullied, he is invincible.

When tempted by storm and stress to doubt and deny the things which in brighter days we have seen and reckoned upon, let the memory of God's unfailing mercy shape our confession of faith. When sin overwhelms us, and the consciousness of weakness robs us of all courage, then bear in mind the promises to which He has pledged Himself; and dare to believe in Him for their fulfilment. When the imperious demand of duty finds us morally ill-prepared, do not fear to venture upon the Strength that de'ares itself "perfect in weakness." And when all around in the world is disorder and chaos and tumult, do not forget that "the Lord reigneth" and "sitteth above the water-floods." In all such times as these, "I believe God" is a bridge over the darkest waters into the land of promise.

—J. Stuart Holden.

TRUTH!

THE greatest misfortune that can happen to an intellectual man and the most effectual bar against the entrance of truth into his mind, is the assumption of Infallibility. This happens to the Roman Pope specially, but to all Chur hes more or less, to the heads of politica' parties, and the editors of party newspapers. A man who nurses in himself the habit of never suspecting that he may be wrong, blo'ks up deliberately the highway that leads to Truth. There is no getting right in this world of complex relations unless by taking special care not to go wrong.

—John Stuart Blackie.

DEFINITIONS

A STREET-BOY, being asked what a Club was, replied, "A house where gentlemen read newspapers on Sunday." This is a good specimen not only of street-boy's logic, but of the manner in which many men form their opinions on the most important subjects. Their opinion is simply the impression which some prominent feature of the subject or object has made on them from their point of view, and thus doubly wrong; wrong in the first place from taking an accidental external feature as the true exponent of the soul of the business, wrong in the second place by confounding their individual point of view with the complete knowledge which can be got only by looking at an object from various points all round.

—John Stuart Blackie.

PREDESTINATION

AN ONE occasion, Zeno, catching a thief in the act of stealing, gave him a sound flogging. "Why flog me?" said the cuplrit, with an allusion to the Stoical doctrine of Predestination. "I was predestined to be a thief." "Yes," said the philosopher, "and also to be flogged for thieving." This is a common-sense way of dealing with such misapplication of metaphysics in the conduct of life. If all things are predestined, in that all is included the penalty that follows on the disturbance of the predestined order of social life.

. . . CHRONICLER OF FACTS . . . SIFTER OF RUMORS AND OPINIONS . . . MINISTER OF THE TRUTH THAT MAKES MEN FREE.

A WELCOME SIGN.

Dr. Paul Poisson, French-Canadian member for North Essex, seems to have made a very favourable impression upon the members of the Legislature by reason of his eloquence in seconding the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

To The Examiner an even more noteworthy feature of Dr. Poisson's address than its eloquence was the fact that, although coming from another section of the Province, he devoted a good deal of his speech to emphasizing the necessity of developing New Ontario.

In the older portions of Ontario we have been as a whole indifferent to such matters, overlooking the enormous addition to the national wealth that can be brought about by an adequate development of the vast Northland.

It is refreshing, therefore, to find a representative of a border constituency stressing the needs and possibilities of New Ontario in a manner that should lead other members of the Legislature to realise the importance of a progressive and constructive policy in regard to that part of the Province.

The Ferguson Government should have no hesitation in vigorously fostering such a policy, for the speech of Dr. Poisson is an indication that Southern Ontario is at least alive to the storehouse of riches to be found in the wonderful North.

SPEEDING UP.

The Ontario Government broke all records for speed on Thursday when members introduced for their first reading no fewer than twenty-one bills.

This is the kind of record-breaking the general public will welcome.

The amount of time that is ordinarily wasted by our parliamentary bodies has always disgusted the man on the street, who could see no reason why weeks should be given over to a debate that served no useful purpose, while the end of the session found votes involving millions of dollars being rushed through without even a semblance of consideration.

The Government is furnishing the necessary leadership in speeding up the transaction of public business by having much of its legislation ready for disposal at the beginning of the session, and if the pace at which the proceedings have been opened is maintained, the session should be wound up in the eight weeks promised by the Premier.

The liquor control legislation will, of course, require considerable discussion, and it is desirable that its details should be carefully considered, but even making allowance for the time that will be consumed on this legislation, there seems no reason why a commendable record in the matter of a businesslike and brief session cannot be set up.

SUBURBAN FIRE PROTECTION.

The problem of how such suburban areas as that portion of North Monaghan bordering on the city are to be provided with fire protection is a complicated one.

Residents in such areas have no claim upon the services of the city's Fire Department, seeing that they contribute nothing to its maintenance.

As a matter of fact, most people who take up residence just outside an urban municipality do so to cut down their own overhead by taking advantage of the lower tax rates prevailing in the township.

The cutting of themselves off from the protection of the city's Fire Department has been done by their own action, and the city government has no responsibility toward them in the matter of fire protection and other services that are maintained at the expense of city taxpayers.

At the same time it is desirable that some equitable plan can be arrived at by which such areas might receive some measure of protection, and it is to be hoped that the present negotiations between representatives of the city and township will be able to hit upon an arrangement that will ensure assistance to suburban residents, and still be fair to urban residents out of whose pockets comes the money to maintain the city's fire-fighting facilities.

BRING THEM HERE.

Within the past few days announcements have been made of the early construction in Toronto of three or four huge hotels, including a C.P.R. structure with 1,000 rooms and a C.N.R. hotel to contain 700.

It is evident that an influx of visitors into Ontario on a much larger scale than ever before is anticipated, probably based on the idea that the introduction of the Government sale of liquor in the Province will cause a continuous rush of thirsty folks from the Volstead Sahara across the border.

The large scale on which hotel construction is being planned for Toronto should give our own city government some food for thought.

If the tourist traffic is to assume such volume that at least three more big hotels are considered necessary in the Provincial capital, it is obvious that it will be very profitable for Peterborough to exert more than ordinary efforts to see that at least a portion of the tide of visitors flows this way.

The impression that the less rigid liquor policy to be put into effect will bring more visitors is probably about enough—but that condition will only bring them into Ontario, and not to Peterborough, unless we do something to convince the tourists that a trip into this Province that does not include a visit to Peterborough and the Kawarthas is an opportunity wasted.

Ways and means of keeping Peterborough in the limelight as a tourist centre should occupy a prominent place in the discussions of the City Council.

GROWTH OF THE WEST.

The figures of the Saskatchewan census taken last June and just published show a notable increase in population during the last four years with a gain of 63,500, particularly as the growth is mainly in the rural population, says The Brockville Recorder and Times. This is now double that classified as urban. The total of 821,000 is scanty for the size of territory, but when compared with the figure of 91,000 inhabitants in 1901, the Province's first appearance in the census lists, it is fairly indicative of the remarkable progress made in this Province, now the largest in population of the three Prairie Provinces and the third in the Dominion, although separated by a long interval from Ontario and Quebec.

Saskatchewan's present population is only a fraction of the population which this Province will some day contain. It has still great areas of unsettled lands which undoubtedly, will in time be occupied and in the present settled area there are unoccupied lands of large aggregate acreage. With the increase of mixed farming there should follow, too, an increase of rural population in proportion to the area of land used for agricultural purposes. Industrial development in the towns and cities, already advancing, may be expected to accompany the further agricultural development and reach considerable proportions.

These prospects for population growth in Saskatchewan hold true similarly for Manitoba and Alberta. Together the three Provinces now exceed the Maritime Provinces by a wide margin in population and political influence. In the latter they are already strong rivals of Ontario and Quebec. Their prospects for further growth promise to put them before many years on a basis of more equal rivalry with these two older, more populous Provinces, whose past political power cannot fail to diminish accordingly. In this respect the Canadian West may be expected to repeat the history of its American prototype.

HENRY FORD ADOPTS NEW POLICY.

Rumor has been busy for some time as to a new policy by the Ford Motor Company. Growing competition in cheaper cars and an alleged falling-off in the output of the Ford factories, it has been freely hinted, threaten disaster, or require a change in policy. A new six-cylinder type of Ford car, to sell at a price below other six cylinders, has been prognosticated. But such rumors are all wrong, according to Samuel Crowther in the February Review of Reviews.

There is to be no six-cylinder type. Old model "T" with its continued improvements will remain in the market. Nothing else will be offered. But another step of great moment is to be taken by Mr. Ford. He is gong to enter the business of re-making used cars on a scale commensurate with the making of new. The used cars will be sent to the Ford factories and put through a repair process planned on the same lines as the manufacturing process.

That is an innovation for which the world has been waiting. There is too heavy a wastage in used and discarded cars. Simply because some part of the machine has worn out or been broken much that has remained good has gone on the waste heap or passed for a song to the junk-dealer. But Henry Ford has framed a policy to remedy this so far as the ubiquitous Ford car is concerned. It should make that ubiquitous vehicle more ubiquitous than ever—prolong its present long life indefinitely.

A Ford car can now be re-made for $60 and this figure will be cut. Mr. Ford believes that his business of selling new and re-made cars will be greater than the old. "If he is right," as The New York Times remarks, "his car should go on forever. There will be no old Fords any more."

Henry Ford is no man of mystery, asserts Mr. Crowther. His success has been the result only of common sense and hard work mixed in with ideas and courage. His new policy appears to confirm this judgment. The policy of re-making used cars is eminently a matter of common sense. But to adopt it requires courage in an industry devoted to yearly changes in style and model and the continual elimination of the old through strong selling pressure.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Apparently everybody in Toronto except the police has seen the bandit who has been holding up various places in the Queen City.

The Ontario Government is already bringing in a number of bills. That sounds as if the administration really expects to complete the present session in record time.

Peterborough wants advertising—but it should be the right kind. For instance, the conditions here in regard to Collegiate Institute accommodation are not such as to cause parents to look upon this city as a good place in which to locate.

George Young will soon begin to feel that swimming the Catalina Channel was the easiest part of the whole proposition.

With several sections of the Port Hope-Peterborough highway to be paved this year, motorists can look forward to a summer of detouring. But they can take comfort in anticipating the time when there will be a permanent road all the way.

CATTLE, GRAIN AND PRODUCE

Peterboro—Toronto—Montreal

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Feb. 5.—Cattle trading this week has been satisfactory in all classes, except the half fat green steers. These latter were in poor demand, desirable neither for export nor the domestic butcher trade. Many of these steers are of the big horned coarse type, and are generally among the left overs. Feeders and shippers are constantly being reminded that horned cattle are sure money losers for their owners. Dehorned cattle are always at a premium over the horned. The market was well cleaned up at the close, the coarser cattle at a little lower prices.

Export buyers took 400 finished steers at prices ranging from $7.25 to $7.60; 65 bulls at $5 to $5.25. They report orders next week for 600 finished steers and will take a few heavy heifers but not any bulls.

Choice handy weight butcher steers and heifers met with good steady trading at from $7 to $7.50. Heavy rough butcher cattle sold rather more readily this week. Unfinished cattle are not selling any better than formerly.

Choice fat cows held steady at $5 to $5.25, with a few heiferish cows up to $5.75. Good cows, $4.25 to $4.75, medium cows not quite so active at $3.25 to $4. Choice baby beeves met with strong trading, tops selling at $10 to $10.50; good $8 to $9; medium not wanted except at butchers' prices. Choice butchers bulls sold readily at from $5 to $5.50; rough to heavy bulls, $3 to $4.25.

Springers and milkers—Some improvement in the trade this week. Two carloads of cows were shipped to Buffalo, and the Quebec buyers were again on the market. Local buyers active. Any cows showing quality were picked up readily at steady prices. Choice springers from $75 to $100; good $50 to $65; choice milkers, $70 to $85; good $50 to $60; medium cows anywhere from $30 to $50.

Stockers and feeders—Little demand at the present time and not likely to be for some time. An occasional load of light half fat cattle being taken back to the country to finish, at prices ranging from $5.50 to $5.75, with a few of the best 6c.

Hogs—Sold this week at $11 to $11.25 f.o.b.; $11.50 to $11.75 fed and watered; $11.90 to $12.15 off cars. Premium on selects $2.25 to $2.30 per head, or on a basis of $2.15 to $2.42 per hundred f.o.b.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Feb. 5 (Canadian Press). — A moderate amount of business was done in wheat and barley by Montreal exporters overnight with foreign buyers.

Owing to the increasing scarcity of No. 2 Canadian Western oats here a stronger feeling developed in the market yesterday and prices were marked up 1 1-2c per bushel with sales of odd cars at 76 1-2c per bushel, ex-store, but the market for American corn was weaker and prices were reduced 1c to 2c per bushel, No. 3 yellow selling at 91c, No. 4 yellow at 89c, sample yellow corn at 7c and cool sweet corn at 4c per bushel ex-store.

The condition of the flour market was unchanged, business in Spring wheat grades being again rather quiet in all directions. The demand for Winter wheat flour was also of a limited character.

The millfeed market remains firm owing to continued good demand. There were no price changes.

Very little business was done in baled hay.

Egg receipts 3 cases. The demand for eggs showed some improvement and the market was rather more active, but prices ruled steady.

There was no further change in the price of potatoes yesterday, but the undertone to the market was easy at the late decline noted. A small trade was done for domestic account in car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains at $1.75 to $1.80 per bag of 90 lbs., and Quebec White stock at $1.30 to $1.35 per bag of 90 pounds in bulk ex-track.

Butter receipts 67 packages. A firm feeling prevailed in the butter market under a steady demand, but there were no price changes.

There was also no change in the cheese market, demand continues light with an easy undertone. Receipts 223 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Feb. 5 (Canadian Press).—Sharp upturns in July and September deliveries of wheat resulted yesterday chiefly from buying based on a prospective farm legislation at Washington. September wheat climbed to a new high price record for the season. The wheat market as a whole closed unsettled at the same as Thursday's finish, to 1 3-8c higher; corn 1-8 to 1-2c up; oats unchanged to 3-8c advance, and provisions varying from 35 cents decline to a rise of 5 cents.

Corn and oats derived their firmness mainly from wheat. Country offerings of corn were small.

Provisions reflected an upward tilt of the hog market.

THE EVOLUTION OF THE BATH

In this generation, we, of America, are so used to taking baths that it does not seem possible that bathing is really a modern practice, and that Continental Europe, even to-day, lags far behind in this hygienic practice.

In the time of the French kings they had no bathroom, or wash table, and seldom washed at all. In 1780, a student in the Theological School of Leipzig University was not allowed to pass his examination for the bachelor's degree because of his modernism, which consisted in washing his whole body. It was whispered that the miscreant actually took baths! The Belgian medical authority in the 18th century advised that if bathing was too difficult an undertaking, people ought to put on clean linen at least once every six weeks.

It will be seen from the foregoing that we are in an advanced state of sanitary evolution, and that there is no reason for pessimism regarding the matter of public hygiene.

In the case of the Dutch Calvinists it was good hygienic form to wash one's feet very seldom, and the head never, although it was a common practice to wash the hands quite frequently.

In the diary of Pepys, the washing of his feet was such an extraordinary event that he marked it down on his diary as having occurred on May 30, 1663.

It is only within the last fifty years that the use of the bathtub has become quite general, even in America. The doctor occasionally finds a patient who believes that it would be injurious to his health to take a bath every day, but the common practice among our best citizens is to take one or two baths daily.

The increase in bathing has been so general during the last five to ten years that it is now my custom to warn patients against taking too many baths, and to advise them which is the best kind to take. People sometimes develop almost a mania for taking too many tub baths, and consequently weaken themselves by the use of too much warm water, which makes their tissues flabby, and depresses the circulation on account of the relaxing effect of the heat upon the blood vessels.

The best kind of a bath for all purposes is the shower bath; this can be taken in an ordinary bathtub, if you do not have a built-in shower. You can secure an attachment for the bathtub in any drug store, at the cost of about a dollar, which is suitable for the purpose. A good plan is to take some exercises upon arising in the morning, and follow this with a cold shower bath, allowing the water to first play upon the feet, and then higher up on the body until the whole body has been wet for five or ten seconds. There is no advantage in taking a long bath, even if it is a shower bath. The body should be dried vigorously with a coarse turkish towel, and the skin made to glow under the effect of the rubbing.

Another good time of the day to take a shower bath is late in the afternoon, before dinner time. It is always a good plan to take some vigorous physical culture exercise prior to the shower, as this will increase the circulation, and open up the pores, which can then be cleansed by the flowing shower bath.

If you are ever going to use warm water, take your warm shower just before retiring, when it will act as a sedative, and tend to relax the nervous system.

The only danger in taking too many baths is that you are apt to take too many tub baths, especially of warm water. It is almost impossible to take too many of the shower baths, particularly if you use cold water as much as possible.

WISE AND OTHERWISE

Sleep ought to be and eventually will be abolished, according to one of science's new preachments. Maybe the radio is having something to do with it.

Scientists are raising a pedigreed oyster. Science is wonderful. The next thing you know you won't be able to get any sleep at the seashore because of the noisy clams bragging about their family trees.

Falls Five Storeys Takes One Day Off

BOSTON, Feb. 5.—Patrick J. Duggan, a laborer, drew a holiday by falling five stories down an airshaft to the ground in a building under construction.

Duggan should have been killed according to precedent, and when he got up and shook himself the boss sent him to the hospital on the theory that he probably was fatally injured but he didn't know it.

At the hospital Duggan was treated for abrasions and contusions of the neck, and after waiting a half hour for symptoms of something to appear to indicate that he was badly hurt, the surgeons shook their heads.

Duggan asked them if they were through, and when they said they had done all they could for him, he left for home and had all the rest of the day for himself.

Don't Tell the Wife

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce. Ranny hesitates, loving her, although secretly knowing she loves Abner Gratman. While they are guests on a week-end cruise on the Stivner yacht a widow, Clare, vamps Ranny, arousing Stivner's jealousy. Ranny avows Clare means nothing to him, mollifying Stivner. Ranny punishes Abner in a way that nearly costs his life and Joans'. Later, Joan is overjoyed when Ranny tells her he will get a divorce, but tells her he will get a divorce, but subtly upset by discrepancies between his stories to her and to others as to his destination. Then Stivner calls her up.

"Hello!" said Joan, apprehensively.

Stivner's booming voice—reminiscent of wind lashing the tops of tall pines, of axe blows ringing on frosty air, of forest monarchs crashing down—threatened destruction to the delicate telephone wires and mechanisms.

"Joan," he roared—and there was a plaintively helpless note of boyishness for an overtone—"I'm a patient, good-natured man. But my patience has been strained a little too far; my good nature has been abused too much. I've been made a fool, a dunce, of. I've been made a party to a fraud! But, Sacred Cypress, I know it and—"

"Livingstone, calm yourself and tell me what in the world is the matter?"

"I've been traduced, seduced and swindled! Your husband swore to me that Clare Clemoneau meant nothing to him. I sympathized with him and aided him when what he needed was a swift kick. I took him into partnership when he promised that he'd not encourage Clare, and so that he'd have no temptation to break his promise I sent him off to Maine—"

"When he gets the divorce I'll be well rid of him."

"To WHERE?"

"Maine!"

"Great Scott! If I hear of another place to which he's supposed to have gone I'll think he has a job with a Tourist Agency instead of a lumber company!"

"Here and now I want to apologise for my part in his 'don't tell the wife' scheme, although I know now that I don't know much about it. I don't know what you've heard, or what he's been saying, but I'm telling you the truth now, that he's gone to Fort Ashnock, Maine, my Eastern headquarters—and that Clare Clemoneau has gone with him."

"Livingstone, you don't really—mean—"

Joan clenched the phone tightly, furiously—although by an effort, she maintained the cool, tenor of her voice. "Are you sure about where Ranny went? He told me he was going to Minnesota:

"Minnesota, fiddlesticks! He—that is—they've gone to Maine. I'm calling you from Mrs. Clemoneau's house. I came here, because I was to take her to the Opera. I found her gone, and no message. I finally bullied and bribed out of the butler the information that he had heard her making a reservation on the State of Maine Express. That's the train Ranny went on!"

A pause. Then—

"Livingstone Stivper," firmly. "I am going to Maine. Don't think it's because of any interest in Ranny Forbes. When he gets the divorce I'll be well rid of him. But I just won't let that little vixen brazenly parade her hold over him—while he's legally my husband!"

Another pause. Then:

"Joan Forbes," bellowing, "I, too, am going to Maine! I'm not going to let any man use my business as a shield behind which to fool his wife and steal the woman I love!"

Presently Joan was having her gorgeous opera gown removed, and giving orders to a bustling, hard-driven maid for the quick preparation of a simple traveling wardrobe.

The butler, too, came to the door for a share of instructions, chief of which were to engage a drawing room on the first available train for Maine—and to tell Mr. Gratman, when he came to escort her to the Opera, that she had been suddenly called out of town and had left no address.

CHAPTER XVIII.

Meanwhile, on the train that had borne them, in a day and a night from New York to that farthest northern point of the Maine border, where the tiny town of Fort Ashnock sprawled peacefully, with one elbow in Maine and the other in New Brunswick, Canada, Clare Clemoneau had carefully avoided Ranny.

She knew Ranny's temper and temperament perfectly well enough to know that if he saw her, or ever dreamt that she was on that train, he would get off at the very next stop.

Every female passenger, and more than one male, had observed with interest the tall, soldierly chap with the bronzed skin and far away eyes who kept singularly aloof.

By burying her head in a newspaper whenever he passed during the day, by paying the price of eternal vigilance for nondiscovery, Clare gained for herself the romantically pleasing privilege of studying Ranny for hours on end.

Fort Ashnock was reached in the throes of a baby blizzard. Winter comes early and hard in the great North Woods.

Ranny, stepping off the front Pullman of the through International train, gloried in the prospect of blustery weather, and sucked in great drafts of pine-cleansed air.

Clare, shivering like an orchid in a frost, got off inconspicuously at the far end of the second Pullman, and wished fervently that she were back in steam-heated New York. Only the knowledge that Ranny was here, that she adored him, and that she would have him all to herself, gave her a measure of courage.

Of course, there was the uncertainty as to how he would welcome her under the circumstances. He had been so distant, so unavailable, since the yachting episode; and Stivner had been so watchful.

She did not care whether she had covered her traces or not. One night to work her blonde and babyish wiles upon Ranny was all she asked!

Keeping track of Ranny in Fort Ashnock, after the Express drew away, offered no difficulties. There was only one hotel in the town.

Clare gave him plenty of time to get there and registered before she, too, went to the quaint old Inn and sought accommodations. She did not register under her correct name. She wished to avoid, at all hazards, the possibility of Ranny learning of her presence from the register, and possibly taking defensive measures, before she confronted him in the flesh.

Supper—as the good, but simple, meal was officially known—that night afforded her an excellent stage setting. Ranny could not be abusive, nor flagrantly rebuff her before that small roomful of curious people.

He had his back turned to the door when she entered. He was grinning to himself in a smug, pleased way as he ate. He felt that he had much to be pleased about—for his subtle campaign, to provoke the curiosity of Joan and to undermine her respect for Abner, had augured well, so far as he had been able to judge. For the rest—a little time, a lot of patience, and brain would win where brawn had failed.

Then a silky voice fell upon his ears: "I just adore grass widowers!"

Ranny almost kicked over his chair in his great amazement as he arose.

Clare met his stony, and far from welcoming gaze with so ingenious and insouciant a smile that his temper was bewildered and disarmed for the moment in spite of himself.

She WAS a provoking, alluring little witch as she stood there smiling and lisping:

"Ranny, old dear, you needn't look as though you're seeing a ghost! It's I, your little Clare, in the flesh—look!"

She pinched one velvety cheek and demurely turned it up for his inspection of the glowing finger marks.

Two weeks ago Ranny would have considered this a cute trick out of Clare's widow-bag. Now it disgusted him.

But—the ohter diners were staring. He bit his lip, and politely drew up a chair for her.

"You've done a terribly foolish thing—" he began. But Clare, not a bit overawed by his anger, coyly hushed him.

"I learned from Stivner that you were coming here to get divorced—"

"I'm not going to get a divorce! I'm merely saying so to win back my wife. I love her—but if she learns you're here it will spoil my chances for proving it!"

Clare suddenly underwent a startling metamorphosis. The butterfly became a tiger. "Ranny, she'll never have you again, no matter what I have to do to prevent it! I love you—and I'll have you!"

THEATRE

AT THE REGENT

FAMOUS STAGE COMPANY IS "THE PRINCE OF PILSEN"

Musical Production Screened with Anita Stewart and George Sidney Featured.

It is probable that no musical comedy in the annals of the American stage took so firm a hold on the theatre going public as "The Prince of Pilsen," delightfully written by Frank Pixley and Gustav Luders. The constant inquiry of Hans Wagner, its central character—"Vas you efer in Zinzannati?" became a by-word throughout the country and it was so firmly fixed in the mind of the public that it still serves to preserve the memory of "the comedy with the funny old German who fell in the fountain."

"The Prince of Pilsen" fountain and all—has now been made into a lavishly produced motion picture with Anita Stewart and George Sidney in the featured roles and a supporting cast which includes Myrtle Stedman, Allan Forrest, Rose Tapley and other film favorites. It will be shown at the Regent theatre for 3 days, beginning Monday next.

The picture is a distinct novelty in that it combines an elaborate background of the pomp and ceremony of European court life with an uproarious farce comedy story centering around the character of Hans Wagner, a Cincinnati brewer, who visits the scene of his childhood, is mistaken for the Prince of Pilsen and goes through a series of adventures which nearly brought about the disruption of two kingdoms.

"The Prince of Pilsen" was produced by A. H. Sebastian for Belasco productions, Inc., under the direction of Paul Powell and is released by Producers Distributing Corporation.

AT THE CAPITOL.

"STELLA DALLAS."

Zest for Life's Better Things Mingled with Pathos of Helpless Errors

"Stella Dallas," the Henry King production which comes to the Capitol Theatre Monday deals with the romance of human frailty.

Its action revolves around a central character. "Stella," whose love-life offers an eventful romance fired by her zest for the better things of life, and tinged with the pathos of her helpless errors.

In locale, this production, sponsored by Samuel Goldwyn for United Artists Corporation, searches out the typical American homes in town and country, faithfully reproducing those spots of beauty and interest visualized in the novel.

In theme, the screen version of Olive Higgins Prouty's "best seller", graphically portrays Stella, played by Belle Bennett, a mill worker in a small town whose heart longs for romance. She is attracted to Stephen Dallas, a young man also employed in the mill but who comes from a more refined social sphere.

They fall in love, are married and their union is blessed by a strange and beautiful child, Laurel, played by Lois Moran. Not realizing how tongues wag, Stella, in her light-hearted way, starts a harmless flirtation with Ed Munn, a rather loud and vulgar riding master, played by Jean Hersholt, the screen's character actor.

Because of their different natures, Stella and her husand become estranged. Main Street gossips about her and spurns her. But when her child Laurel is snubbed by the other school children on the great event of her eighth birthday party, Stella packs herself and Laurel off to a fashionble summer resort to try and forget.

But Stella, no matter how she attempts by painting and primping, to be "quality", society doesn't take her up. Some giddy boys and girls mock her gay and garish garb in the presence of Laurel. Flushed with shame, Laurel and her mother leave the hotel, Laurel not even saying good-bye to Richard Grovesnor, her first sweetheart, played by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

On the Pullman train, some girls who were also at the hotel, refer to Stella as "the ball and chain around that sweet girl." Stella wonders if Laurel has heard and Laurel wonders if Stella has heard.

Back in town, Stella determines on a definite course. She grants her husband a divorce, providing he marries his old boyhood sweetheart, Mrs. Morrison, played by Alice Joyce. Perhaps she will find some fleeting joy and love in making her daughter happy. Laurel, however, refuses to separate from her mother and live with her father and Mrs. Morrison. But Stella has decided to alienate the affections of Laurel from her. She will marry Ed Munn, whom she knows her child detests.

The plan works. Laurel returns to her father and Stella goes off with Ed Munn. At intervals, she returns to the Long Island home of Mrs. Morrison and sees Laurel through and open window. Stella has heard of the announced wedding between Laurel and young Grovesnor and on the evening of the ceremony, in a slashing rain, she is outside, peering in between the iron grating, sees the minister give the child his blessing, sees the happy gathering, and with heart breaking, yet happy. Henry King has contrived an ending to the picture piercing in its poignant appeal, glorious with the halo of true-to-life climax.

Dramatic points and counter points, peaked with emotion, fill every reel of "Stella Dallas." In it are youth, beauty, romance and a deep underlying pathos which endows the film with a fullness of spirit and richness of unusual situations that alternately streak the cheeks with tears and wreathe the face with smiles.

Henry King, who directed "Stella Dallas", has focalized in it all the creatie artistry of his great career. It is a picture that he wanted to do ,desired to make, and has given it part of himself.

Frances Marion, who considered the story to be the best of American life, spent four months in the preparation of the scenario. The cast which interprets the above roles is unsurpassed, including in its roster, Belle Bennett, Ronald Colman, Alice Joyce, Lois Moran and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr.

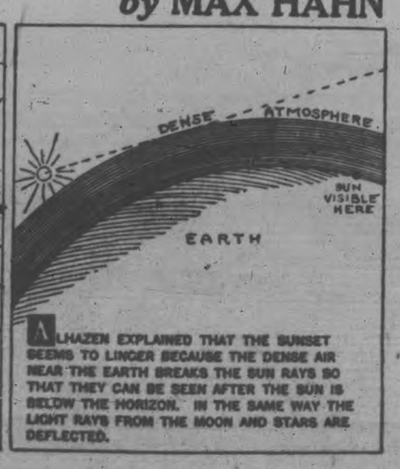
OUTLINE OF SCIENCE XCV—Why the Sunset Lingers. by MAX HAHN

ONE OF THE FEW ARABIAN SCIENTISTS WHO HELPED TO MAKE THE LAMP OF KNOWLEDGE BURN MORE BRIGHTLY WAS ALHAZEN, WHO LIVED ABOUT 1,000 A. D. HE OBSERVED THAT A STRAIGHT STICK OR A ROWBOAT OAR APPEARS BENT WHEN PARTLY UNDER WATER.

ALHAZEN DISCOVERED A PARALLEL BETWEEN THE ILLUSION OF THE CROOKED OAR AND THE FACT THAT THE SUNSET SEEMS TO LINGER.



ALHAZEN EXPLAINED THAT THE SUNSET SEEMS TO LINGER BECAUSE THE DENSE AIR NEAR THE EARTH BREAKS THE SUN RAYS SO THAT THEY CAN BE SEEN AFTER THE SUN IS BELOW THE HORIZON. IN THE SAME WAY THE LIGHT RAYS FROM THE MOON AND STARS ARE DEFLECTED.

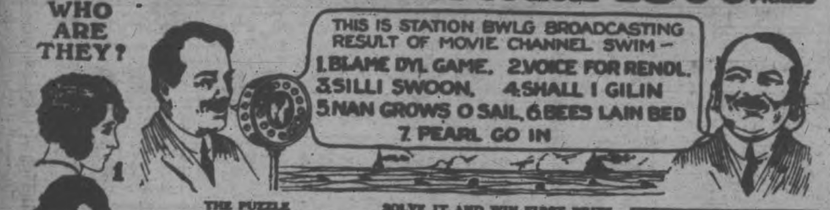
PUZZLE Who Won the Movie Channel Swim? WIN

New 1927 Chevrolet Coach $1800.00 IN PRIZES

WHO ARE THEY?



THE PUZZLE

Twenty-two popular moving picture stars are supposed, recently, to have swam in a race across the English Channel. Their names are printed below. The results of the race were broadcast by Radio Station BWLG, but the operator, to have some fun and keep the thousands of interested listening fans in suspense, announced the names of the first seven to finish jumbled up. For instance, he gave number 5 as "Nat grows o sail" instead of Gloria Swanson, and offered big prizes to those who could correctly name the first seven he announced. In the picture above you see him announcing the names in ridiculous fashion. If you can put the letters of each name back in their right places you will have the names of the first seven whose pictures are shown to the left in the order in which they finished. Find their names and send them in to compete for the big prizes.

A DOCTOR'S PRAISE

A Noted Doctor Strongly Endorses Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

The test of any remedy lies in its acceptance and employment by the qualified medical practitioner. No less an authority than Dr. Andrea Amici, physician of the Papal household, writing on the subject of anaemia, impoverishment of the nervous system and disorders attributable thereto, strongly endorses Dr. Williams Pink Pills, recommending them as superior to other tonics.

Dr. Amici's testimony reads as follows:—"For several years I have made use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills in my work and I have always found them efficacious in the treatment of disorders due to impoverishment of the nervous system, anaemia and neurasthenia, stomach weakness, retarded development in young women, and irregularities. There is no lack of tonic remedies, but in my experience no one of them manifests a superior efficacy to that of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills."

No more conclusive evidence of the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills could be asked for or given, than is found in the above endorsement of this noted European physician. Besides this, however, this medicine has enjoyed a world-wide public confidence for more than a third of a century and has brought relief to thousands and thousands of weak and suffering people.

Try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for anaemia, rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness and stomach trouble. Take them as a tonic if you are not in the best physical condition and cultivate a resistance that will keep you well and strong. You can get these pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 15 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockvile, Ont.

WOOLER NEWS

WOOLER, Feb. 5. — On Monday night Mr. and Mrs. Reid entertained the members and their husbands of the "Altruists" Class in the church parlors.

The Women's Missionary Society met at 11 a.m. on Tuesday. Lunch was served at noon by Mrs. Roy Putnam and her group. An unusually large attendance of fifty ladies, gentlemen and children sat down to lunch. A quilt was quilted, and fifteen yards of flannelette cut and hand sewn by the members. Mrs. J. R. McCall, the oldest member, in her eighty-first year, pieced a top for quilt, and presented it to the Auxiliary. This is an inspiration to the younger members not to grow weary in well-doing. At the close of the meeting a Mission Band was organized. Mrs. A. G. Austin, member of the Auxiliary, was appointed as the superintendent and the little folk named as their officers: President — Arthur Putnam; Vice-President — Doris Nelson; Recording Secretary — Ada Whitney; Corresponding Secretary—Charles Way; Treasurer—Doris McColl.

On Tuesday evening a large crowd of young people, as well as middle-aged people, gathered, amid rain and wind, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Nelson, in honor of Miss Jessie Sharpe, on the eve of her marriage to Arthur Asseltine of Murray. The evening was spent in the merriment of singing popular songs and presenting to Mrs. Sharpe two large baskets of gifts drawn into the drawing-room by two little girls. The gifts showed the esteem in which Miss Sharpe is held by her many friends. Several pieces of aluminum, towels, china, cut glass, tea-towels, salad bowls, fruit sets, jardineres, table cloth, broom, and a number of other household necessities and money. Rev. H. B. Neal acted as chairman, and called on a number of gentlemen and ladies for addresses, which added to the merriment of the evening.

Wind Rolls Snowballs In Fields Near Warsaw

WARSAW, February 5—During Thursday evening and part of the night there was quite a heavy snow storm, later there was a short heavy rain storm. Practically all night there was a heavy wind, which came in gusts.

In the morning, in many flat fields for several miles there were patches of land, sometimes as much as four acres, covered with balls or rolls of snow. Each ball had a curved or crookedly curved track behind it. Some of these were no larger than an ordinary baseball; some were almost two feet in diameter. Some of these larger ones looked like a large roll of cotton batting, with a hole straight through the centre, which could be seen by anyone driving along the road, who noticed. Sometimes there were odd balls in a field but the trail of these odd ones pointed to the big patch.

It just looked as though the wind had skipped along and formed whirlwinds which had caught, perhaps extra large bits of the frozen rain, and rolled them along in the snow, leaving odd ones behind a blazed trail, and collecting large numbers of them where it took an extra swirl.

WORLD AVIATION GROWTH TRIPLED

Great Strides Made Since 1919—Greater Safety and Greater Speed.

LONDON, Feb. 5.—(By Canadian Press).—A picture of the development of world civil aviation from its beginnings in 1919 to an ultimate network of airship and aeroplane services over the entire earth is drawn in the memorandum on Imperial air communications (placed as a confidential document before the Imperial Conference), which has been published by the Air Ministry.

The memorandum states that the total length of the regular air routes of the world is now three times greater than it was in 1920. Europe has 18,120 miles of air lines, America 8,025 miles, Africa 3,641 miles, Australia 3,267 miles, and Asia 1,325 miles. There has been a great improvement in safety and regularity. On the British airways the number of miles flow per fatal accident has leapt from 168,000 in 1919-20 to 1,131,000 in 1926.

A map shows existing and proposed air transport routes of the world. Imperial airship routes are shown radiating from the Airship Port at Cardington, near Bedford, across to Canada and the West Indies, and to Australia by two great trunk lines. One of these goes by way of South Africa. In addition to the aeroplane chain to the East, a main aeroplane line is shown from Cairo to the Cape, and important new services are planned for the West Indies.

SOFT BED SAVES SLEEP

If you earn your living mainly by brain work, you can save at least two hours of rest every night by sleeping on a good, soft bed. Such is the conclusion reached by Dr. Donald A. Laird, of the department of psychology, Colgate University, following a series of experiments with students. By measurements of mental reactions in terms of calories, says Popular Science Monthly, he found that a soft bed will build as much mental energy in six hours as a hard bed will build in eight.

PRESBYTERIANS TO BUILD CHURCH

Annual Meeting Held By Continuing Congregation at Keene.

The Presbyterian Church in Keene held its congregational meeting in the Town Hall on Monday afternoon and evening, January 31st. In spite of much illness in the neighborhood a very representative gathering met and important business was transacted.

Mr. Walter MacCleary of Knox College, who is the regular student supply, acted as chairman. The usual church committees gave highly satisfactory reports.

Since this is a minority group they have been renting the town hall and former Methodist church during the past year but at Monday's meeting, it was unanimously agreed that the time had come to build a Presbyterian Church in Keene.

The women of the congregation had prepared a fowl supper par excellence. The tables were decorated with pink cyclamen and down the festive board only appreciation and good cheer were reflected in the candlelight.

When the business session ended, Mr. MacCleary told the children an adventure story illustrated with lantern slides. One for the grown-ups on Ireland had to be postponed. The congregation was extremely gratified with the progress and feels that the success was due in no small part to the energy and enthusiasm of Mr. MacCleary.

BETHANY PERSONALS

BETHANY, Feb. 5.—Mrs. Rev. Poulter was a visitor to Peterboro on Friday.

Miss Maude Rodwell is visiting with Omemee friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Lowes and children of Cavan spent Tuesday with Mr. and Mrs. William Lee.

While leaving his home on Monday evening Mr. W. A. Jakeman fell on the ice and fractured several ribs.

Mr. Douglas Driver lost a valuable cow, which he had recently purchased, on Wednesday. The animal got loose in the stable on Tuesday night and ate an over fill of chop.

Misses Winnie and Leone Davis spent the week end with Peterboro friends.

The young ladies of the United church are planning to hold the basket social which was postponed in January owing to illness in the community, on Monday, February 14th. They are trying to finish paying for the piano which they purchased a year ago and placed in the Sunday school room.

The radio fans of the village are greatly enthused with the programmes which are being received from station 10 B-I-, Lindsay. The programmes from the U.S.A. are wonderful, but when it comes from one of the local towns from artists one knows its as good as a letter from home.

The local hockey team went to Omemee on Monday evening to play a return game. The score was 7-1 in favor of Omemee.

Worn Out by Housework

House work is monotonous and tiresome. Doing the same things over and over again, day in and day out is what breaks down the nervous system.

And house work is hard work. Take ironing, for instance, a day's work in itself, without looking after the meals and the children and the thousand and one things which come up during the day.

In time this monotonous routine gets on the nerves. There are sleepless nights, frequent headaches, indigestion and spells of irritability and despondency.

Under such conditions there is nothing like Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to drive away the clouds by building up the nervous system.

It is wonderful the way new hope and courage come back when this building-up process is set in motion. You cannot get well in a day, but progress is such as to warrant you in keeping up the treatment until restoration is thorough and complete.

COMPLAINT MADE AGAINST CHANGE

Norwood Register Objects To Transfer of Agricultural Office.

Under the heading, "An Unwelcome Change," the Norwood Register complains about the moving of the agricultural representative from Norwood to Peterborough. Its comments follow:

The announcement was made this past week that the local branch of the Department of Agriculture is to be moved to the city of Peterboro. The Register in common with many of our citizens sincerely regrets this move.

The Department was established here about eighteen years ago and its benefit to this district has meant a great deal. One has only to note the number of our most prominent young farmers of to-day who received their first instruction at the various short courses here years ago to be cognizant of its value. Only last fall the prize for the best honey exhibit at the Crystal Palace Show in London, England, was won by a young man from this district who was among the first to take advantage of the short courses and benefits of the Department.

In the co-operative marketing of eggs, the rural school fair work, sheep breeders' club, poultry culling, reforestation plots, stock judging courses and many other activities of the Department; its value to this district is readily seen and its direct removal means a loss to this eastern part of the county which if not felt at the present time, will, we believe, be reflected in future years.

The recent work accomplished in the Norwood Cow Testing Association inaugurated here six months ago by the Department, has clearly shown the value of such work and its great possibilities. A difference in production value as high as $90 was found between some cows in six months time. Extending the work to take in the whole district and following a policy of elimination, the revenue of this dairying district could on a conservative estimate be increased one hundred thousand dollars. One cannot be blind to these facts to acknowledge the value of the Department to this district.

Efforts to secure the removal of the local branch of the Department of Agriculture to Peterboro have been carried on by citizens of Peterboro city and organizations there for some years. Such has been frankly stated in the city press this week, and at a banquet in that city at which Deputy-Minister Roadhouse publicly acknowledged Mr. Denne's requests for the transfer of the Department to be of some years' standing.

Mr. Denne, although a city man, realizes the Department is a good thing and worth securing and has shown his aggressiveness for his community in going after it. Peterboro's claims for the Department, however, we do not believe possess any advantages over its present location at Norwood. Peterboro is situated very much to one side of the county, about four miles from the western limits and some forty miles from the eastern boundary. Norwood, on the other hand, is much more centrally situated in the county and from it the Department can more easily reach all points than from Peterboro. As the representative's work calls for a great deal of travelling, the advantage of the central location at Norwood is evident in that the representative is better able to reach all districts and be of better service. The Department of Agriculture has essentially to do with agricultural conditions and its situation in a rural community which is located in the centre of the county it serves, seems a more logical situation than in a city off to one side of the county.

We understand an effort is being made to retain the office at Norwood and we hope the citizens of this district will be fully aroused to the loss they are liable to sustain and that they will make their petition strong enough to secure the continuance of the Department at Norwood where it has always been since its establishment.

PREMIER ASSURES WINNIPEG OF POWER

TORONTO, Feb. 5.—Premier G. Howard Ferguson has assured the City of Winnipeg, through a deputation which recently waited upon him, that Ontario will do nothing regarding the power possibilities of the English River that might jeopardize the future power supply of the Manitoa Capital.

Headed by the Right Hon. Arthur Meighen, the Winnipeg deputation, comprising Hydro officials, urged upon the Ontario Government the construction of a conservation dam on the English river with a view to safeguarding their supply of energy. Winnipeg, it was pointed out, was dependent upon 40 miles of flow of this river.

The Prime Minister gave no definite answers, but will call another conference of the officials interested, once a survey of the river's possibilities, which he has since ordered, is completed.

TRUE STORIES about LIFE INSURANCE by a REPRESENTATIVE of the MUTUAL LIFE

NOW she knows the Value of Monthly Income Insurance

I SOLD a man a Continuous Monthly Income Policy in favour of his wife, to provide her $200 per month, in case of his prior death, which took place a few years later. He had sufficient other Insurance to pay off the Mortgage on the home and to clean up the estate. That done, the widow had an assured income from The Mutual Life of Canada of $200 per month as long as she lived.

Not long after her husband's death, her brother came to her to borrow some money to put in his business.

In answer, she simply stated the truth—she had no money. If she had, she would have lent it.

"Why, you have Tom's Insurance," he said.

She explained that her husband had left her an income of $200 per month. She had no lump sum at her disposal. She was sorry, at the time, because she wanted to help her brother, but, afterwards, she realized her husband had been wise.

"Because," she told me, "if I had had a lump sum, I would have lent it. And it would have been lost, because, inside two years, my brother failed. If I had had the money and refused to lend it, it would have caused family unpleasantness and, perhaps, estrangement. I never realized the full value of Monthly Income Insurance until that time."

The Mutual Life of Canada issues a larger number of Monthly Income Policies each year. Let our Representative explain the advantages of the Mutual Monthly Income Policy and the Mutual system of profit-participation. Or we will send you our literature on request.

FALLIS LINE CO. ANNUAL MEETING

Shareholders of Telephone Line Make Presentation To Secretary.

CHURCH NIGHT HELD.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 5. — The shareholders of the Fallis Line Telephone Company recently held their annual meeting in the school-house, the President, H. A. Fallis, being in the chair.

Routine business received the necessary attention, and a special feature of the gathering then took place. Nathaniel Belch has been Secretary of the company since its incorporation sixteen years ago, and has been most faithful and painstaking in the fulfillment of his official duties.

The President made an informal address, expressing on behalf of himself and his fellow-shareholders the appreciation and esteem in which Mr. Belch is held, and pointing out that the work of carrying on the company successfully has been considerably lightened because of the willingness and capability with which the Secretary has assumed his share of the responsibility.

Milton Fallis then presented Mr. Belch with a handsome Coleman lamp as tangible evidence of the regard of those with whom he is associated in the Fallis Line Telephone Company.

Taken completely by surprise, Mr. Belch made suitable reply in acknowledging the gift.

Sixteen years ago a number of the citizens of Fallis Line decided to become incorporated as a telephone company, bought out the private line owned by Dr. H. A. Turner, and extended it to Harvey Aiken's farm at the western boundary of the township. The line begins at William Gray's corner at the western extremity of the municipality and has now eighteen subscribers. Like other lines coming in from the country, it is connected with the local company and has service from the local switchboard at the central office.

That financially the venture has paid its way was evident from reports received at the annual meeting.

Church Night.

Over two hundred people were in attendance at the weekly church night held on Wednesday evening in the basement of the United Church, the east end group, from the Hydro Shop corner to the top of Allen's hill, being responsible for the programme and entertainment.

The gathering is evidently growing in interest and popularity each week, the element of surprise in relation as to what is to be provided by the different groups being one of the enjoyable features each night.

Dr. A. Jemison was chairman, and at the very outset formality was dispensed with by the request that the entire audience make a big circle extending completely round the room. Little Audrey Garside and her brother, Freddie, recited "Welcome" poems, and everyone joined hands and sang, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

A "Who Are You?" contest gave opportunity for plenty of laughter as groups of six gathered about the various tables and tried to identify the photographs on display. As these were largely collected from pictures taken several years ago, a number of the originals could hardly recognize themselves, or their friends. the arrangement of dress and hair and particularly the style of hats giving a ludicrous impression at this later day.

Miss Sara Dean, who had taught quite a number of those present during her many years of service in the Public School, gave a talk reminiscent of her experiences in teaching, and Misses Estelle Hetherington and Marjorie Skitch followed with a piano duet.

Refreshments, consisting of apples and home-made candy, were passed at this point, and the usual social good time was enjoyed. Other items on the formal programme included a reading, "We Missed You," by Dorothy Crossley; vocal solos, with ukelele accompaniment, by H. Thurston, of Peterborough; a reading on "Influence," by Dr. Jemison; community singing of hymns, and a talk on "The Grace of Sociability," by Miss Hetherington. "The fine art of living is to draw from everyone his best," was the gist of Miss Hetherington's talk, with Andrew, Barnabas, Henry Drummond, and above all, Jesus Christ, cited as examples of those who practised in every day life this ideal. "Am I helping anyone to realize the graciousness of Christ?"

The pastor, Rev. F. H. Howard, dismissed the gathering with the benediction. One of the rural groups, probably of those living on more than one line, will be responsible for next week's 'Church Night.'

PLANES TO GET SPECIAL MAIL

Will Take Letters From Steamers at Straits of Belle Isle.

NEXT SUMMER.

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 5 (By Canadian Press).—To mark the inauguration of the aerial postal service which Hon. Peter J. Veniot, the new Postmaster-General, has announced he hopes to establish in eastern Canada before long, Montreal interests are suggesting that he make arrangements this summer for taking off special mail from liners in the Strait of Belle Isle and bringing it to Montreal by seaplanes.

The voyage from England to the Strait of Belle Isle occupies four days; and with air ships picking up the European mail there it could be delivered in New York half a day sooner than if sent by the fastest greyhound running between Southampton and New York; that is, if proper connections were made with the trains running from Montreal to New York. On the mail service to Chicago a saving of nearly two days might be made. If there were air mail lines out of Montreal to American cities the saving in time would be greater.

MUSICAL HISTORY.

Many Common Beliefs Doubtful—Some of Them Called Fables.

Certain ideas about the place of music in history are being constantly modified and corrected, and in practically every case in such a way as to show that music has not been hated by politicians and fighters as has been supposed. Because he turned music out of the churches Cromwell is often supposed to have been anti-musical, while so far from this being true, it is certain that he had an organ in his own house and was extremely fond of hearing music of all kinds. The power of singers and harpists over the men who had to fight was in earlier periods supposed to be great, and it was because of this that Edward I. was said to have massacred all the Welsh bards when he conquered the Welsh people. Even this is doubtful, however, and one famous historian describes it as "a mere fable." In fact, the more we enquire into such matters, the more evident does it become that in every period the people who have really done anything worth while, whether we agree with what they have done or not, have had some appreciation of music, and in many cases have been excellent musicians themselves.

MAIL BAGS STOLEN.

LONDON, Feb. 5.— (Canadian Press.) — Mail bags containing bankers' remittances in bank notes amounting to £10,000, en route from Cardiff, Wales, to London, disappeared yesterday while in rail transit. It was the second robbery of a similar nature lately.

BABY'S WELFARE DURING FEBRUARY

Should be Most Carefully Guarded by All Mothers

February is one of the hardest months of the year on little ones. It is a month of cold, blustery days that prevent the mother taking her baby out for the fresh air so necessary to its welfare. Baby is consequently confined to the home. More often than not the rooms are overheated and badly ventilated and the little one catches cold or grippe. What is needed to keep the baby well is a gentle laxative that will regulate the stomach and bowels, banish constipation and indigestion and in this way will either prevent or break up colds and grippe. Such a laxative is found in Baby's Own Tablets. They are mild but thorough in action; are absolutely safe and they are guaranteed to contain neither opiates or other harmful drugs. They never fail to be of benefit to little ones and may be given to either the newborn babe or the growing child.

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by all dealers in medecine or may be had by mail, post paid, at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Co., Brockville, Ont.

Owing to the high cost of coal, a scheme has been fosterd for the distillation of peat, or, as it is commonly called in Ireland, turf, enormous quantities of which exist in the British Isles. From it can be obtained paraffin and asphalt and other by-products.

COMPENSATION DURING MONTH

Increase of $113,000 in Amount Paid Out For Accidents.

FEWER CASES.

In January the Workmen's Compensation Board awarded over half a million dollars in benefits for industrial accidents in this Province. The total was $538,374.81, of which $461,933.52 was for compensation and $76,441.29 for medical aid and hospital services. The figures are over $113,000 higher than in the same month in 1926. During the month there were 5,293 accidents reported to the Board, which included 29 fatal cases. This is somewhat lower than December, 1926, when there were 5,411 accidents reported, including 34 fatalities.

Speaking of those figures, R. B. Morley, General Manager of the Industrial Accident Prevention Association, called attention to the fact that death cases and other serious accidents had recently shown an upward trend. He referred particularly to a case where a worker, while applying belt dressing was drawn into the pulley and killed, owing to the sweater he was wearing being caught on the line shaft. Another accident resulted in death by burning owing to handling of gasoline in an unsafe manner. Two other recent fatalities in industry were attributed to blood poisoning following very slight cuts. Mr. Morley called attention to the need for competent first aid for all cuts and scratches, no matter how slight.

Community Music

It is only in recent years that the phrase "community music" has become a part of our national vocabulary, and, like many new phrases, it is used with a wide variability of meaning. In some cases it is confined to instances in which there is actual popular participation, as in community singing; in others it is extended to apply to any manifestation of common interest of masses of people in musical performances or enterprises. In a recent issue of "The Musical Quarterly", J. Lawrence Erb makes some pertinent comments on this subject.

"The present use of the term," he writes, "is neither sufficiently inclusive nor sufficiently discriminating. Mass singing of familiar songs, valuable as it is in certain directions, does not exhaust or even do justice to a term which should include every phase of musical activity; moreover, the rough and ready standards attending community singing in the past are entirely inadequate as criteria for any type of performance except what is spontaneous and inexpert. This is not to say that community singing, as at present understood, has no place in the scheme of things. On the contrary, there might well be more of it. But it represents the rudimentary phase of something much more elaborate and worth while, and should not be permitted to usurp too large a place in the scheme.

"Community music properly includes all forms and phases of music which serve the community and grow out of it. It is therefore of the utmost concern to everyone actively engaged in music to discover just what goes to make up this composite. Even for those whose tastes do not incline toward the crowd, it is not wise to withdraw into a precious little coterie and enjoy themselves too exclusively in the rarer musical atmosphere, while all around there exists another different musical condition whose influence is ever increasing. One cannot escape the spirit of the times. The problem is not whether we shall or shall not align ourselves with current musical activities, but how we as individuals and communities can get the most out of them.

"The aim of a community music campaign should be to create so widespread an interest in such a diversity of musical activities that every individual in the community may find an outlet and may be stimulated into musical expression. If, as we are assured by those who ought to know, music has a beneficent effect upon every person subjected to its influence, it is the business of community music to afford to each individual the fullest opportunity to come into contact with this influence in the most effective way. If, as we are also assured, the effect is so much more advantageous if the individual takes active part, the obvious business is to create every conceivable type and kind of organization and activity for musical performance.

"The only caution which needs seriously to be sounded in connection with community music activities is that there is always danger of killing the interest by insisting too soon upon elevating the standards of taste. Changes in taste, usually for the better, generally comes as horizons widen and the mind grows."

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

As Faith shrank helplessly against the wall, sick with the thought of facing the bridal party with her astounding news of Cherry's disappearance, a door to a tiny room adjoining the large vestry room opened and the rector, the Rev. Mr. Ashburn, appeared, vast and dignified in his rich vestments.

"I am Faith Lane, the sister of the —the bride," she came close and spoke in a voice so low that he stooped to listen. "There—there won't be any wedding Mr. Ashburn. My sister — Cherry — Cherry has—" She could not go on in face of his blank astonishment.

"My dear young lady!" the rector refused to believe his ears. "You can't possibly realize what you are saying! If you knew of any reason why this marriage should not be performed, why did you not speak out sooner?"

"You misunderstood me," Faith whimpered, her lips quivering against her clenched right fist. "My sister has run away—just half an hour ago. She ran away to keep from marrying Mr. Cluny. Will you tell him?" she begged, laying a trembling hand on his sleeve.

"This is outrageous! Incredible!" The rector's round face flushed scarlet. "What in the world shall I say to my old friend, Ralph Cluny? I would rather face a cannon—" he seemed to forget Faith, to be talking to himself. "Heaven knows I tried to dissuade him from the first. Madness, sinful madness, for age to seek to mate with youth—"

"Don't blame me," Faith was ashamed to feel tears gathering in her eyes. "She left a note, but—I'd rather not show it to you. It's—it's so personal. She did not say where she was going. Please don't hope to try to find her or that she will come back," she pleaded.

"I don't know what to do," the rector looked about him helplessly. "It will cause a terrible scandal—nothing like this ever happened in my church before. How shall I tell Mr. Cluny? He is late —I wonder if she got word to him. But in that event he should have telephoned—"

The door was torn open and Bob Hathaway, his blue eyes fixed wide in a stare of horror, staggered into the room. He was bareheaded and without an overcoat, the gleaming black of his evening clothes powdered about the shoulders with big flakes of fast-melting snow.

"Mr. Ashburn—oh, Faith, Thank God you're here!"

"Bob, darling!" Faith's strength and calmness came back in the moment of his need for her. "Don't mind too much, darling. It's really not so dreadful, unless Mother—oh, Bob!"

"Not so dreadful?" There was horror and amazement in Bob Hathaway's voice. 'Do you realize what it will mean? Poor Uncle Ralph!" He groaned the last words. "Where is—Cherry—now?"

"Now?" Faith questions dazedly "I don't know, Bob. All I know is that she ran away while I was dressing to come to the church. I don't know where she went."

"Then—" Bob dropped his arms and stood back to stare at her. "You don't know—what she did?" His blue eyes were dark with horror and pity. "What, Bob? Tell me! Don't look like that! Tell me!" She dropped her handbag and flung herself against his breast, her hands gripping his shoulders.

"Uncle Ralph has been—murdered," he said slowly, almost dully. "Cherry was there—just before—oh, Faith, darling! Don't faint!"

Courtesy on the 'Phone If Hints Are Followed

The following hints for courtesy on the telephone have been drawn up by the Business Standards Committee of the Kiwanis Club:

1.—Always be courteous—nothing pays bigger dividends than politeness.

2.—Modulate your voice and speak close to the receiver. Remember the other party cannot see you or understand your good intentions. All he has to go by is the tone of your voice and what you say.

3.—Do not hang up the receiver sharply to jar in the other party's ear.

4.—When answering the 'phone do not say "Hello!" Say "So and so speaking."

5.—If you have to get information that may keep the party on the line waiting long, prevent it by saying you will call back in a few minutes.

6.—If another party is asked for, say "Just a moment please, hold the phone."

7.—Hang up the receiver when you are finished. If you don't Central has a nasty way of cutting off the service as a punishment.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

This brown cloth coat has a seal collar and cuffs large enough to be used to keep the hands warm in very cold weather.

A middle-aged Englishman in Paris recently observed that as he walked along the fashionable streets of the French capital he might think he was twenty years younger, for all the women appeared to be carrying muffs and to be walking along with bent elbows and hands clasped in their muffs just as women did in the first decade of the present century.

Of course we must realize that his impression of muffs was entirely an optical illusion, for few women in France or in America have been persuaded to follow the example of the Queen of Roumania and carry muffs. But the wide rather roomy cuffs on the new coats do make an excellent substitute for the old-fashioned muff, and so it happens that the newest gesture in walking—among Parisians and to some extent among smart American women—is this achieved by folding the hands demurely together within these spacious cuffs and walking along with elbows crooked.

Civilized women always seem to have some concern in knowing what to do with their hands when walking.

Primitive women are never troubled to know what to do with their hands when walking. If the baby is disposed of in a sling across the back there are usually water jugs or bundles of sticks to be balanced with the hands on the head. A few centuries ago the majority of women carried a distaff which provided an apparently satisfactory way of disposing of the hands. It is only the more sophisticated civilized woman who is troubled to know what to do with her hands when she walks. Each period of fashion solves this problem in its own way. At one time women held a parasol in one hand and a train in the other. It may be the fashion to hold a fan or a handkerchief or a nosegay. Quite recently the problem has been solved by the wrap-around coat that had to be held together in the front. And now comes the muff gesture.

Fur coats have run a close race for favor with cloth coats trimmed with fur, but either sort adapt themselves to the new gesture, provided only that the cuffs are deep and not too tight.

Thirteen Year Old Brings Little Ones From Burning Home.

PARENTS AWAY.

WALLACEBURG, Ont., Feb. 5.—Fire, believed to have originated from a defective chimney, totally destroyed the home with contents of Mr. and Mrs. John King, some four or five miles from Wallaceburg. The loss will be considerable.

Mr. and Mrs. King were both absent from home at the time, Mr. King being engaged at his duties in the glass works here, while his wife was in town doing some shopping.

Alone in the house were seven children, the eldest of whom was a thirteen-year-old girl. She led five of the other children from the downstairs portion of the building, and then pluckily made her way upstairs to where a three-year-old girl was asleep at the time. When her elder sister rescued her from the burning dwelling the flames had almost crept to the bed in which she was lying.

MODERN WORKS ARE DISCUSSED

Prof. Pratt Gives Another Lecture of Series on English Literature.

SEVERAL WRITERS.

Another of the very interesting series of lectures given at the Y.W.C.A. this winter by Professor A. E. Pratt of Victoria University, Toronto, speaking on Modern English Literature, was held in the green room last evening, when the speaker considered briefly some of the work of Conrad, the poetry of A. E. Housman, the delicious nonsense verses of Walter Delamere and A. A. Milne, and gave several definitions of various terms applied to style in literature.

Defining the Romantic type of writing as having to do mainly with things of the heart, while the Classicists confined themselves to mental affairs and the Realists to materialistic matters, Professor Pratt alluded to the work of Spencer in "The Faerie Queen," to the "Romeo and Juliet," "The Midsummer Night's Dream" and "As You Like It" of Shakespeare, to Wordsworth and Keats and Shelley and Byron, to "Kubla Khan" and "Christabel," to Sir Walter Scott's "Lady of the Lake" and most of his novels, as examples of literature of the Romantic school, in which the dominant characteristic is the imagination and the appeal is made to the heart, where there is a sense of mystery and wonder, rather than of logic.

Matthew Arnold, said the speaker, regarded "classical" literature as being the best of literature of every age, giving a wide scope to the word, but the normal definition applies it to the great classical writers, to the epics of Homer, to Sophocles and Euripides, in France, to Moliere and Racine and Corneille and in England, to Jonathan Swift, Pope and Dryden, and the era of Johnson. It is the class of literature where the reason operates, rather than the imagination, where there is precision, proportion, clarity and balance, and the intellect is paramount. Pope and Dryden, in the 18th century English school, are referred to often as Neo ora Pseudo Classicists, because they imitated the work of Homer and Virgil and Horace. Just as the super Romantic type of writing is apparent in the "Endymion" of Keats, where the imagination runs wild, so the ultra classical type is demonstrated in Dryden's "Essay on Man," where "there is no more feeling than in a rock, and the reason is in perfect control."

The third classification is of the Realistic type, and is an objective description of nature and human life, without intellectual theorizing, where the author's individuality is completely submerged, and the sense of fact and realism is dominant at all times. Of this school, the poet Crabbe, in the 18th century, was an example, but the manner in which the style can be depraved is exhibited in the works of Emile Zola, for instance, who takes only the gross and seamy side of life, tracing the course of passion and ignoble instincts in studies where the influences of heredity and biology are treated of in gross fashion.

Turning to a consideration of the work of A. E. Housman, as an example of a philosophic realist, one who, while owning to no belief in the existence of an eternal life, yet holds to a strong conviction in a courageous outlook in the present, the speaker spoke of him as "the most economical writer of the day," who has built up a great popularity with a very small output of verse, his "Shropshire Lad" and another small volume marking his total contribution to date to the literature of modern times. Speaking of Housman as an artist of undisouted merit, who holds to the quatrain and tatrameter in his verse, quotations were made from "The Grenadier" and "An Epitaph to an Army of Mercenaries," of which translations have been made in almost every tongue.

In these verses, as in so much of the modern war poetry, Professor Pratt said that the old theory of war had been exploded. The former ennobling of conflict by speaking, as Macauley did, of those "who fell, sword in hand," or, as in "The Charge of the Light Brigade," "Was there a man dismayed?" although they knew "someone had blundered," of the portrayal of war as a matter of bugles blowing and colonel's riding to horse, has given way to a change in present times, when writers have shown it in all its horror, and have written of the fear and panic, as well as the exalted heroism, of the soldier.

As a direct contrast to the brave pessimism of Housman, a portion of "The Hound of Heaven" by Francis Thompson, was quoted. This sublime poem, delineating Christ as the "hound of heaven" following, "with insistent feet," the sinner, and refusing to leave him until the errant soul had surrendered to the force of Almighty Love, to repentance and renunciation of evil, is a wonderful example of religious mysticism, and its beautiful stanzas were interpreted, as usual with this sympathetic teacher, with touching force.

Some of the charming, whimsical drollery of the child verses of Walter Delamere, in "The Peacock Pie," and A. A. Milne, followed, in readings of bits of delicious fooleery, "Miss T," "Poor Henry," "The King's Breakfast," and "The Dormouse and the Doctor," the tale of the little dormouse who sighed for "delphiniums blue and geraniums red."

As a conclusion, Professor Pratt quoted briefly from the striking prose of Conrad, in a description of a storm at sea contained in "Typhoon."

An an addition to the programme of the two final lectures of this course, the speaker promised to give excerpts from his own work, which was spoken of by Miss Hamilton, presiding, as having attained to great prominence in Toronto and elsewhere.

A musical programme which preceded the lecture included two vocal solos by Miss Daisy Davidson, "Winds in the Trees" and "The Piper of Love," with accompaniment by Miss Gwen Donley, and a pianoforte solo, the Morris Dance by Edward German, from the incidental music to "King Henry Eighth," played by Miss Mary Harstone.

OSHAWA CALLS MASS MEETING

Mayor Holloway Scheduled To Speak at Gathering at Cobourg.

TO DISCUSS HYDRO.

OSHAWA, Feb. 5.—On the instruction of Mayor R. D. Preston, of Oshawa, City Clerk F. E. Hare yesterday mailed out to thirty-six municipalities a notification of a meeting to be held in Cobourg, at 1.30 p.m., on Thursday, February 17, when the Hydro increases and the reasons given therefore are to be discussed. The meeting is to be held in the town hall, and addresses are to be given by Mayor Halgate, of Bowmanville, Mayor Chalk, of Port Hope, Mayor Wilmott and Alderman Duff, of Belleville, Warden Elliott of Durham and Northumberland County, J. Owen Herity, of Belleville, secretary of Eastern Ontario Chamber of Commerce, Mayor Holloway, of Peterboro', Mayor Preston and Alderman Schell, of Oshawa.

The Hydro-Electric Power Commission is not being officially notified from Oshawa of the meeting, but it was said to be altogether likely that some one to represent them will be there.

COCKROACHES AND CANCER

In the absence of any scientifically established bacterial organism or factors other than those associated with chronic irritations as the cause of cancer, the views of all sorts of nondescript proponents of unusual ideas as to the basis for this disease continue to receive more ordinary attention in the public press, as well as in medical journals. The view of Arbuthnot Lane that white bread has something to do with the matter, of another European investigator that cockroaches were carriers of the disease, of an American investigator that the eating of fish was primarily responsible, have all had their day in the press and their moment in the limelight. Now comes one Dr. Charles T. Betts, a dentist of Toledo, Ohio, with a pamphlet of thirty-six pages, presumably sold for $1.00 by the Research Publishing Company of Toledo, Ohio. He urges, on the basis of some naive and totally immaterial experiments, and the fact that the use of aluminum cooking utensils and the incidence of cancer have regularly increased, that the latter is due to the former. His reasoning is a typical example of the manner of mishandling medical statistics by those who have not the slightest conception of chemistry, medicine or statistical analysis. First, it is not at all certain that there has been an alarming increase in the incidence of cancer. Secondly, it is reasonable to believe that the use of aluminum cooking utensils has increased because they were found to be desirable for cooking purposes. Thirdly, investigations made in Great Britain under the auspices of the Medical Research Council indicated that cooking, even of acid fruits and vegetables, for long periods of time in aluminum ware showed so little aluminum in the juices after cooking that it required the most delicate chemical tests to indicate its presence. Indeed, not only the fruits but the actual acids themselves were boiled in aluminum ware, without the giving off of more than slight traces of aluminum. It is difficult to understand why dentist Betts should be so especially interested in attacking the use of aluminum ware and why his $1.00 pamphlet should be sent in considerable numbers without charge to various libraries and other public institutions, and to dealers in hardware. Public education in matters of health is sometimes abused by those, who, through the nature of their professional training, should be the first to protect the public confidence by spreading information based only on scientific fact. The pamphlet of Betts is a pernicious attempt to promote a peculiar view of cancer without the slightest evidence to support its promotion.—Journal of the American Medical Ass'n., Vol. 87, No. 17, Oct. 23, 1926.

CITY LOSES $10,000 ON INCOMES AND NEEDS $11,000 FOR WORKS; COMMITTEES DISCUSS MATTERS

Increased Exemption Reduces City Assessment More Than Quarter Million.

WORK ESTIMATES.

Estimates Totalling $79,825 Tabled For Streets, Etc., For 1927.

Nearly $11,000 more needed for Board of Works and about $10,000 lost to the city because of the increased exemption in the income-tax assessment were two facts which faced the City Council at last night's meetings of the Finance Committee and the Board of Works. City Assessor Henry explained to the aldermen the loss occasioned by the promised change, which is to come into effect on January 1, 1927, while City Engineer Parsons submitted estimates for his department calling for the expenditure of $79,825.

The Finance Committee met first. A delegation from the Peterborough Hockey Club, headed by President Dr. E. H. Wood, appeared to ask for a donation of $500 to assist them in meeting a deficit which has been accumulating for some time. Dr. Wood explained that the club had had to meet the competition of other teams and to support the junior team, and that the money received from games was barely enough to carry the club during the playing season. R. H. Turner and C. S. Cummer also spoke, stressing the advertising value of the team and the business-like way in which the funds were handled.

The request was thoroughly discussed after the delegation had left, but final action was left until the estimates were struck. Ald. Greene said that the city was already spending money to develop hockey among the boys through its free rinks. The mayor suggested that $300 would be a suitable grant, and Ald. Phelan said that there would be that much advertising value derived. Ald. Denne suggested leaving the matter until the estimates were struck, as a higher tax-rate was in prospect.

Ald. Phelan said that a grant had been made in other years and he favored one this year. Ald. Ackerman said that as an alderman he was opposed, although as a private citizen he was an officer of the club. Ald. Greene said that if this were allowed others would think they had a right to grants. Ald. Fife said that if a grant were refused the city would lose what advertising value there was in the team, no matter what reasons were given for the refusal.

Aldermen Fife and Stocker moved that a grant of $300 be made. An amendment by Aldermen McIntyre and Greene that nothing should be done until the estimates were finally struck was carried.

The aldermen decided, on hearing Mr. Henry's explanation of the results to be expected from the change in the income-tax assessment, decided to take part in any delegation protesting against the changes. Mr. Henry said that there were changes needed in the act but those proposed would cause an injustice to the small householder. The ordinary wage earner in a city this size gets less than $1500 a year, and the non-householder would be exempt from taxes, putting an increased burden on the man earning the same wages and owning or renting a small house. The decrease in the assessment will be $278,365, or the value of one hundred houses averaging about $2700 each. This will make a difference of about $10,000 to be made up from property taxes.

The city's membership in the Union of Canadian Municipalities and the Ontario Municipal Association will be renewed. The subscription to the Municipal World will be renewed.

A number of minor matters were disposed of by the Board of Works before the estimates were considered.

Gears damaged at the sewage disposal plant when ice clogged up part of the works will be replaced at a cost of about $350. The damage was due to a certain extent to inexperience on the part of the operators.

Ald. Stocker opposed the granting of pasture rights in the sewage disposal grounds because the cattle would interfere with the houses to be erected for the operators. He said that the practice of the Utilities Commission of allowing the men to use the land for gardening should be followed. The matter was left to the chairman, Ald. Fife.

The matter of sanding streets was considered. All the aldermen had had complaints about places left unsanded. It was pointed out that there are 75 miles of sidewalks, with an area of 45 acres, and that the facilities of the city do not permit going all over this area within a short time after a thaw. Ald. Denne suggested that the people be asked to put ashes on the walks in front of their own homes.

The estimates went through with very little debate, although several of the aldermen figuratively sharpened their axes for the Finance Committee meeting when the estimates of all the committees will be finally considered.

The estimates, which total $79,825, with the engineer's explanatory notes, are as follows:

NARROW ESCAPE OF OSHAWA MAN

Train Hits Horse and Wrecks Buggy—Driver Unhurt.

AT LEVEL CROSSING.

OSHAWA, Feb. 5.—James Knox had a thrilling escape from death early yesterday afternoon when the C. N. R. 115, westbound passenger train, struck and instantly killed the horse hitched to a buggy in which he was riding while crossing the level crossing two and a half miles north of this city. The buggy was completely wrecked and Mr. Knox was thrown a distance of 25 feet, but escaped with only a few minor bruises.

Mr. Knox, who resides about a mile north of the old C. N. R. line at North Oshawa, was driving into the city with some milk and the horse had just reached the centre of the track when the crash occurred.

Mr. Knox was considerably shaken up, but did not lose consciousness, and was able to walk immediately after the accident. The near-tragedy occurred in exactly the same spot as the one a few years ago in which Mr. Gerrard nearly lost his life under similar conditions as yesterday's mishap.

SENATE PASSES LENROOT BILL

Opponents Say It Is To Keep Out Canadian Milk and Raise Prices.

AFFECTS CITIES.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—What its opponents call the most vicious single piece of legislation before Congress, the Lenroot-Taber Milk Bill, was passed by the Senate to-day, 51 to 27, and now goes to the White House for signature.

Senators Couzens, of Michigan, and Borah, of Idaho, were the only Republicans to vote against it, while six Democrats joined the Republicans in putting it through—Bruce, Dill, Glass, Kendrick, Steck and Wheeler.

Attacked as an invasion of State rights, as a device to increase milk and cream prices, and as imposing extreme penalties for innocent purchase of imported cream, the measure was defended stoutly by the farm bloc as a hygienic one to force importers of milk and cream to meet Government sanitary standards and tests. It is aimed particularly at Canada, and affects New York, Albany, Buffalo, Boston and other large cities.

One clause makes it "unlawful for any person in the United States to receive milk or cream imported into the United States unless the importation is in accordance with the provisions of this Act." A maximum penalty of $2,000 fine and a year in jail is imposed for the offence, which Senators Robinson (Democrat, Arkansas), and King (Democrat, Utah), said could be imposed under the wording of the Act, upon a housewife who unknowingly bought a bottle of milk coming from Canada, and not up to standards.

The Petes increased their lead over the Marlboros for second place to three points last night and made a clean sweep of the season's fixtures with North Toronto by beating Jimmy McFayden's team 5 goals to 2 at Brock St. rink.

It was a friendly affair with the best of good feeling in evidence between the two teams and while the Petes were always in the driver's seat and should have won by a much larger margin on the scoring opportunities they created for themselves there was a lot of pretty hockey dished out by both teams. With the checking not as close as usual there was plenty of good stick handling and fast attacks that kept the rival goalies busy and the crowd enjoyed the clean clever brand of stuff provided by the opposing crews.

The Petes had the edge on the visitors all the way. They broke faster and carried the puck much better than Jimmy McFayden's athletes and they were in a scoring position often enough to have run up a much larger score. This failure in front of the nets was the only weakness in the team's work and while it has always been a failing with the Petes they have rarely tossed away so many chances as they did last night particularly in the last period they beat North Toronto's defence a dozen times and only got one goal out of all these openings. However, the crowd saw their favourites play a lot of smart hockey and they were satisfied with the exhibition.

North Toronto, always behind, kept on trying every minute of the game and they uncovered some nice hockey. McAllister made a host of clever stops, many at point blank range and must be given credit for keeping the score down. Jack Cain did some effective checking on the defence and his rushes were as usual dangerous. Of the forwards Bowsfield and Heyd were consistently good but the player who took the eye of the crowd was young Charlie Conacher, a brother of the famous Lionel of the same ilk, a youngster who shows every sign of developing into a star. He carries the puck well, is a clean stick handler and packs a nice shot.

A feature of the game was the fine performance turned in by "Snap" Parker on the Petes defence. Rose was an absentee, owing to a lame back and Parker was called upon to fill the gap. He got a big hand from the crowd when he skated out and he responded by a return to his old time form, his poke check working as effectively as ever while he showed that he hasn't forgotten how to stickhandle by making many pretty rushes.

Joe Dwyer gave a sound careful game in the nets, stopping a lot of hard drives while McLeod's work going both ways was very effective Up in front the Petes' attacking division played smart hockey, breaking fast and working well together. Collins got two of his team's goals while Ranger, Bogardis and Kane each helped himself to one.

Harry Batstone refereed the game faultlessly. His task so far as rough play was concerned was easy for there was nothing of a mean nature and but two penalties were handed out, both for minor offences.

The Petes scored the only two goals in the first priod and they came close together as the end of the session was drawing near. Both goalkeepers had plenty of work to handle in the early stages of the game, the Petes working in close on half a dozen occasions only to throw away their chances while North Toronto snapped many a hard drive at Dwyer from outside the defence. Over 17 minutes had gone when the Petes finally scored. Ken Kane going up right wing and slipping the puck out to Collins who registered at close range.

Fifty seconds afterward it was 2 to 0 when Parker poke-checked the rubber away from a three-man Toronto attack and going down centre slipped the puck over to Bogardis who drove a beauty just inside the post that beat McAllister completely.

The Petes increased their lead to four in the second period before North Toronto registered. They missed plenty of opportunities before Parker broke up a rush and passed to Ranger who beat the North Toronto defence by great stickhandling and gave McAllister no chance to save. Ken Kane made it 4 to 0 when he went down the side and drilled a beauty past the North Toronto goalie. The visitors got that back in 30 seconds when Heyd took a pass close in and pulled Dwyyer out to score a pretty goal. It remained 4 to 1 until the end of the period.

Both teams scored a goal in the last period although the Petes should have had at least half a dozen. The were in on top of McAllister time after time before Collins finally bagged their last counter on a pass from Bogardis. Soon after Conacher took the puck away from Kane near the Petes' net and beat Dwer for the final goal of the game. In the last ten minutes the Petes' attackers beat the North Toronto defence repeatedly but they missed by inches or McAllister blocked their drives. North Toronto did some smart attacking on their own account but Dwyer beat them and there was no further scoring on either side.

MILL LOSE TO ELECTRIC TEAM

Hydro Used Their Strongest Line-up for the Season.

SCORE 15 TO 2.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 5—Thursday night's Town League game at Covert's Arena between the Hydro and Mill was won by the former by the lopsided score of 15 to 2.

The Electric boys had out their strongest line-up of the season and every one was going at top form. Cowell never went better and did more than his usual amount of back checking.

Johnston had things pretty much his own way on the right rail and divided the scoring honors with Cowell at seven apiece. The Mill had as much of the play in centre ice but the close checking of the Hydro had them tied up before they got in a scoring position, and their shots lacked the steam of the Electric boys. On harder ice the Mill gang would have given a better account of themselves. The feature of the game was excellent showing of young Lambert for the Mill. He was just about the most effective man on the outfit and caused the Hydro a lot of worry. Ayrhart played his usual steady game and was very effective. The Hydro payed particular attention to Jack Brown and his flashy end to end rushes were conspicuous by their absence. Stewart removed the bandage from his injured eye to take his place in the Mill net and it was no fault of the veteran goaler the score went to double figures. He stopped a host of hard shots and never had a chance on the ones that beat him.

Three times in the last period he left his net to beat the Hydro puck carrier and on all three occasions the rubber was deflected to another Hydro man to shoot it into an empty net, showing just an instance where the winning team is generally favored with all the luck, while at the Hydro end the Mill boys had the rubber all but over the line on several occasions.

The Midget game was just about the best the youngsters have played so far. They stuck to their positions pretty close and the style of play opened up showing flashes of real good hockey.

Under the present system the boys are learning more hockey than they would in two seasons of their old style of shinny and everybody for himself. The Tigers look the best balanced outfit among the Midgets. They have three good forwards in George Runions, Blute and Stocker. About the best defence man in the series is Wilks, and Reynolds is on a par with the other goalers. They are now leading the Midget series.

Inside Sporting Dope

By A Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

Looking at the hockey bill o' fair for next week, Mac, the home fires is going to be kinda lonesome. Outside of 2 senior battles, a 2nd round jr. clash and a intermediate duel between 2 of the neighboring villages, Havelock and Lindsay, they ain't a thing going on in the Brock st. icery. Mon. night'll start the week right when the Toronto Canoeists and the Petes, which battled 90 mins. to a tie last Mon., are going to start in where they left off, and try and nominate a winner. If the battle is only half as full of thrills as the Toronto affair, Brock st. rink ain't going to be no healthy place for birds with weak hearts or high blood pressure. If you're all O.K. in them respects book a seat early—the doins will be hotsy-totsy.

That overtime argument Mon. night, Mac, was caused by Mister Murray Rutherford, the ref. in charge of the proceedings. Mister Rutherford showed the cutest mustache and some of the worst judgment of the season, and the game should of been over in the ordinary time, with the Petes 1 marker to the good, if the Paddlers hadn't introduced a new way of taking the goalie out of the play by sitting on him while Mister Joe Wright lofted the washer into the net. Mister Rutherford thought the play was all right, and although he was outvoted 8 to 1 by the Petes, he had the last word. Anyway, it was a real game, and even the Arena ushers stayed till the last bell, and they can't be a higher compliment than that.

I was among them that travelled up to Lindsay Wed. with the Petes. There was something missing though, Mac. The old rink was there with the permanent waves in its gallery and the postage stamp ice surface, but the old excitement of a Peterboro-Lindsay tangle was gone. You know, Mister Sporting Editor, or perhaps you're too young to know how, when you go into 1 of them places where a few years ago it wasn't no crime for a white-aproned egg to hand you a mug of beer over the counter and throw your change in the splashes of suds on the bar top, how your foot sort of instinctively feels for the old rail that ain't there any more. Well, for about ½ the game I couldn't get over the old habit of looking round to locate the nearest exit in the case of a riot. I didn't need to worry—they was nothing stirring along them lines, and the boys had a sociable party, although this Mister Gamble what refereed wouldn't of been much of a bet if the gang had wanted to mix it. Most of the Petes' regulars was back in their street clothes before the game ended, but the Lindsay fans are satisfied they beat the senior champs, and I for 1 am willing to let them have all the glory.

The Petes jrs. will get into action on the second round next week. They hadn't a whale of a lotta trouble putting the Lakefield kids outa the running here Tues. night, although they made their job tougher than necessary by drawing 2 many penalties. 23 of both teams chased to the sidelines in 1 game shows the lads hasn't yet got the right slant on this hockey stuff. "Get your man" is a proper war cry for the mounted police, but young hockey players has got to learn that the team that pays strict attention to the rubber is going to be the winner in the long run. They ain't going to be much team-work when a side is short-handed more then ½ the time. A dumbell on the ice is worth 2 stars in the penalty box any time. The young Petes has some great material, and if they will try to stick on the ice, stick to their positions better and don't stick to the puck too long they will give all and sundry a argument. This line is for the kids' own good, and as Dad says when he takes his young hopeful out in the back-shed and massages him with a shingle. "This hurts me more'n it does you."

Well, Mac, in figgering out your programme for next week don't forget the Lindsay-Havelock clash here Wed. All of Havelock and ½ of Lindsay will be in town for the battle, and us neutrals oughta to get a whale of a lotta fun outa the supporters, if we don't outa the game. In fact, the only bird what ain't likely to enjoy himself is the referee. Both of these teams ain't light-handed in their checking—you know what I mean—and the bell-ringer is likely to earn his jack, which is more'n you can say about most of the white-sweatered brigade.

And now, as Peaches would say to Browning, "Ta-ta, Daddy. See you in court."

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

BRISTLING BATTLES of BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

by Jack McAuliffe

When I escaped a near murder at the hands of Jim Gibbons, gun-fighting brother of Austin Gibbons, by pointing out the fact that if he shot me his brother would lose a chance of making $30,000 fighting me. I got down to serious training. I knew Austin Gibbons was a good fighter.

We met Sept. 11, 1891 and when I walked into the ring I knew I was jobbed. They gave me a pair of gloves that seemed as big as bed pillows. I looked across the ring and saw Gibbons surrounded by his gang of fighters pulling on a tight light pair that I'll bet did not weigh four ounces.

The odds, which should have favored me, the champion, switched 2 to 1 and 3 to 1 against me.

Jerry Dunn was the referee.

When the fight started I couldn't get Gibbons to lead. We feinted back and forth and then I heard a police officer say to Dunn, "If we stop the fight will you call it a draw?"

I tried to get the answer but couldn't.

I knew all sorts of underhand things were going on but I was helpless. The house was worth $30,000 and I did not want the police to stop the show or I would lose my cut. I went after Gibbons and started to slaughter him. I cut him to ribbons and had his face a mess. I wanted to drop him without making him bleed because I knew the police would jump in the ring. He was tough and I could not sink him.

In the sixth round, after a flurry of gloves on my part, with Gibbons rolling dizzily along the ropes the police busted it up. When I went down to the Police Gazette to collect my purse and side bet, I was told by Richard Fox there was some questions about the winner and then there followed a lot of legal action and I was cheated out of every penny.

I later got even with Gibbons by masquerading my name. He signed to fight a "Joe Wolcott" at Coney Island. When he got there he found me in the ring. I kicked him around for 12 rounds and then knocked him out.

NOTE—In the next chapter McAuliffe tells how Fitzsimmons beat Dempsey in their memorable battle he witnessed.

UPPER CANADA DEFEAT GROVE

Fast Playing of Visitors Proves Too Much For Locals.

JUNIORS WIN.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 5.—Perfect combination and fast skating resulted in a 8-5 victory for Upper Canada College of Toronto over Grove School in an exhibition game at the Lakefield Arena last night. The College boys scored their 8 goals in the first period, with Musgrove scoring 5, Edwards 2, and Cherry 1. In the second the locals tightened their play, and Griffiths and Robertson scored, and with still a better form of hockey in the third, the Juniors sank three tallies by Griffiths, Hudson and Robertson. Musgrove for Upper Canada and Griffiths for the Grove were by far the outstanding players throughout the whole game, playing the best stick work and the cleanest hockey that has been seen around here in many a day.

The line-up:

John Sabatino acted as referee.

In the second game of the evening the Juniors defeated Bobcaygeon by the score of 6-3. Both teams were about evenly matched, with Lorne Wright and Gordon being outstanding players for the visitors, and honors evenly scattered throughout the Lakefield team. The locals had a lead of one in the penalty box, taking three counts against Bobcaygeon's two.

In the first period Sabatino sank two, followed by E. Wannamaker and Lawless for the Juniors, with Hill tallying once for the visitors.

Both teams resorted to a defensive play in the second, with J. Hill and Lorne Wright counting two for Bobcaygeon. Stabler and E. Wannamaker scored for the Juniors in the third.

The line-up:

Crawford Creer of Toronto was referee.

PADDLERS HERE MONDAY NIGHT IN SENIOR GAME

One of Best Battles of the Season Should Result.

MEANS A LOT.

And Besides Will Break the Deadlock From the Last Game.

One of the best hockey games of the season should result in the clash between Toronto Canoe Club and the Petes at Brock Street Rink on Monday night. The two teams played 30 minutes' overtime to a tie on Monday last, and the game was pronounced by Toronto fans as the most interesting battle of the year.

The Paddlers have rounded out into one of the best teams in the group, and they will provide the Petes with plenty of opposition. With Baker in the nets and Joe Wright and Smith on the defence, the Canoeists have a strong rearguard, with Smith rated as one of the best of the season's finds. The forward line has some smart attackers with Jack Bond, Goldsmith, Mills, Grant and Mollenhauer in action.

Reserved seats are on sale at McLeod's Drug Store, and judging by the applications that are being made there will be a big crowd out to see the rivals settle the argument that ended in a deadlock after ninety minutes of hard hockey.

TWEED WINS IN MARMORA

Beats Home Team 4-2 In Game Which Goes Overtime.

MARMORA, Feb. 5. (Special.)—Marmora, the league leaders, received another check at the hands of Tweed last night losing at home by 3 to 2, after ten minutes of overtime. The ice was in good shape and a splendid game was witnessed. Auger opened the scoring, beating Brown with a good shot from centre ice. Play in this period was very fast both teams carrying out strong rushes.

In the second period Marmora increased their lead after five minutes of play, Jack scoring with a long shot by which the puck rolled in on Brown's stick. Tweed soon reduced the homesters' lead, the agile Houston scoring on a rush. Tweed worked hard to equalize and Neal made many excellent saves. The period closed with Marmora still a goal ahead.

The third period opened at a fast pace and within two minutes of its start George Geraldi evened up the score. Both teams played strenuously to break the tie but were unable to score. The goalies proved sound against some severe testing. In the last five minutes of overtime Mac Geraldi got the winning goal for Tweed, scoring from close in. G. Geraldi made it sure by scoring another in the last second. Wood had hard lines in not equalizing in the last minute of the game. Tweed again showed the capability they have of playing the winning game at Marmora, coming from behind as on previous occasions to win out.

The weather conditions were ideal. The crowd was not so large as usual.

Marmora's next game will be at Stirling next Tuesday and being the only team thus far to have beaten Stirling another battle royal is in store. The line up:

Tweed: Goal, C Brown; rd G Geraldi; ld R Quinn; centre B Houston; rw F Geradi; lw M Geraldi; sub, J Minorgan.

Marmora, Goal C Neal; rd V Jack, ld M Auger; centre G McWilliams; rw C Brady; lw C Wood; sub, B Neal.

Goal umpires, Tweed, I. Ratli Marmora, W Linn.

Referee, Leo Barrett, Belleville.

SWIMMING CHANNEL.

Cincinnati Man Said To Be Trying To Make Catalina Swim.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 5 (Canadian Press).—Reports reaching here early to-day said Peter Meyer, 28-year-old Cincinnati distance swimmer, was attempting to swim the Catalina Channel. Meyer was said to have started from the isthmus on Santa Catalina Island at midnight.

Meyer was reported following the course set by George Young, when the Toronto youth crossed the passage last month in 15 hours and 45 minutes to win the Marathon swim, and $25,000.

Meyer has been a life guard at a Cincinnati summer resort. He never competed in professional swimming races but has taken part in endurance contests for individual side bets.

He is credited with having been in the lake at a Cincinnati park from 8 o'clock in the morning until three o'clock in the afternoon to win a bet.

BROCKVILLE WINS; WILL MEET PETES

Eastern Junior Team Wins Group—Plays Here on Thursday.

BROCKVILLE, Feb. 5.—In the second game of the series between the winners of sections "A" and "B" of the O.H.A. junior group No. 1, Brockville defeated Trenton 5 goals to 3 here last night and won the round 9 to 3. Play was clean and very fast, and not until the final period did Brockville have any advantage over the visitors, who played a clever and brilliant game.

In the final period Brockville struck their usual stride and outscored their opponents, who tired towards the end of the close and exciting struggle. Each team scored in the first frame and two in the second, entering the final period with three goals a side.

Levia and Garand scored two each, and Dexter netted one for Brockville, with Johnston scoring two and Davis one for Trenton. Both goalers gave splendid exhibitions and deserve credit for their brand of hockey.

Wheat Price Advances Light Offerings On Market

CHICAGO, Feb. 5 (Canadian Press)—Commission house buying that found offerings light gave an early upward swing to the wheat market today. All other factors except the likelihood of farm legislation at Washington were virtually ignored. Opening at one quarter cent off to one quarter cent up, wheat soon scored gains all around. Corn, oats and provisions were firmer with corn starting at 1-8 to 5-8 cents advance and later continuing to strengthen.

Rails Take Upward Swing Industrials Lose Ground

NEW YORK, Feb. 5.—(Canadian Press.)— Mixed price movements developed on to-day's stock market, with rails generally ending upward and the industrials losing ground. Non-dividend paying rails set the pace, several new high records being established in that group with six point jump in Gulf, Mobile nad Northern as one of the outstanding features. Merger talk continued to provide the basis for heavy accumulation of railroad shares although little definite information was forthcoming regarding prospective combinations. Wabash issues were again bought in large volume. The Wheeling and Lake Erie shares appeared to have quieted down on the announcement that special meeting of directors would be held next Monday to consider plans for the issuance of additional common stock. Selling of the industrials represented profit taking by traders who had bought stocks "for a turn" and presumably some distribution under cover of strength in the rails.

Selling pressure was particularly apparent against Baldwin, American Smelters, General Asphalt, Timken Roller Bearing and Woolworth, all of which sold down a point or two.

The closing was irregular. Total sales approximated 1,100,000 shares.

Distilleries Make Rally After Downward Movement

TORONTO, Feb. 5.—(Canadian Press.)—A rally near the close of business on the Toronto Stock Exchange carried Seagram and Gooderham and Worts up above yesterday's closing prices, after these issues had led the general downward movement of the list on the market to-day. Seagram, the dominating leader, finished with a net gain of a quarter point at 22 1-4, after sinking down to 20 1-2, while Gooderham and Worts recovered from 44 to close at 45 1-2, an eighth firmer. Hiram Walker was not so firm, finishing 3-8 lower at 37 1-8. Massey Harris was an unusually firm spot in the regular list, closing 2 1-2 higher at 70. British American Oil softened a point at 91 1-2 and Canada Cement lost 1 3-4 at 135 1-2. International Nickel easing 3-8 at 4 1-8.

Recessions Are Numerous On Dull Mining Exchange

TORONTO, Feb. 5 (Canadian Press)—Prices tended slightly lower in dull session of Standard Mining Exchange this morning. Minor recessions were numerous, and firm spots only occasional. Area held firm at 60 but Amulet lost three at 162 and Laval-Quebec eased point at 36 1-2, Nipissing eased three cents at 10.10 and Castle-Trethewy was two lower at 120. Barry Hollinger in active trading eased five at 77. Hollinger firmed eight cents at 25.33.

MORRIS ACKERMAN SEES BIG TOURIST FUTURE FOR CITY

Noted Fish and Game Authority Visits Peterborough on Trip.

NATURAL GATEWAY.

Stoney Lake End of Chain Needs More Hotel Accommodation.

That the coming season would see the biggest tourist year ever experienced in the history of the Province of Ontario was the assertion made to The Examiner to-day by Morris Ackerman, the noted American authority on fish and game. Canadian people, in his opinion, seem to be the only people who fail to realize it. Americans are talking Canada more and more every year as a place to spend their vacations, and from his experiences recently the number is rapidly increasing.

Peterborough, he said, is the natural gateway for this part of the country. Quoting figures of American money spent here during the tourist season, he said that the amount of such money spent in Peterborough had increased from $252,000 in 1925 to $307,000 in 1926.

Marmora, he said, had received $26,000 of American money during the 1925 season, and this amount was doubled last year.

Speaking of the Trent Waterway Development Association, Mr. Ackerman said that it was doing a magnificent work in the United States, and in his opinion was an organization that would be hard to excel. Due to its efforts, a number of prominent and wealthy Americans had been induced to make the trip to Canada for the first time.

The Kawartha Lakes are holding their own with any tourist resort in the Province but in his opinion the Stoney Lake end of the chain still is in need of a couple of new resort hotels if this summer's demand is to be met.

A tremendous fish and game country, he said, and right in line with Peterborough, is the country back of Bancroft which has not yet been touched. In fact, it presents possibilities for tourists that even the most optimistic could hardly underrate.

He said, one thing that ought to be done was to cut the maskinonge laws to a daily allowance of not over two and preferably one per day. The authorities should also prohibit trawling for the lunge with a motor boat. Ontario is the only place where this is permitted and the first thing the people will know is that the maskinonge will be a fish of the past and likely become extinct.

Mr. Ackerman was the originator of the Cleveland Canada day and and calls himself a "missionary of Canada." He is the publisher of "Ackerman's Sportsman's Guide" a publication that devotes about 70 per cent of its space to Canada. He was a special fish and game writer with the Cleevland News for 14 years and for many years has written syndicated fishing articles for large newspaper corporations. As he said himself "I don't know how much Ontario publicity I have written but I wouldn't mind betting that it runs into a mile or more."

At present he is in the neighborhood viewing resorts and interviewing publicity agents in anticipation of the huge season that is ahead.

STUDEBAKER TO ANNOUNCE NEW TYPE CAR SOON

Completeness of Equipment and Its Riding Qualities Will Surprise Experienced Motorists.

THE ERSKINE SIX.

Peterboro will have an opportunity to see an entirely new type Studebaker car soon according to Reid & Sons, Studebaker distributors.

This evolutionary type six-cylinder car is Studebaker's way of celebrating its seventy-fifth anniversary. This entirely new 2 1-3 litre model is called the "Erskine Six" in honor of A. R. Erskine, President of the Studebaker Corporation.

For an American built car to go into a European show and despite anti-American feeling, winning outstanding recognition is in itself an unusual achievement. For such a car to become the sensation of every principal foreign motor car exhibition is an event so unusual that even foreign cities were compelled to acknowledge it. Such has been the record of the Erskine Six since its debut at the Salon de L'automobile in Paris last October.

This smartly designed car and soundly engineered little aristocrat commanded the admiration of fashionable Europeans because of its originality of line, its air of arresting chic. It looks like an exclusive custom body job and has a right to look that way, for one of the greatest custom designers in the motor world created it—Dietrich.

Dietrich has combined the irresistible modishness that marks the expensive custom car as it rolls down the street with the roominess and luxury that marks the truly fine car we Canadians have come to insist upon. In its appointments, in the completeness of its equipment and in its comfortable riding qualities, the new Erskine Six will surprise experienced motorists, declares Reid & Sons, 326 Aylmer street. TWIN CITY TEAM SWAMPS PADDLERS

Parkdale Beaten at Kitchener By Record Score of 15-0.

KITCHENER, Feb. 5.—Piling up the greatest score here in years the Twin City Greenshirts last night defeated the Parkdale Senior O.H.A. team, 15 to 0. It was the eighth win in nine starts for the homesters, while it was the ninth successive loss for the Toronto club. The Greenshirts' victory, coupled with the Preston win at Galt, puts the Kitchener and Waterloo team definitely in the group play-off.

A more unselfish game of offensive hockey has never been seen in Kitchener. It was a case of pass the puck at all times and there were very few shots attempted from outside the blue line. The Greenshirts simply went in to score from the inside, and they accomplished their aim admirably. Of the fifteen goals tallied, fourteen were of the combination variety, Seagram getting the only individual counter. He wanted to pass it, but seeing no one with him let drive by himself. The count by periods was 2 to 0, 9 to 0, and 15 to 0.

UNITED STATES ASKS SHANGHAI INTERNATIONAL SETTLEMENT BE EXCLUDED FROM HOSTILITY ZONE

Makes Public Proposals Transmitted to Military Heads of Factions

SAFEGUARD HOMES

Resented in Order That Foreigners May Receive Adequate Protection

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7 (Canadian Press).—Secretary Kellogg made public last night the text of his direct proposals he has transmitted to the military heads of the two Chinese factions for exclusion of the Shanghai international settlement from the zone of hostilities in China's civil war.

The proposal is presented in order "that American citizens and other foreigners may receive adequate protection" as an immediate necessity, but contemplates also "friendly and orderly negotiations properly instituted and conducted regarding the future status of the settlement" to which the Washington Government expresses willingness to become a party.

In announcing the plan to prevent anti-foreign disorders at Shanghai, the State Department said United States Minister John Van A. MacMurray at Peking had presented the communication last Friday to Marshal Chang Tso-Lin, Manchurian war lord and dictator of the alliance of northern military governors in China which dominates the Peking Government.

At the same time it was transmitted to the United States Consul-General at Hankow for presentation direct to General Chiang Kai-Shek, military dictator of the southern or Cantonese Government and whose troops are driving northward through Chekiang province for the capture of Shanghai, opposed by the forces of General Sun Chuan-Fang, governor of the Shanghai provinces and allied with Marshal Chang Tso-Lin. The Consul-General at Shanghai has been instructed to take the matter up direct with General Sun.

Secretary Kellogg's proposal as handed to the three war lords and which leaves to future negotiations all detailed questions of arranging for security of the international settlement in the event it is accepted, is as follows:

"The fate of the American interests in the international settlements during the course of the internecine warfare now unhappily in progress in China is the occasion of great anxiety to the American Government. As the result of the efforts of two generations of foreigners and Chinese this area has acquired a foremost position among the great ports of the world.

"There are now living in the settlement nearly four thousand Americans and probably thirty thousand foreigners altogether, who have made this settlement their homes. The arrangements for this settlement is of long standing and made with the local authorities of China and recognized by the National Government.

"Huge sums have been invested by Chinese citizens and the citizens of foreign nations in municipal and harbor improvements in building and in all the paraphernalia of the international trade. The settlement is the vital centre of commerce and ramifies through China and extends throughout the world. To a supreme degree the interests of the Chinese people and of the people of foreign nations requires that here order shall prevail. It is the port through which passes forty per cent. of the trade in China upon which millions of Chinese depend for their livelihood.

"From the earliest days the interests of all nations in the international settlement have prospered in times of peace and have suffered when there has been strife in the region surrounding Shanghai or in the country at large. In order at least to minimize as much as possible injury to the persons and property of foreigners and Chinese living at this port it has been the uniform policy of the foreign residents of the international settlement and of their governments to keep the settlement aloof from factional disturbances and as far as this could be accomplished rigorously to prevent it from being utilized by any faction.

"The co-operation of the authorities in control of Kiangsu Province in carrying out this policy has been asked and received and it is has been remarkably successful.

"In recalling these facts to the Chinese military commanders, the American Government is confident that they will lend their sincere support to the proposal now made—that the international settlement at Shanghai be excluded from the area of armed conflict so that American

A Mile Up in the Air Singer Is Heard Below

NEW YORK, February 7. — An audience that stood up and an artist that sat down on Saturday participated in the first concert given by a singer from a moving airplane nearly a mile above the listeners.

The singer, John Charles Thomas, concert baritone, was seated in a cabined plane, 4000 feet above Columbus Circle, and singing into a newly perfected amplifier.

Operatic arias, listeners testified, could clearly be heard above the din of the Fifty-ninth and Broadway streets traffic.

SORROW BREAKS ORIENTAL CALM

Japan Mourns Loss of Emperor Yoshihito—Funeral at Night

SHORT RULE

TOKYO, Feb. 7 (Canadian Press) — Yoshihito, 123rd Emperor of Japan, to-night was accorded the most pretentious funeral in the history of the Orient. Approximately one million bowed, damp-eyed subjects viewing the georgeous cortege which marked the passing of the personage regarded as the lineal descendant of the mythical Sun Goddess.

Although the late ruler actually was the real Emperor for only a brief time, owing to an illness which afflicted him from the time of his youth, the Japanese revered him as a deity, his death causing real nation-wide mourning which foreigners seldom understand. Consequently, to-night's procession towards the tomb excited unusual emotion among the usually stoical people. As the magnificent catafalque slowly wended its way over the four-mile route from the Imperial Palace to Shinjuku Gardens, half suppressed sobs of men, women and children were heard. All Imperial funerals are held in the night time, because the Imperial spirit must go from darkness into darkness.

Crush Injures 100.

One person was killed and more than 100 injured in the pressure by the crowd of one million which lined Tokyo's streets to-night to witness the funeral procession of Emperor Yoshihito.

Twenty persons were injured when crowded into a ditch. Many other casualties were believed to have been suffered at other parts of the city, but details were not immediately available in the confusion.

DIRGE OF THE WHEELS

Pilgrims from every corner of the Land of the Rising Sun gathered in Tokio and it was estimated 1,500,000 lined the route of the procession.

The ancient Shinto ceremonies were strangely blended with modernity, and microphones along the line of march enabled millions unable to be present to join in the national mourning. Even the creaking wheels of the great funeral cart were caught on the radio. The creaking of the wheels was the symbol of the nation's sorrow. Caught up by the radio the strange lament in rythmic seven note cadence, was scattered through the air to the farthest part of the Island empire, heard for first time by others than the crowds bowed along the line of the procession.

The dirge of the wheels, ancient custom is made by a mechanical arrangement of the wooden hub and axle, which emit the sounds in regular order from the time the procession starts.

Horses Collide At Street Corner, Imitating Automobiles; Runaway Causes Accident At Aylmer and Brock Streets

Emulating the example of the modern vehicle, the automobile, two horses, one a runaway and the other the property of Edwards' Meat Market, collided at the corner of Brock and Aylmer streets on Saturday night.

Edwards' horse, driven by a boy, was proceeding east on Brock street and was crossing the intersection when the runaway came galloping south on Aylmer. The runaway jumped at the other horse, landing between the horse and the sleigh, both horses falling on the ground with the driver of the first horse underneath.

Flying hoofs and the struggling of the horses made the rescue of the driver a somewhat precarious occupation, but he was finally retrieved from his position by a couple of eye-witnesses.

Greatly excited, but apparently not injured, the boy was advised to go to the doctor, but refused saying "I have to get a bunch of parcels out."

Getting the horses disentangled took some time as they were stepping lively. One horse was held by a spectator wrapping the reins around a telegraph pole, leaving the horse to pull against the pole. The other horse started off in the direction of the blacksmith's shop with another spectator hanging to its head, but was finally quieted.

Both sleighs were badly smashed as a result of the mix-up.

PRINCE TO COME HERE IN AUGUST

He and Premier Baldwin To Be Present at Peace Bridge Opening.

NOT COMING JULY 1.

OTTAWA, Feb. 7 (Canadian Press).—Rumors that the Prince of Wales and Premier Stanley Baldwin would attend Dominion Day celebrations in Canada have been denied both from London and Ottawa. Misleading despatches sent out some time ago apparently gave rise in some quarters to the idea that they planned to be here before July 1. This was never officially understood in Ottawa, it is stated, and the expectation now is that the two distinguished visitors will reach here early in August.

One of the important functions they will attend is the formal opening of the International Bridge across the Niagara River from Fort Erie to Buffalo, the scene of historic fights in early days. The present understanding that that this ceremony will take place early in September and that President Coolidge may also attend.

PASTOR CALLED TO PARK STREET

Rev. J. L. Harton To Be Asked To Accept Pastorate.

REV. DR. ROSE TO LEAVE CITY

Announces His Resignation From Murray Street Pastorate.

GOES TO KENTVILLE.

The Rev. Dr. C. W. Rose, pastor of Murray Street Baptist Church, announced his retirement from that pulpit at the conclusion of the morning service yesterday. His resignation is to take effect on March 16.

On the motion of Deacons Dr. W. D. Scott and A. J. Madill, it was decided that the resignation of Dr. Rose would be dealt with at a meeting to be held on Wednesday night.

Early in January, Dr. Rose received a unanimous invitation to the pastorate of the Kentville Baptist Church, located in the land of Evangeline, Nova Scotia, within seven miles of Acadia University. The opportunity for service at this important centre is said by competent judges to be one of the best, at the present time, in the whole province.

In announcing his resignation, Dr. Rose said:

"For nearly a year I have been faithfully trying to decide whether I should take a rest of six months, or adjust myself to a lighter load, with the hope of regaining full strength while in service. Those of you who have known what the past year has brought to us in the way of sickness and accidents will appreciate the need I feel for release. My attachment, however, to this church, and interest in our denominational work as a whole, have been such as to make a decision to drop both exceedingly difficult. According to my best judgment, the time has come when I should resign from the pastorate of this church, and this I now do, to take effect March 16th.

"I am grateful to all who have shared our aims and efforts to be builders of the Kingdom of God. Whatever the future may have in store for us in the way of fellowship in the furtherance of the Gospel, I never expect to be associated with officers and committees more devoted or efficient, a choir more competent or obliging, friends more congenial, or members as a whole more responsive to leadership. It has been a distinct honor to be your pastor. In presenting my resignation to-day, I do so with the shepherd's heart for you all. That you may now be guided in your efforts to secure another minister and that you will give to him wholehearted support is my deepest desire. It would be a source of satisfaction to me if you could soon reach a decision in regard to my successor so that there might not be any interruption of pastoral service.

"With the deepest thanks for your support in new undertakings as well as the old and for your generous provision for our comfort and every consideration of yours during the years, I most sincerely thank you."

FRANCE IS NOT SATISFIED WITH STANDING ARMY

Leaders Want Force as Strong As That of Neighbours.

RHINELAND SAFE

Fear They Will Have Force Much Inferior to That of 1914

PARIS, Feb. 7.—France is remaking its army and it is trying to figure out how it can have just as effective an army with recruits serving one year or less as it used to have when they served two or three years. The French general staff and the military committees of the Chamber and the Senate, in view of the military strength of their neighbors, are not very satisfied with their own.

They fear they will have an army much inferior to the French army of 1914. True, they no longer have the German Imperial military machine at their frontier and the neutrality of the Rhine has been solemnly established at Locarno, but they would like to have an army which they would consider at least equal to the existing Germany army as established by the Treaty of Versailles, and they are not sure they will.

The irony of fate has placed the French general staff in a singular predicament. It was largely responsible for the present German army. Wishing to break the old German military machine, it had much to do with the articles in the Treaty of Versailles which abolished compulsory military service in Germany, and created a professional army of 100,000 men.

But the temper of Europe has changed since 1919; public opinion has cut compulsory military service to a minimum, the people of France being willing to grant only grudgingly the year of 20 to 21 of its youths.

Italy's Force Superior

Looking over the other frontier, the General Staff sees that Mussolini has also created an armed force which in actual numbers and organization is now and will continue to be superior to the French Metropolitan army. "Metropolitan" being used for the army recruited in France and serving in Europe. It realizes that if it were not for the colonial troops France would today be outmatched by both the Germans and the Italians, and the two of them together could, if they were so minded, or so allied by a military convention, leave France helpless and isolated on some possible battlefield of Europe.

It being the business of military men to be ready for war, regardless of how many peace accords have been signed and ratified, the French General Staff is now bringing before Parliament its arguments for the organization of the army to suit its, not Parliament's, ideas.

The French military forces consist of a standing army of 106,000, an officers' corps of 29,800, 90,000 native North African troops, 85,000 native colonial troops, and a constantly changing body of French recruits numbering from 230,000 to 240,000. The best part of this agglomeration is the officers' corps. The French tactical training is the best in the world. If it had not been for the severe training in army tactics which its field officers possessed and the strategical tradition which was the heritage of every general in the general staff, France could never have won the battle of the Marne.

BALDWIN FACES TIME OF CRISIS

Break With Russia Has Found British Cabinet Divided

NERVOUSNESS FELT

LONDON, Feb. 7—The most critical period in the line of the present government will begin next Tuesday when parliament reassembles. It took the cabinet five hours to review the subjects which will be embodied in the speech from the throne and there is palpable nervousness in government quarters, where it is feared that the extreme element in the Conservative party will impair the unity behind the government.

There is the widest divergence of opinion on the question of breaking off relations with soviet Russia.

WORK POSTPONED.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 7 (Canadian Press).—City officials today were hurriedly putting in order the local water works after the temporary pumping and filtration plant had failed and caused widespread inconvenience.

It had been planned to use the temporary plant for ten days while the main one was overhauled. Residents were on a water ration of ten per cent until the plant was abandoned and all water had to be boiled. Downtown restaurants lacked dish water.

The repair work will be postponed until a temporary water works of sufficient size is installed. The erection of such a plant will cost approximately $500,000.

Capt. Campbell Sets Two World Racing Records; Covers Kilometer in Wales in 12.791 Second

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Driving a Blue Bird car at a speed of 174 miles an hour Saturday on Pendine Sands, in Carmarthenshire, Wales, Captain Malcolm Campbell broke the world's automobile record for a mile from a flying start. At the same time he broke the world's kilometer record, covering the distance in 12.791 seconds, which equals 174,883 miles an hour.

Until Saturday the record had been held by Parry Thomas, who achieved a speed of 170.624 miles an hour.

Campbell's Blue Bird combination parts were made by different car manufacturers. It had a 500-horsepower engine, capable of driving a huge bombing plane at an air speed of 232 miles an hour. The racer cost more than $40,000.

Captain Campbell was the first motorist to reach a speed of 150 miles an hour.

Another record was broken when Captain Hinchcliffe of the Imperial Airways flew a plane ninety miles from Cherbourg to London in seventy-six minutes, despite a fog.

HYDRO ELECTRIC POWER COMMISSION EXPLAINS BASIS OF GENERAL INCREASE

Acting Chairman Gordon Matthews Tells Examiner Local Commission Will Seek Audience With Hydro Officials To Ask Reconsideration—Examples of Effect of Change.

Peterborough householders and store keepers will pay about ten per cent more for lighting their premises after this date, and manufacturers will find their power costs increased fifteen to twenty per cent according to an announcement made by the Utilities Commission today. The increase in prices comes into effect with the first billing in March.

This change follows a conference on Saturday in which B. Mulholland, assistant engineer of the Hydro Electric Power Commission, officially notified the local Commission of the increases now general in the Central Ontario district. Gordon S. Matthews, acting chairman of the Utilities Commission, told The Examiner today that the commission is endeavouring to obtain an appointment with Hydro officials at Toronto, with a view to obtaining a further consideration of the rates.

Official Statement

The following is the official statement of the H.E.P.C. transmitted to the Peterborough Utilities Commission:

"I wish to explain that the Central Ontario System has now been under the control of the Commission for a period of ten years, during which time the Commission has paid interest at the rate of 4 per cent on the ten year bonds issued in 1916 as payment for the property purchased. In the refinancing of the system, the rate of interest on this original capital is estimated to be approximately 5%. In addition, the total capital of the system will bear sinking fund charges so as to retire the investment at the maturity of the Provincial bonds involved, making an added charge of at least 1% on all capital. In the past, no charges for sinking funds have been made on the Central Ontario System. The increased charges due to additional interest and sinking fund will amount to approximately $200,000 per annum for the entire Central Ontario System.

"An adjustment in the cost of power to the Municipality is, therefore, required to cover these additional charges.

"A change in the rate structure for lighting services has been made so that the form of rate will com-

'Obey' Out Of Marriage 'Endow' Also In Discard

LONDON, Feb. 7. — Canadian Press. — The elimination of the word 'obey' from the Church of England marriage service is one of the changes suggested by the House of Bishops, which has long been studying a revision of the Episcopalian Book of Common Prayer.

The Bishops' proposals made public to-day also provide for the elimination of the word 'endow' from the man's side of the service, substituting 'and all my worldly goods I with thee share.'

Colossal Sarcophagus Discovered in Egypt Believed to Contain Mummy of Sacred Bull

CAIRO, Feb. 7.—News is received here from a trustworthy source that Robert Mond and W. M. Emery, who are working here under the auspices of the Institute of Archaeology of Liverpool University, made a discovery at Arment, ancient Hermonthis, near Luxor, which promises to be of much archaeological importance.

They found a long-vaulted mud-red brick corridor, north of which they uncovered an enormous sandstone sarcophagus, eleven feet long, eight feet wide, and ten feet deep, with a lid two feet thick. The sarcophagus resembles those Professor Mariette found at Sakkara and it is believed that this is the ruins of a serapeum of a sacred bull, which in Graecoroman times was the chief glory of Arment.

The sarcophagus has been plundered in some period and owing to the debris it is still impossible to ascertain its contents. It is hoped to find a mummified bull inside, or in the other sarcophagi, the existence of which are indicated.

REBELS SEEKING NEGOTIATIONS FOR SURRENDER

Insurgents at Oporto Sending Emissaries to Arrange for Peace

POSTPONE ATTACK

War Minister Declares Unconditional Surrender On Part All Rebels

LISBON, Feb. 7 (Canadian Press)—The insurgents at Oporto are sending emissaries to negotiate their surrender.

This announcement was made yesterday by the minister of war, who is in the troubled region directing the loyal forces. In the view of this action the minister says he has postponed the intended bombardment of the rebel position. He will impose unconditional surrender, he declares.

The war minister reports that after preparations were made to dislodge insurgents at Oporto he gave them until noon yesterday to surrender, failing in which he threatened to bombard the city. He gave them time in order to avoid damaging buildings and hospitals which were full of wounded.

On receiving this ultimatum the insurgents sent emissaries to arrange for their surrender.

The commander of the gunboat Dengo, which revolted Saturday and incited the garrison at Tavira to revolt, has abandoned his command. He sent a message to the minister of marine assuming all responsibility for the steps taken. The remaining officers and crew surrendered.

Heavy fogs in and around Oporto render reconnoitering of positions difficult. Government aeroplanes sent out for this purpose were attacked by the insurgent guns and one of them had a wing damaged.

The Uruguayan Consul at Oporto requested the Government to allow an armistice, but this was refused. State railway employees are on strike, and the insurgents planned to organize a train aided by the strikers in order to escape from the city, advices received here assert, but the plan was frustrated.

President Carmona, who is also War Minister, reports that despite the strike, his forces are being continually joined by fresh troops from all parts of the country. This would seem to render the insurgents delay in surrendering incomprehensible. Word has reached Lisbon that the Minister of Instruction, who was arrested along with the Minister of Commerce by the insurgents, is now in a place of safety.

Red Cross units and other services have done excellent work in rescuing the wounded under heavy fire. Ammunition and provisions are being forwarded to the Government troops. Food, especially bread and meat, is scarce in the besieged city.

OLD MASTERS

Tell me not, Sweet, I am unkind
That, from the nunnery
Of thy chaste breast and quiet mind,
To war and arms I fly.

True, a new mistress now I chase,
The first foe in the field;
And with a stronger faith embrace
A sword, a horse, a shield.

Yet this inconstancy is such
As you, too, shall adore;
I could not love thee, Dear, so much,
Loved I not honor more.

Gold-Digging Wives Blamed for Divorces

WASHINGTON, Feb. 7.—Justice James F. Smith of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, speaking from the bench, puts it this way:

"It seems to me that this business of divorce is to a large degree the business of gold diggers. Wives who are able to support themselves, but will not do so, those who come here solely for temporary or permanent alimony are going to be disappointed.

"As far as I have it in my power, I am going to discourage the gold digging and I intend to remove temptation from the paths of those who are doing the digging."

"Having said this, which he took under advisement the week's quota of alimony pleas, many in number and large in amount, and retired to chambers to consider the cases.

SHAKE-UP LIKELY IN BRITISH CABINET

Rumored As Members Gather for Opening of Parliament To-morrow

LONDON, Feb. 7 (Canadian Press).—A shake-up in the Cabinet is the chief political gossip in London as Members of Parliament gather for the forthcoming session beginning February 8. There have been no important changes among Premier Baldwin's ministers since his party swept the country. Prospective changes if they occur are likely to be among holders of comparatively minor portfolios, and not in such posts as the Foreign Office, occupied by Sir Austen Chamberlain.

Premier Baldwin, Ramsay MacDonald, and David Lloyd George return to Westminster as Conservative, Labor and Liberal leaders, respectively; Baldwin holds undisputed control in Conservative ranks.

Ramsay MacDonald welded the divergent sections of the Labor party into a political machine by strong discipline and an iron hand backed up by great intelligence and ability. Extremeists and Radicals of the Labor party are said to be restive under his leadership because he does not further Socialism more militantly.

David Lloyd George goes back to the House of Commons the full-fledged leader of the National Liberal political machine, such as it is. Constant losses both to the Conservative and to the Labor party have reduced its numbers to a handful of members who are almost lost among the two big parties in the Commons. The Liberal squabble over party funds and party control ended with victory with the Welsh experimenter; Asquithian loyalists continue to refuse to bow to Lloyd George and have organized a Liberal Council under the leadership of Lord Grey of Fallodon.

Tuesday's ceremony of the State opening of Parliament at noon will include the unveiling of a marble statue to Joseph Chamberlain, father of the present Foreign Minister, in the Members' lobby of the House of Commons. The Earl of Balfour will officiate.

The suggestion has been made that a statue of the late Premier Bonar Law should also be put in the same lobby, but it is now an accepted rule that a memorial is not placed within the Palace of Westminster until ten years after the death of the statesman to be honored.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

A PREACHER AND A SALESMAN

He wasn't such a preacher,
As oratory goes,
His Greek, I guess, was not so good,
His Latin, I suppose.
And yet he kept on preaching,
Loved by the flock he led,
Because it always seemed, somehow,
He meant the things he said.

Another was a salesman,
As good as you will see,
Although he didn't know so much
About psychology.
And yet he got the business,
When trade was rather dead,
Because it always seemed, somehow,
He meant the things he said.

A preacher and a salesman,
And yet they got along,
One fighting competition and
The other fighting wrong.
And really here's the reason
These fellows got ahead:
Because they didn't only seem
To mean the things they said.

PEACE SETTLES CHINA DISTRICT

New Year Celebrations Pass Without Disturbances in Chinese Centres.

SITUATION EASIER

LONDON, Feb. 7 (Canadian Press)—Both Hankow and Shanghai report a more hopeful situation due to the fact that the New Year celebrations passed without disturbances of any kind. The offensive anti-British posters have been removed from the walls of the Hankow concession. There is no sign, however, that there has been any resumption of the negotiations at either Hankow or Peking.

The centre of interest here is the attempt of the Washington government to have a neutral zone established at Shanghai. Although making much of this news, the London papers avoid comment to any extent in the present stage; they are probably waiting to see if the attempt is successful.

The British correspondents at Washington are speculating on what will be the next move, in the event of Peking and Hankow ignoring the United States suggestion—whether the United States would then line up with Britain and Italy.

According to Rome advices Premier Mussolini's note to the British government indicates that Italy is ready to join with Britain in the equipment of a force should the situation at Shanghai become critical.

Premier Baldwin and the other ministers are away on their customary week end jaunt and the government offices are closed; so official views are not to be had, but it may be supposed that the ministers would welcome the success of the United States move with the greatest relief, as enabling negotiations to continue.

UNITED STATES ASKS, ETC.

citizens and other foreigners may receive adequate protection.

"The American Government will be ready for its part to be party to friendly and orderly negotiations properly instituted and conducted regarding the future status of the settlement."

The communication bears out the forecast that only the actual international settlement of Shanghai is involved and leaves the question of how the security of the settlement is to be guaranteed as well as that of future status, to negotiations with the Chinese military chiefs should they accept the plan.

While the proposal was made independently of any other foreign powers interested, it is known to have been communicated in advance as a matter of information to the Ambassadors in Washington of the other powers chiefly concerned. Whether those governments also are ready to enter "future status" negotiations is not known, but that London, Tokio and Paris are watching with intent interest for signs from the Chinese leaders as to the extent of their willingness to prevent a clash with foreign naval contingents assembled at or near Shanghai to protect foreign nationals by force of arms if necessary, can be taken for granted.

In view of these circumstances, Secretary Kellogg evidently is of the opinion that a proposal for an agreement among the rival Chinese war lords for exemption of the international settlement from the civil war zone, might appropriately be made by the United States without any suspicion as to the motives that prompted it operating to prevent its acceptance.

Hobo King Abdicates For a Life of Ease

CINCINNATI, Feb. 7.—Tired and road-weary, Jeff Davis, a venerable "King of the Hoboes," has left his itinerant career for a life of ease at his home established here many years ago.

Davis has deserted the open road to live with his wife whom he married 26 years ago. The abdicating "king of vagabondia" claims to leave behind him 800,000 dusty miles which he covered "riding the rods" and walking.

He says that he has crossed the United States 92 times, and declares his travels equal five and one half times around the world. Age and a desire for companionship brought him home, he said.

AVIATION AIDS SURVEYORS IN MAPPING CANADA

Has Been Applied To Many Other Useful Purposes Here.

WIDE DEVELOPMENT.

Other Countries Have Confined Work To Transport and War Uses.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 7.—(Canadian Press).—Aerial surveys hold the key to the development of Canada's natural resources and Canada itself is developing an air force of which it has every reason to be proud. These facts were brought out at a joint address at the annual convention of Dominion Land Surveyors here by A. M. Narraway, Chief Aerial Surveys Engineer, Department of the Interior, and J. A. Wilson, Secretary of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

Mr. Narraway pointed out that the rapid strides made by Canadians in aerial photography had placed them to the forefront among the nations of the world in this science. "Canada celebrated last year her 5th year in aerial surveys by establishing a new world's record in mapping from the air 56,000 square miles of undeveloped, unsurveyed and mostly unexplored territory, yet a territory rich in natural resources—a record in size, a record in utility—all by methods originated and developed by Canadians. This record, coupled with the brilliant achievements of the air men, and a total absence of any fatalities, represents Canada's contribution toward the world's advance in aviation."

"No longer need the maps of Canada be characterized by enormous blank spaces suggesting a wilderness," declared Mr. Narraway. "Aerial photography reveals the minutest detail of these spaces and disclose thousands of beautiful lakes and waterways, promising stands of timber, interesting areas for mineral development and almost unlimited power resources."

In practically every country in the world, except Canada, the line of after-war development of commercial aviation was the establishment of air services for the carriage of passengers, mails and express, J. A. Wilson, Secretary of the Royal Air Force, pointed out. In Canada, aviation has been developed to provide rapid transportation in the wilderness and for fire patrol work. "It is not too much to say," Mr. Wilson declared, "that the development of the north has been hastened a generation by the introduction of flying.

"In Canada today development in the air is on a wider basis than in any other country in the world. One hundred and seventy million acres are under fire patrol daily from the air. Aerial methods of survey have been developed in Canada which for speed and efficiency are unequalled. The geologist, mining prospector and explorer use air craft as a normal method of transportation throughout the north country.

"These services are on a self-sustaining basis, and in view of development in other countries Canada cannot afford to neglect the field of air routes, but just as her railway, steamship, canal, telegraph and radio services are second to none in the world, so she must face the development of express transport by air. No country offers greater scope for a centre of practicable developments of aviation, not only on the lines already well established in the Dominion, but also in regular air transportation services in which other countries today far excell Canada. Aviation in Canada has succeeded because it has served useful and practicable ends. This should be the endeavor in future, and any development undertaken should always maintain this end in view."

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 7 (Canadian Press) — Three bandits were killed and ten were wounded when 50 outlaws attacked the village of San Gabriel in the state of Jalisco. The bandits were routed by police and citizens who rallied to the defence of the town.

Nine rebels have been killed in engagements with the federals near Huejuquilla, state of Durango.

TELLS WHY FORD REFUSED BILLION

"Are Having Too Much Fun" States Edsel Ford.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7 (Canadian Press)—How Edsel Ford refused an offer of one billion dollars for the Ford Motor company, because he and his father, Henry Ford, "were having too much fun," was revealed here on Saturday.

Stuart W. Webb, president of the Eastern Manufacturing company, but in 1924 associated with the banking firm of Hornblower & Weeks, said in that year he was sent to Detroit by his firm to negotiate with the Fords for the purchase of their company and made the proposition.

"We couldn't do that we're having too much fun. What would I do with all that money?" Ford replied.

The World says reports in automobile circles indicate that a motor combination rivaling the Ford company and General Motors is being sponsored by a Wall street banking group. Dodge, Packard, Nash and Mack Trucks are said to be included in the proposed combine, which, in point of assets, capitalization and production capacity, would rank as one of the biggest corporations in the world.

VALUE OF MUSIC IN MANY LINES

Furnishes Splendid Means of Employing Spare Time Profitably.

PART OF EDUCATION.

Music furnishes a splendid means of occupying leisure hours in a profitable way. With the changed conditions of living today, when there is more leisure than ever before, it becomes important to decide how this leisure shall be spent. One who works with juveniles will tell you that the reason there is so much delinquency is because children have not been taught to use their leisure properly; that it is what the boy or girl does with his leisure that determines his character. And we are told that character building is the chief corner-stone of education.

Some knowledge of music and art is needed in the education of every individual; it is of practical use to the business man, the professional man, the day laborer, the capitalist, and to the father and mother in the home. Men who have charge of our civic affairs need some knowledge and appreciation of art and music. Churches and Sunday schools and all civic gatherings need a people who can participate in and appreciate music. The tired business man needs some knowledge of music to make his leisure more interesting. He must be educated in his youth, so that his adult life may be made richer.

As a part of one's education, it is worth while to learn to read music and sing in chorus or glee club; to learn to read music and play some instrument and join the orchestra or band, or play the piano; to learn to read music and amuse one's self by singing and playing just for fun; to learn to read music and acquire a knowledge that can be used to advantage if one wishes to consider music more seriously.

LEADING SCULLER HELD FOR RANSOM

Mexicans Demand $5,000 for Release of Major Goodsell

SYDNEY, N.S.W., Feb. 7.—The recent disappearance of the Australian sculler, Major Goodsell, while en route here from Los Angeles, has had a sensational sequel in the form of an anonymous letter from Varquis, Mexico, addressed to E. C. Uhr, the sculler's most prominent supporter, demanding $5,000 ransom.

The letter points out that the money must be paid immediately in order that Goodsell may participate in the race against Hannan, and urges that a bank draft be sent at once to Don Piedmonte, at the Mexican Commerce bank in Varquis.

It is believed here that Goodsell originally crossed the Mexican frontier in an endeavor to circumvent the United States immigration law regarding the residential limit of six months.

FIGHTING CONTINUES IN PORTUGUESE CITY

LISBON, Feb. 7 (United Press)—Fighting between rebel and loyal troops continued today in the streets of Oporto. The Carmona government, against which an infantry regiment, the Republican Guard, and naval units rebelled, announced that reports of the rebels' surrender had been premature.

RESCUE LINER IS IN TROUBLE

"President Harding" Has Hard Fight On the Atlantic Ocean.

FIVE DAYS OVEBDUE

NEW YORK, Feb. 7 (United Press).—The U. S. liner President Harding, which a year ago figured in one of the most thrilling rescues in the annals of the sea, yesterday was in serious trouble herself.

Her oil exhausted by a continuous fight with heavy seas and wind, her speed slowed down to less than half, the liner was moving slowly toward Halifax and will be days overdue reaching here. A leak in a main fuel tank, into which salt water seeped, was given as the cause of her distress.

The President Harding left Queenstown on January 28 and was due to arrive here Friday. Instead of proceeding directly to New York, however, its owners announced, the liner will head for Halifax, replenish there its fuel tanks, and continue to New York.

The liner played the principal role in the rescue of the crew of the Italian freighter Ignazio Florio last year.

Other trans-Atlantic liners were overdue because of mid-Atlantic storms. Among them were the Conte Biancamano, the Bremen and the Hindenburg.

They will arrive from one to three days late.

GEODETIC SURVEY DOES USEFUL WORK

Operations In Every Province Extended During the Past Year.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 7.—(Canadian Press).—That the Canadian Geodetic Survey is now prosecuting works of considerable magnitude in the interests of and paid for by private concerns or municipalities, was revealed in the report of the Geodetic Surveys Committee, presented by H. P. Moulton, D.L.S., at the convention of the Dominion Land Surveyors' Association here. He referred particularly to the work done for the Canadian International Paper Company and the city of Montreal in the wilds of Northern Quebec, in the upper Gatineau River region, and in the city of Montreal and surrounding district.

International co-operation was touched on by Mr. Moulton when he told the convention of the use being made by the United States Coast and Geodetic Surveys of the triangulation surveys executed by Canadian surveyors along the international boundary in Western Canada.

During the past year the Geodetic Survey extended its operations in each of the Provinces. An 1,800-mile circuit in the Maritimes and Quebec, including part of the U. S. coast and geodetic survey, was completed. In Ontario and Quebec, surveys were projected up the Ottawa Valley into the mining fields of Ontario, and the intention is to further expand this work and carry it through the Rouyn area in Quebec. In Quebec also, triangulation surveys were completed up the St. Maurice River as far as La Tuque, with the object of eventually continuing along the transcontinental railway to join with the Ottawa River loop. In connection with Great Lakes water levels, precise levels were run connecting hydrographic survey guages at Sault Ste. Marie, Thessalon, Port Stanley and Collingwood. On Vancouver Island preliminary work was done to furnish control for the British Columbia Government surveys and for the hydrographic survey of the west coast. This work will also furnish control for geological surveys which extend from Victoria about 130 miles north-west to the glacier region.

ANTIPODES TRIP OF YORKS HAS ROMANTIC VIEW

Great Siver Ship, Decorated With White Rose, Cleaves Pacific.

MAGNIFICENT SIGHT.

Simplicity Marks Interior Furnishings of Royal Quarters.

LONDON, Feb. 7. — (Canadian Press).—Sheathed in silver, with an electrical White Rose of York on its foremast, His Majesty's ship Renown is breasting the billows of the vast Pacific on its course for the Antipodes. This modern Argosy bears King George's second son, the Duke of York, and his Duchess to Australia and New Zealand. His Royal Highness bears the commission to open the Australian Parliament for its first session at the new Federal capital of Canberra.

When the velvet night of the southern seas falls and the Renown nears any one of the countless isles of the Pacific natives may watch the delicately-traced outlines of the big battle cruiser gliding by, lights gleaming on its silvered surface, and glowing above the captain's bridge the dazzling York rose whose petals, 24 feet from tip to tip, are luminous with electric lights.

The Renown, which will not reach New Zealand until Feb. 22, and Australia until March 26, is silver and white from bow to stern—from waterline to wireless aerial. The great naval guns point silver muzzles fore and aft. On the centre table, while the Royal party dines, stands a silver sloop riding upon silver waves, with mother of pearl sails. A great silver shield, gift of the Commonwealth of Australia, hangs in place of honor on the walls, and a choir of silver bugles blows the ship's calls.

Simplicity Within.

But with all magnificence without, there is general simplicity within, a simplicity in keeping with the quiet good taste of the Royal voyagers. Furnishings in the dining-room are in plain but gleaming mahogany. An electric piano and combined wireless set and gramaphone—presented by the Prince of Wales—provide entertainment. Yellow-shaded lamps and colored glass flowers adorn the table, and yellow curtains frame the windows. The Duke's cabin is plain and unadorned, as befits a sailor Prince, but the Duchess' tastes in interior decoration can be gauged from the setting of the lounge with its cretonne-covered chairs and couches, in the design of which flaming parakeets and tropic flowers are the prevailing motif; and in the gay tones of the silken cushions, contrasting pleasantly with white walls and dark mahogany.

Their Royal Highnesses will visit various parts of both islands of New Zealand, by the Renown and on shore, after arriving at Auckland on Feb. 22, their first stop since the Fiji Islands, which they reach Feb. 17. Arriving at Sydney, Australia, on March 26, the couple will spend various periods in New South Wales, Brisbane, Queensland, Tasmania, Melbourne, Victoria, Adelaide and South Australia, before returning to Melbourne on May 6, for the ceremony of transference of the Federal capital to Canberra, which will be inaugurated on May 9. Three days later they leave Melbourne for Western Australia, sailing for home on May 23, returning via Mauritius and the Suez Canal. They are expected to return to Portsmouth on June 23, five and a half months after parting.

Canberra "Ideal."

The whole circumstances of the Duke and Duchess' visit to Australia have a touch of romance to which the tale of Canberra is not the least contribution. As the seat of the Australian Parliament Canberra will, of course, at once take its place as the great centre of Commonwealth official life, a position akin in many ways to that of Washington in the United States. There were considerable difficulties to be overcome before it was chosen as a site. Sydney, Melbourne and other cities would gladly have secured the honor, but there was the condition that the seat of Government must be in Commonwealth territory in New South Wales, not less than a hundred miles from Sydney.

The choice of Canberra is said to be ideal. An area of twelve square miles has been allocated for the city, in Federal territory covering nearly a thousand square miles. It is in pastoral country, with the great Dividing Range as background. About 200 miles from Sydney and twice as far from Melbourne, it has been laid out with the utmost care; and architects, town-planning experts and landscape artists alike have all been fortunate in having what may be described as a vast area of virgin land in which to develop their schemes, so that Canberra may come to be regarded as one of the most beautiful cities of the world.

BRITISH GAIN.

LONDON, Feb. 7. — Profits of the first quarter of the year, compiled from 1,500 companies in England, show an increase of more than 7 per cent. over any quarter in 1925, according to recent figures. The largest increase is for 280 rubber companies, whose aggregate net earnings have risen from $20,000,000 to $60,000,000.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE MET AT WARKWORTH

Many Resolutions Carried By Members at Meeting Held Wednesday.

WARKWORTH, Feb. 7—On Wednesday afternoon the regular meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. George Walker. Over fifty ladies were present and also a few children.

The president, Mrs. Harry Kelly, had charge of the first part of the meeting, which opened with the Institute Ode in unison. Following this, the minutes of the last meeting was read by the secretary, Mrs. James H. Black, and the amount which was realized after all expenses were paid was given also, the amount being thirty dollars and eighteen cents.

Ten first aid kits have been donated to the different schools throughout the township by the Society. Letters of thanks and appreciation for these kits were received by the secretary. Letters being from George S. McCubbin and Miss L. Ankils, secretary and teacher of Norham school and from Morley E. Smith, principal of Warkworth School. Others have been heard from in person.

A letter of greeting from Mrs. McCullough, district president of East Northumberland, was read, also a letter from Carrie L. Robertson, president of the Federal Women's Institute of Ontario. In this letter Mrs. Roberston very emphatically advised the Society to look after needs of own community and the importance of getting young people interested in all the best of everything.

It was then moved by Mrs. Will Porter and seconded by Mrs. W. J. Harper, that a lady speaker be engaged for the June meeting. Carried.

Moved by Mrs. W. H. Barringer, seconded by Mrs. W. J. Harper, that letters of condolences be sent to Mrs. Thomas Sykes and Mrs. Randolph Potter. Carried.

Moved by Mrs. Harry Beswetherick, seconded by Mrs. David Evans, that a letter be sent to Mrs. McCullough acknowledging her letter of greetings. Carried.

Moved by Mrs. W. J. Harper, seconded by Mrs. Frank Bowen, to get books for play if young people decide to put on a play. Carried.

Mrs. Charles Osborne personally expressed her thanks and appreciation of letter which she had received from Society while in hospital.

Following this Mrs. J.W. Newman and Mrs. Marshall Wilson had charge of the program.

Reading by Mrs. Lorne Evans was ably given and very humorous.

Solo, 'Angus MacDonald,' by Mrs. William Grant.

Woman's part in Canada's progress was the subject of the paper given by Mrs. C. C. Armstrong.

Report from the sick committee was given by Mrs. Frank Bowen.

The last number on the program was the question box which caused much laughter and joking from some of the questions. All were ably answered by Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Newman or some other members present.

The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem. Lunch was served and a social half hour spent.

The following is the paper on woman's part in Canada's progress given by Mrs. Armstrong:

The Canada of today can take her place as one of the foremost countries of the world and is in truth an entegral part of the British Empire, not only from the viewpoint of her resources but from that of her legislation, educational system and social welfare. There is no question of the times, she is not qualified to and asked to take her share in solving and in gaining this place woman has played an important part.

Since the very earliest settlement of Canada when she came to the new land with her pioneer husband with all their hopes and ambitions to this wonderful forest land. And while the husband cut the timbers and built a house she waited patiently and made the home within and then blazed a trail for the women of all times to follow and admire since the days of Marguerite de Roberval, Madeline Vercheres and Laura Secord down to those of Judge Murphy, Dr. Helen McMurchy, Dr. Patterson and Red Cross workers. Women have helped with the building of our Dominion, she has ever stood shoulder to shoulder with men urging him forward to higher and loftier aims and long before she had the power to vote hers was quiet sufferance behind all legislation for the betterment of mankind.

At no time in the history of Canada did woman play such a stupendous part in Canada's work than during the years of the great war. Both as individuals and as organizations did women prove to men that they were in truth the very backbone of the country. I need not dwell on those years for their sorrows and sacrifices are still fresh in many of our lives but we are happy in the memory that we measured up and did our part to help Canada in the time of her need and in the lifting up of our flag.

In order to better stand behind all plans for the uplift of our country women have banded themselves together in organizations and one of the greatest of these is the women's institute. There are other national organizations of women that have high and lofty ideals but the W.I. movement in Canada reaches the highest level of attainment. Mr. Hardie says of the W.I.:

The Women's Institutes of Canada are noted in not only their own country but far and wide as a body of the hardest working, clearest thinking doing women anywhere to be found. The scope of their activities is limited only by the needs of their communities. They have the courage of strong convictions and attack the most knotty social problems with intelligence and vigor. People or organizations promoting "causes" turns to them always because it is known that their help is indispensable and is never refused when it is needed to further a movement for the good of Canadians or humanity.

Since the very beginning the Women's Institutes have placed themselves behind all national questions of special interest to mothers and of problems which effect rural Canada. Let us then take the Women's Institute as an organization representing most Canadian women and follow their activities along some lines that figure greatly in the progress of Canada.

First and foremost does she recognize the influence of the home and has done much to make the homemakers' life more attractive.

Although duties as homemaker are important we can no longer confine our attentions to the home alone but must extend our housekeeping into the community. The homemaker who gives all her energy and thought to raising her own children, cleaning her own house, living her own civic, social and religious life makes a fine contribution to society but she often makes the mistake of thinking her neighbors are equally efficient and desirable while many of her neighbors are not training their children and this influence touches her children. Some do not obey health regulations and so spread disease to her children and others receive no moral or religious training so will corrupt hers. Hence the homemaker has to extend her housekeeping into community affairs for the safety of children and the protection of her home and added to her healthy interest in social and public affairs she must have intelligent knowledge of things that she may vote aright for to-day the quiet homemaker has become intimately connected with the government of our country. Let us leave the homemaker now and follow the Canadian woman along some of the avenues of national work. She has done much along all lines of community service. Here economics, conversation of natural resources, better education, immigration and the problems so dear to every woman's heart, that of health and child welfare. We could surely give you names of women who have risen to the top of all those branches of national life, names such as Dr. Helen McMurchy, Dr. Marguerite Patterson, Charlotte Whittan and Marjory McMurchy.

We can insist on the supervision of the school during the noon hour that time of day which should be one of the pleasantest and most enjoyable —becomes the most dangerous time for the formation of bad habits if not properly supervised. This playtime is a necessary part of the child's education for he should be trained for life, not only in his work but in his play, not only in the classroom but in the playgrounds and fields of sport.

We can insist that we have good movies. These have come to be a wonderful factor for good or evil in our lives. Recognizing this the government has issued a series of films suitable for schools, etc., but why are not all films censored very strictly? Who wants to look at the horrid suggestive picture. Many of them are spoiling an otherwise good picture. Let us help to make the movies a good wholesome place for enjoyment, for through the eyes we can get the keenest pleasure.

You can insist on better immigration laws while we recognize it is impossible to populate Canada through the cradle of its present population, it has too vast an area. Let us see to it that the people who enter our gates are of strong physical and mental stock and let us debar none of these because they have lack of funds.

We can in a certain measure insist on the observation of the Sabbath. In Ontario we pride ourselves on this but we are apt to become a little lax, however, with the great influx of tourist travel which has come to our country and if the women of Canada do not raise themselves the great catastrophe which visited Montreal a few weeks ago may happen in Ontario.

We can insist that the health of the community be protected by preventive measures. We have no laws enforcing these and there is so much preventive medicines now. In some countries as England and Denmark they have compulsory vaccination of the infants for smallpox and just here let me say the reaction in small children is very small. Consequently smallpox is practically stamped out in these countries.

We can help to enforce the existing laws for the protection of our young boys and girls of our country. We can surely help to purify our politics—yet I think we can if we set ourselves whole-heartedly to do this. This month we celebrate the 10th anniversary of woman franchise. Let us take a retrospect. It was generally acknowledged that politics were rotten. Have we accomplished anything in that time? We have a mighty force behind us in the womanhood of Canada, a mighty power at our control. We can demand any legislation we wish and obtain it if we work together. Then let us work one and all for the progress of Canada and help Canada for Canadians. Canada owes much today to the loyalty of her women. Ontario's chief librarian says of her authors. They are more loyal than her men and give us such names as Nellie McClung and Janey Canuck, as compared with Gilbert Parker and Robert Service. In our Institute then let us have a training ground for good loyal citizens, and insist that our children be taught to respect the King and honor the flag for our motto is for home and country.

We have welcomed the foreigner in our midst; he has adopted our country, then he must be taught to honor our flag and the children should have one in every school in a place of honor. One flag, the Union Jack, that most beautiful emblem of unity and self sacrifice. It is formed by the union of three crosses, St. George, St. Andrew and St. Patrick. To every Christian the sign of the cross is the emblem of the greatest sacrifice the world has seen and as we look on our flag we realize that it is only through self-sacrifice and the giving of our West that we can do our share in the progress of Canada, a nation over which the Union Jack waves.

LEAGUE SOCIAL WELL ATTENDED

Good Programme Given at Norham—Interesting Address.

CONTESTS INCLUDED.

NORHAM, Feb. 7.—A very successful social and entertainment was given in the League Hall on Tuesday evening, under the auspices of the People's League. The proceeds, amounting to $13.00, are to be given to the Maintenance and Extension Fund. The programme was in charge of Miss Lulu Mitchell. President of the society, and was opened by singing, "Faith of Our Fathers." The Lord's Prayer was repeated in unison. The President read the Scripture from Romans, chapter 12. The pastor, Rev. J. F. Everson, gave a five-minute talk on Christian virtues, in which he stated that the purpose of the society was to develop moral and spiritual strength in the lives of the members. The matter of greatest concern to everybody was learning how to live. This was followed by "I've Been Working on the Railroad" and "O, Canada" from the Trail Rangers' song sheet.

A recitation, "The Radio Bee," was given by Irene Tweed.

Rev. Wesley W. Jones, B.D., of Warkworth, gave an address in which he stated that he believed this to be the day and age of the common man. There is no blue blood today. In the past it was baron, duke, and so on. Today the ordinary person is coming to the front and doing the worth-while things. "To this end," said the speaker, "let us develop the mind and body. The body is the abode of the physical forces that relate us to the lower order, but also of the spiritual forces that lift us and make man like God. We can enrich our minds by making proper use of the gems of literature supplied by the poets. It is easy to get a mind picture, but difficult to get rid of it. Therefore we should keep unlovely things out of our minds by filling them up with beautiful and elevating pictures. Young people should aim to stand for the best form of social entertainment and copy the example of Jesus, who in his day enjoyed the wedding feast at Cana of Galilee. World progress," said Mr. Jones in closing, "will come along the line of Christian civilization."

Several pupils of the Public School, led by Miss Laurel Arkels, the teacher, who accompanied them on the banjo, sang, "Your Troubles Like Bubbles Will Disappear Around the Corner."

Dean Massey recited, "Always Marry a Girl Named Daisy."

Recitation, "Cold." Edith Menelley.

Guitar solo, "The Cowboy," Flossie Everson.

Recitation, "Looking for a Position," Alma Gummer.

"Smile Awhile" and "There's a Long Trail Awinding," from Trail Rangers' song sheet.

Song, "I Win the Bologna," Fred H. Huycke.

Recitation, "I Will Marry You," Margaret West and Dean Massey.

An hour was then spent in games and guessing contests. In a bean contest of guessing the number in a jar, Gordon Mitchell won first prize and Viola McAllister second prize for the adults, and Margaret West first and W. J. Newman second for the juveniles.

A delicious lunch served by the ladies of the congregation brought the entertainment to a close.

Above is shown a unique portrait of Brig.-General Sir Henry M. Pellatt, C.V.O., which has just been completed by S. Soboloff, well-known Russian portrait painter, at present living in Toronto. The portrait shows Sir Henry in his robes at a D.C.L. of King's University, Halifax, the oldest university in the dominion. The portrait is to be presented to him by a group of university friends as some recognition for the assistance he has given in forwarding education at different university centres.

From the within letter Mr. E. A. Wallberg, President of the Company, we summarize as follows:

THE COMPANY—The Lake St. John Power and Paper Company, Limited, has had in course of construction since July last, at Mistassini on the Mistassini River, near Lake St. John, Quebec, a complete pulp and newsprint paper mill, having a rated capacity of 220 tons of newsprint paper per day. It is expected that this mill will be in operation by December, 1927. The Company contemplates extending the present development from 220 tons of newsprint paper per day to 440 tons per day.

The Company holds under lease from the Government of the Province of Quebec extensive timber limits on the Mistassibi and Aux Rats Rivers, north of Lake St. John. These limits cover about 1,000 square miles, and it has been conservatively estimated by two experienced timber cruisers that they contain not less than 6,000,000 cords of pulpwood, thus ensuring an adequate supply of low-cost wood for over 60 years for the mill now in course of construction. The Company is ideally situated in relation to its wood supply.

The Company has a favourable power contract with Duke-Price Power Company, Limited, ample for its requirements and extending beyond the term of the bonds. It also holds under lease from the Quebec Government water-power sites on the Mistassini and Mistassibi Rivers, estimated to be capable of developing 20,000 horse-power at a low cost.

On account of its exceedingly low-cost wood and power and its thoroughly modern mill, the Company will be one of the lowest-cost paper producers in Canada.

Satisfactory assurances have been obtained as to the construction this year of a connecting railway line between Mistassini and the Canadian National Railway system, which will give the Company excellent communication with its newsprint markets.

SALE OF PAPER OUTPUT — The Company has contracted with one of the largest and financially strongest publishing interests in the United States for the sale for the term of ten years of the entire capacity output of the newsprint paper mill now under construction.

MANAGEMENT—Construction of the plant and operation of the mill will be under the supervision of the general manager of the Company, Mr. John Stadler, one of the most experienced and best-known engineers and paper manufacturers in the industry.

PURPOSE OF ISSUE—The proceeds of this issue and of the sale of debentures will be used entirely for construction of the mill, payment for properties and for working capital.

SECURITY—These bonds will be secured by a specific first charge on real and immovable property of the Lake St. John Power and Paper Company, Limited, including the mill, timber leases and power sites; and a floating charge on all other assets of the Company, now owned or hereafter acquired, all as will be more fully set out in the Trust Deed securing this issue. The Company will covenant to pay no dividends on its capital stock, which would reduce the net current assets of the Company below $800,000.

SINKING FUND—The Trust Deed will provide an annual Sinking Fund for Series "A" bonds sufficient to redeem sixty per cent. of these bonds by maturity. The first payment under this Sinking Fund is due February 1, 1931.

ASSETS—The value of net tangible assets of the Company, available for the security of these bonds upon the completion of the plant has been conservatively estimated at $13,250,000.

EARNINGS—The management estimate that the annual net earnings of the Company, based upon the present price of newsprint paper, available for interest on these bonds, depreciation and income tax will be not less than $1,350,000. Interest charges on these bonds will amount to $325,000 per annum.

PRICE: 99.50 and interest

These bonds are offered for sale, when, as and if issued and received by us and subject to the approval of all legal details by our counsel, Messrs. Blake, Lash, Anglin and Cassels, Toronto.

WASTING TIME.

The Progressive members in the Legislature, it is said, are determined to discuss the Government control question during the present debate on the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

In view of the fact that Premier Ferguson has promised ample time for discussion when the legislation is brought down, the Progressive decision to talk now is a sheer waste of time.

Their action will needlessly prolong the debate and will serve no useful purpose.

The public, convinced that the usual long drawn out discussion of the Speech from the Throne is unnecessary, and that it prolongs the term without any reason, has been hoping that in the present session the debate might be terminated in a day or two, and the Legislature could then get down to real business.

If the Progressive members, however, persist in discussing at this stage legislation that they will be given an opportunity to consider later on, any hope of a speedy termination of the present debate may be abandoned.

A LONDON EXAMPLE.

Evidence given at the London fire probe of alleged interference with the workings of the Fire Department during the term of office of a former Mayor should be of interest to those who advocate that Police Departments, as well as the fire-fighting forces, should be under the control of City Councils.

If the efficiency and discipline of a Fire Department could be under-mined by interference of this kind, as is stated, what would be the result of similar interference in the case of the police force, a condition much more likely to arise were the police under Council control?

The Police Departments of Ontario have been placed outside the field of municipal politics by a Legislature which was wise enough to see that only in this way could efficiency and adequate police service be secured.

Once let political influence enter into the administration of a police force and at once most of its effectiveness is gone.

London's experience shows what can happen to a Fire Department from this cause; the results in the case of the police would be even more serious.

WHAT ABOUT ONTARIO?

In view of the fact that the Federal Minister of Labour has announced that he proposes to again introduce an old-age pensions measure during the coming session of Parliament, on the basis of 50 per cent. of the cost to be paid by the Provinces, the attitude of the Ontario Government to this question will be of interest.

The Federal measure proposes a pension of $20 per month to needy Canadians who are over seventy years of age, but the plan cannot be introduced into any Province until the Provincial Government has agreed to pay half the cost.

So far there has been no intimation from Premier Ferguson as to the position his Government would take toward such a scheme.

There is, of course, a feeling in some quarters that to be effective an old-age pension plan must be entirely carried on by the Federal Government, and it may be that this opinion will be endorsed by Ontario's administration.

However that may be, there should be a statement before long from Mr. Ferguson on this question, which by many citizens is regarded as being of great importance.

POWER BOAT FISHERMEN.

Morris Ackerman, noted United States authority on fish and game and publisher of The Sportsman's Guide, who was a visitor here on Saturday, strongly advocates that trawling from motor boats for maskinonge should be prohibited in Ontario.

He points out that nowhere else where 'lunge fishing is to be found is such a practice tolerated, and declares that this method of fishing is fast exhausting the supply.

In this opinion Mr. Ackerman will have plenty of support.

Power boating trawling has become altogether too common in the waters around Peterborough, and its effects are to be seen in the fact that 'lunge fishing is steadily deteriorating.

In the days when fishermen had to depend upon their own muscles to get them over the fishing grounds, it was impossible to carry on operations on such a scale as is done by the motor boat anglers, who with two or three lines in action "chug-chug" mile after mile, hour after hour, over one favourite bed after another.

No wonder good catches of 'lunge are becoming rare.

If power boat fishing were to be declared illegal many authorities believe there would be a speedy improvement in the situation.

THE BROWNING TRIAL.

Canada fortunately offers nothing to parallel the scenes which are common to the trials of "scandal" cases in the United States courts. White Plains, New York, recently has been rivalling Broadway, with its presentation of the Browning farce-comedy, and we take from The New York Times' report of the hearing these descriptive paragraphs:

"There were roars of laughter such as are seldom heard in a court room from the crowd. And the crowd filled every foot of space, some girls even sitting on window ledges and climbing on the backs and seats of chairs.

"Outside the court room the mob—for it verged on that—fought to get in. One crowd of women battled with policemen until they ripped a heavy oak door from its hinges. They fought up and down the stairs, through lobbies at times filled with the fumes from flashlight powder. . . .

"The street fakers appeared yesterday. Some were travelling up and down the street (outside the court house) advertising a song, 'Who Picked Peaches from the Tree?' Others offered fifteen parodies on the Browning case, wrapped up in multi-colored envelopes. Another hawked little toy dogs, such as Mrs. Browning testified her husband gave her. The scene needed only banners and hot dog stands to make it look like a county fair."

An appropriate comment is found in another New York newspaper, The Sun, which says:

"Why several thousand people should stand all day in a crowded court room lobby, merely in the hope of seeing these inconsequential people, who never have done anything worth while or courageous and who have not even the interest of those who have sinned grandly, or suffered a genuine emotion, will always remain an inexplicable and not very complimentary commentary on the American public.

"Beneath all this circus ballyhooing, this tawdry and showy disregard for all that is fine and clean and decent and honorable in human life and human relations, there lies tragedy. . . . The court room rocks with laughter, but one would be cynic indeed if, after four days in the White Plains court house, one were not much nearer to tears."—Ottawa Journal.

"FROM THE LONE SHIELING."

From the Hebrides of Scotland there will come to Canada this year, it is stated, from 750 to 1,000 Islanders to settle on the uplands of Alberta, and add to the community of Gaelic-speaking folk that has already taken root there. This promised influx may be accepted as evidence that the colonization scheme initiated and directed by Father MacDonell, with special reference to the Hebrideans, has proved a success, for it is safe to assume that these shrewd and hardy people would not be lured from their native isles unless they were satisfied of the well-being of those who have preceded them in the trek to the Canadian northwest.

When the first contingent of immigrants from the Hebrides arrived a few years ago, some doubt was expressed as to the propriety of locating them on the prairie. It is a far cry from "the lone shieling of the misty island" to a farm-house in the interior of Alberta; and it was felt in some quarters that, while "fair these broad meads, these hoary woods are grand," as a Highland exile sang of another part of Canada, a people born and brought up by the sea and accustomed to island life would more readily and profitably adapt themselves to conditions on the Atlantic or Pacific coast than to those surrounding a prairie homestead.

But the Hebrideans have in a conspicuous degree the characteristics of the Celtic race that has played such a notable part in the upbuilding of Canada, with other qualities added; for they are a blend of the Norse and Celt, descendants of a people that in the early days owed allegiance not to Scottish Kings but to the Lords of the Isles upon whom the mantle of Norse viceroys had fallen. As hardy and resourceful as the Highlanders, though, perhaps, less high-strung, their traits are chiefly those of a sea-faring folk.

They have been described as "remarkably shrewd, independent, inquisitive, quick, communicative, and fond of novelty;" and though the same observer attributes to them a "pacific disposition" they have shown on many occasions, notably in the last war, when the islands were practically stripped of their manhood, that, once aroused, their martial ardor has all the intensity of the seaforth tradition.

The spirit of adventure, which seeks opportunity abroad, has ever been strong in the men of the Hebrides. Those who are flocking to Canada today represent but a ripple on the tide of emigration which has flowed steadily across the Atlantic from the Highlands and Western islands of Scotland since the middle of the eighteenth century. There were Hebrideans among the early settlers of Virginia, the Carolinas, Maryland and New York. They fought with Wolfe and later with Carleton, and were prominent among the fur traders and merchants who laid the commercial foundations of Canada. One of them, Sir Alexander MacKenzie, crossing this continent, discovered the Pacific; others have a place in Canadian history.

When Dr. Johnson visited the Hebrides in 1773, emigration was, as Boswell tells us, "the common topic of discourse." Not without reason did the "Great Cham" bewail the conditions that were "driving the Highlanders into the other hemisphere," for it was estimated that during the last quarter of the eighteenth century 7,000 Hebrideans emigrated. Many of them found their way to Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island; others followed to Upper Canada and the Red River; and now in Alberta may be heard the song and sgeulachd of the sturdy clansmen who, while successfully adapting themselves to new conditions, still "in dreams behold the Hebrides."—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Still the session won't be considered as having begun until the Government control legislation is introduced.

The Government of Canada, after a brief visit to Toronto, has been shifted back to Ottawa.

The increase in the appropriations for the Board of Works this year is another proof of the fact that if the people want improved services they must be prepared to pay for them.

BEACON FIRES ACROSS CANADA TO CELEBRATE DOMINION DAY

Sixtieth Anniversary of Confederation To Be Observed By All.

PRINCE RETURNS.

Wales' Visit This Time Will Be of Official Nature.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 7.—(Canadian Press).—Plans are rapidly maturing for the celebration of Dominion of Canada Confederation's 60th birthday on July 1 of this year. It is now almost definite that H.R.H. the Prince of Wales will be in Canada for part of the summer at least, and it is understood that this year's visit will be more in the nature of an official tour than any since his first coming to Canada in 1919. Premier Stanley Baldwin's plans are not known yet, but in official circles in Ottawa he is still expected.

The Government, working with the Association of Canadian Clubs, and indirectly with all the Canadian Clubs of the Dominion, is organizing for the celebration. An interdepartmental committee, under the chairmanship of Dr. C. D. Skelton, Under Secretary of State for External Affairs, is being formed to advise the Government and to make recommendations to the Canadian Clubs and other patriotic organizations. Shortly a national committee, probably under the chairmanship of Premier King, will be formed to co-ordinate all the efforts being made for the Diamond Jubilee.

It is improbable that the actual celebration will be confined to a single day. Programmes of various kinds will be worked out extending over several days. There will be distinguished visitors from all parts of the world, including representatives of the Governments of the sister Dominions of the British Empire.

Varieties of Celebration.

The tentative plans call for field days, picnics, patriotic meetings, special instruction in the schools prior to Dominion Day, and sporting events of distinctly Canadian character. At noon on Dominion Day there will be salutes of guns and probably military displays during the afternoon. At night it is proposed to have fireworks and 10,000 beacon fires reaching from the Atlantic to the Pacific in all the cities, towns and hamlets of Canada.

The Canadian Clubs have undertaken to present to every schoolhouse in Canada a reproduction of Harris' famous picture of the Fathers of Confederation. In some cities this has been done already. An international feature has been suggested for the occasion. The new bridge between Buffalo and Fort Erie might be officially opened by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales.

While Ottawa will celebrate the event in a manner befitting the capital of the Dominion, all the centres of population are expected to organize their own resources to mark the day. It is understood that the Canadian Clubs in the different Provinces will work in conjunction with the Provincial Governments in arranging for celebration.

Undoubtedly much will be said during the forthcoming session of Parliament regarding the Diamond Jubilee, and it is quite possible that Parliament itself may contribute its share of the celebration.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 7 (Canadian Press)—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market Saturday was extremely quiet owing to the fact that foreign bids were below local exporters' views.

A feature of the domestic trade during the past week was the demand for Canadian Western Oats on spot and sales of 130 000 bushels of No. 3 C.W. and No. 1 Feed were made on P.T. terms ex-store. The trade on Saturday was quiet in all lines and prices ruled steady.

The trade in spring and winter wheat grades of flour was inactive but values were well maintained.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were well maintained under a good demand. Business in standard grades of rolled oats was quiet but prices were steady.

The egg market was moderately active and steady. The receipts were 725 cases.

The demand for butter showed some improvement Saturday and a moderate trade was done at unchanged prices. The receipts were 31 packages.

The cheese market was again dull but prices were unchanged. The receipts were 44 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 7 (Canadian Press).—Lively buying based on the belief that the McNary-Haugen Agricultural Bill is to become a law did much to make wheat prices average higher on Saturday. The finish in wheat, though, was irregular, 3-8c net lower to 7-8c advance, with corn ½c to 7-8c up, oats at 1-8-¼c to 3-8-½c gain, and provisions varying from 2c decline to a rise of 2½-5c.

Corn and oats proved responsive to buying ascribed to unfavorable weather and to possible extension of the corn-borer quarantine so as to cover Illinois.

Higher quotations on hogs gave steadiness to the provision market.

ACORNS YIELD MUSIC.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7.—Indian tribes in Southern California have found a new way to jazz it up. They use acorns, tuned according to size and strung together in a musical scale. To play the instrument the Indian takes one end of the string in his hand and holds each acorn in turn between his teeth. Using the other hand he swings the string and pulls it taut, causing the acorn to vibrate between his teeth and producing a clear musical note.

A Thought For To-day

NOT AN ÆSOP FABLE

Once, years ago, a friend suffering from the destroying malady, self-pity, made some caustic remarks about a bit of good fortune in business that I was enjoying at the moment.

I "called him," and he defended his attitude with a recital of his misfortunes.

The poor fellow was suffering so keenly from disappointments and regrets that I hadn't the heart to keep angry, so I inveigled him into argument as to which of us had suffered the most handicaps and hardships, and I won. That is, finally he had to admit that mine had been the hardest battle.

But the decision did not help him much for he said: "Your experience has been so much more extensive than mine that your capitulation should be greater, you should show a bigger result than I."

When humans are bent on self-destruction, it is difficult to break down the defence they provide against all efforts to save them, but we must keep on trying.

Tell me try company, and I will tell thee what thou art.
—Cervantes.

GLAND REJUVENATION

The theory that physical and mental powers can be increased by the use of glandular extracts is not a new one, but was first proposed in 1889 when Brown-Sequard, at that time seventy-two years old, announced before an assemblage of French scientists that he had by means of injections into himself of testicular extracts, observed an astonishing revivification of his physical and mental powers. Prior to these treatments he had been exceedingly feeble and able to work for only brief periods of time in his laboratory, quite exhausted by supper-time, unable to work at night, and then tortured by insomnia. An amazing transformation was brought about within a month after beginning the treatment. He purports to have regained a vigor of body, and an elasticity of mind, which had characterized him twenty years earlier. His experience led many other investigators and scientists to try out these glandular experiments. There can be no question, but what some remarkable improvements have been obtained by this method of treatment; but from thousands of carefully selected cases which have been studied, the percentage of results have been found to be very small, and the good results at best, lasting only two or three years with apparent bad effects at the end of that time.

The one single important fact brought out by these investigations, is that a person in good health has a healthy condition of all his glandular functions, which includes the glands of the generative organs. All of these glands function better under emotional excitement, and, of course, certain ones function more vigorously under the stimulation of those emotions which are connected with that emotion called love.

The man or woman who is so debilitated that he or she cannot fall in love is, indeed, very old, no matter how many years they have lived. If this love instinct seems lost, the masculine love of combat, conquest, and ambition is lost, they will be constantly depressed, and their gait will be heavy and clumsy; they likewise often become fat and lazy. With the female the symptoms are feelings of anxiety, and apprehension, fainting spells, hot and cold sensations, and hot flushes. Fat piles up at an alarmingly rapid rate, especially around the hips and buttocks.

Some day we may learn enough about the administration of glandular extracts to be able to overcome all of these symptoms of premature old age, but at the present time the only hopes for a real rejuvenation lies in that which can be secured by building better health. This can be accomplished through living on a carefully studied diet, taking vigorous physical culture exercises, and adopting youthful attitudes of mind.

Physical exercise is probably the best solution of the problem, and the one the most likely to bring about a permanent cure. This craze for rejuvenation has been helpful inasmuch as it has encouraged people to study better health rules. Men are now playing golf several days a week, and women are also taking up golf and horseback riding, in a frantic endeavor to get back their good looks, and to regain some of that pep and vitality which was theirs when young. This interest in athletics is going to be of immeasurable good in the next few years to come, and we probably will have to thank the gland therapist for calling our attention to the need for rejuvenation.

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

YOUTH AND RELIGION

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

At the Religious Education Congress held at the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, several speakers voiced their praise of the youth of to-day, ascribing to him qualities of mind and morals and courage that compare favorably with the youth of the past. Dr. Lewis, president of George Washington University, held that this is the most interesting and most misinterpreted generation in history.

"The cry that this is a 'jazz-mad' age," he said, "goes out from church and college. Yet we may well ask what are we doing to give the youth the right ideals? Give them a religion that ties up with life and don't expect them to sit and mull over abstractions," he added.

There has been a good deal of talk and it is quite popular to say that the youth of to-day is jazz-mad, that it is flippant and that it has departed from the standards of religion. There never was a greater mistake. There are as many serious-minded youth as there ever were.

In fact, the questions of conscience and of God and the like, bear harder upon the mind of the youth than it does upon the interest of old age.

Statistics show that most young people who are "converted" undergo this experience about the time of puberty. We all know from our own experience that youth takes great moral questions more seriously than he ever does later, and it will be found that the youth of the country is as deeply in earnest as it ever has been.

Former religious issues, of course, are not seriously considered any more, but the reason is that they have no relation to life. We do not hear much these days about discussions concerning the church or the Trinity or the mode of baptism, or such things.

The trouble is that these questions have nothing to do with regulating a man's conduct.

But the questions of right and wrong are eternal and somehow in the Western mind these questions are linked up with their attitude toward the Infinite.

Youth is serious enough and anxious enough and it is for us to give them the kind of religion that finds exemplification in right living.

We should busy ourselves only with those doctrines that bear directly on life and can be interpreted by life.

Metaphysical questions and speculations concerning which man can never be authoritatively informed occurs less and less.

But the questions of conscience, of duty and of honor spring eternal in the human breast, and the youth will be found to be as much devoted to these questions as youth has ever been.

LIGHT AND SIGHT.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Investigation of the relation of light to the ability to see well was recently undertaken by the British Government resulting in the discovery that glare seriously interferes with good vision. The survey indicated that glare is even more harmful to the vision than insufficient illumination. Tests made in factories proved that increased illumination, with a minimum of glare, greatly increased the output of work.

Epic Struggle of Britishers to Reach Top of World.

TWO MISSING

Those who have heard Captain John Noel tell about the last Mt. Everest expedition and have seen his photographs and motion pictures will not soon forget the experience. Captain Noel's lecture, almost flat and commonplace in its language, was of such restraint and simplicity that, before the end, one was aware only of the courage of a handful of men and the colossal savage dignity of the mountain that defeated them. Particularly moving, though told in the plainest words, was his brief account of the disappearance of Mallory and Irvine, who were last seen at the unbearable height of 28,600 feet—not much more than a hundred yards from the summit — and were never seen again, alive or dead. Did they reach the top? Did they continue their slow, breathless crawl upward, knowing that night would catch them, and that night would be fatal, on the slim chance of being the first human beings to get to the top of the world? This is Chomo-Lungma's secret, and she guards it well. Captain Noel's photography, especially the motion pictures, was extraordinarily fine. Everest is by no means the most beautiful of the Himalayas, but any great snow peak, if courted with art and patience, will yield stunning glimpses. From the west, across the Tibetan plains, a violent wind perpetually blows. From the southern slope a damp fog ceaselessly rolls up. West wind and southern fog meet on the summit, and the wind blows the fog sharply away, level with the top, in an eternal banner which Everest has flown for thousands of years and will for thousands more. Only a motion picture can make this banner fly. And no "still" could give you that last magnificent fade-out of Captain Noel's lecture: a foreground pitch-black with night, and above it, forty miles away, a fiery barrier of snow and rocky, angled peaks, lighted as if from underneath, threatened by swift shadows from invisible mountains between them and the sun, invaded by gigantic running bars of light and darkness, and then suddenly blackened out.

The Jordan Valley, more than 1000 feet below sea level, is one of the lowest spots on the earth's surface. The fish and vegetation there are characteristic not of Asia, but of Africa.

From Leopard Spots to Zebra Stripes--It's Easy

Joe Schrode—in and out of some of his animal characters.

By VIRGINIA SWAIN
NEA Service Writer.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7.—For 25 years, theatregoers have applauded Joe Schrode without seeing his face.

To two generations of audiences, he has been a flirting ear, a rolling eye, a wagging tail, a dog's bark and a cat's meow. But never a glimpse of Joe himself has been caught by the people "out front."

For Joe knows the inside stuff, as it were, where animals are concerned. He has been in the front legs of more animals than Noah's ship registry listed.

Men going grey at the temples are laughing over Susie the camel, Joe's present role in Fred Stone's Broadway show. Those same men as children howled at the antics of Imogene, the cow, as played by Schrode in "The Wizard of Oz," a quarter of a century ago.

Sister Animals.

Since then, camel and bear and dog and ape and cat and lion and kangaroo have been sisters under the skin—when Joe climbed into them. He is the inimitable master of his art.

Starting life as a vaudeville acrobat, he has carved out a unique career and now may keep the potentates of show-dom cooling their heels on his doorstep.

It all dates from his creation of Imogene.

"She was a grand character," he says wistfully. "I was playing on a one-night variety circuit in the West when I met Fred Stone. He and Dave Montgomery were planning the 'Wizard,' and wanted some kind of animal to accompany Dorothy, the heroine, in her adventures.

"They asked me what I could do, and together we worked out Imogene, the cow, blown cuckoo by the cyclone. I designed the costume and picked the actor who was to be my hind legs.

"Imogene developed a strong personality from the first performance. She was never the same any two nights. I was a youngster then, and so flip that even under a hundred pounds of cows, I couldn't keep quiet. Imogene was a great hit."

After Imogene came a long list of successors. Managers read the press notices of this unknown soldier of the footlights, and wired frantically for his services.

He took such famous roles as that of Buster Brown's dog, Tige; Roosevelt's African lion, Naughty Nero; the Laughing Horse in Lew Fields' "About Town," the bear in James Hackett's "Alcayde," the Prehistoric Beast in "Hop o' My Thumb," and "Spark Plug" in De Beck's revue.

Crocodiles, storks, frogs, tigers and baboons were as nothing to his versatility. He spent his winters in the theatres, and his summers in the zoos and circuses, watching all kinds of animals.

Nowadays, the keepers of the Bronx and Central Park Zoos have come to expect a slim little grey-haired man to appear soon after the papers announce the arrival of any new animal for the collection. Schrode may have few expectations of playing an ant-eater or an ovis poli, but he is just as interested in the way it twitches its nose or waggles its ears.

Do animals have individual personalities? Ask Schrode—he knows.

"There's as much difference between Spark Plug and a frivolous animal like Heeta Horse as between any two men," he says. "I have to feel myself into a part before I can make it real.

Different kinds of animals call for widely varied treatment, too. There's the dog. He does all his acting with his eyes and tail. Buster Brown's dog had an elaborate eye mechanism which I kept in motion every minute.

"The cat works his chops and arches his back, and slips and slides around.

"The bear is a stupid big fellow that waddles along in two lateral sections. He always makes your shoulders ache.

"The horse acts with his ears. The kangaroo and the lion are the most dramatic beasts. If you notice lions, you will see that their eyes are always fixed on the distance. Dignity and watchfulness and hauteur are their chief traits. The kangaroo is a man-killing role for an actor. Those leaps in the air, carrying the weight of the skin, take muscles of iron."

For an untrained man the work would be torture — and even Schrode issues from his skin, white and shaky. On his temples there are the red brands where the iron hat has hung, with all its 150 pounds of hide and wood and wire attached.

His job means fighting off headaches. It means getting daily into a cavern of hide and breathing dust and stale air for an hour at a time, and sweltering in the accumulated heat.

Ring Controls.

It means learning his cues exactly as the other actors do, and playing eyes, ears, tail and limbs according to the dialogue. For this, he wears a ring on each finger, connecting with a string which controls some member.

Within the dark head, he says, he acts his part in time with the role. When Susie the camel winks, Schrode winks too. When she opens her mouth, his mouth follows suit. Otherwise, he could never time the movements that he cannot see.

"Some day I'm going to leave this game. But every time a show closes, somebody else is after me," he says. "It's hard to quit, but it's harder to go on."

When he retires from the animal kingdom, will he descend to playing human roles? Not much, says Schrode. A man is only a man, but a kangaroo is a character.

He had borrowed a single handsleigh with an extremely long rope. Going down the icy slide behind the school he took a run to increase the speed, and the rope became entangled with his feet. He fell on his face and kept sliding down. His chin was rubbing on the rough surface of the hill, and is badly scratched. He remained in school till four oclock, and tried an examination in arithmetic. His arm was also badly brised.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL.

FOLK WE ALL KNOW PORTRAYED BY CAST IN "STELLA DALLAS"

Distinctive Types Made Real by Players Specially Chosen for Each Role

"Stella Dallas", considered by readers of the novel to be fit material for the great American photodrama, has been re-created for the screen with distinctive types of personality.

Each and every character in the film version of Olive Higgin's Prouty's book is recognizable as a person within the circle of everyday friendship. Stepping out as they do from the pages of the book onto the celluloid in the Henry King production they become living, breathing people, part and parcel of any community.

And as a romantic drama with universal appeal of intimate folk one knows, it comes as a Samuel Goldywn production to the Capitol Theatre today, as a United Artists Corporation release.

Each role in the film drama portrays a character known to millions. There is Stella Dallas, played by Belle Bennett, who portrays the kind of girl whose being bubbles over with romance. She is shown at the ages of eighteen, twenty-five and thirty-five. She is a mill hand who reaches out for the higher social sphere. She paints, powders, overdresses, is snubbed, and Main Street gossips about her. She is semi pathetic, a trifle tragic but intensely human. Her protype is in every comunity.

There is Stephen Dallas, played by Ronald Colman, the type of man well bred, with a background of education and family, the victim of his father's misdeeds who, becoming estranged from society, marries beneath his station. He is reserved, tactful, studious and forward looking. This type is known in every social group.

Mrs. Morrison, played by Alice Joyce, is the type of kindly, tactful and aristocratic matron. She has the heart of understanding. To her "Stella' comes and pours out her story. She is the type of mother that gives the name added glory. In every town and hamlet a Mrs. Morrison lives and is famed for her fine deeds.

Ed Munn, played by Jean Hersholt, is the show-off riding master, a bit vulgar, with a flare of tricks, puzzles, impersonations and mimicry. Being of inferior intellect, he can only command attention by outward display. He wears loud clothes and makes wise cracks. He is the tragic mime in the guise of a comic. What community is without an Ed Munn?

Laurel Dallas, the daughter of Stella, played by Lois Moran, is a child strange and beautiful. She has charm, depth, sensitiveness, wistfulness and arouses the protective instinct in men. Knowking her mother as folk do, she is the kind of girl the community pities and loves.

Richard Grovesnor, played by Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., is the type of happy hearted athletic college boy. He typifies bubbling youth. What community is without him? He gives color and verve to every young set.

"THE PRINCE OF PILSEN" DISTINCT PICTURE NOVELTY

Lavishly Produced, Big Comedy, is filled with Laughs and Thrills.

The comedy, "The Prince of Pilsen," will be found a distinct picture novelty, in that while it is a lavish production dealing primarily with European court life, it is nevertheless one of the funniest farce comedies ever shown on the screen. The quality of humor throughout the production is exceptionally amusing, and will be heartily relished by all who see it.

George Sidney, well known as a stage comedian for 30 years, and recently seen on the screen in the "Potash and Perlmutter" stories, and the 'Cohens and the Kellys," plays the leading part of Hans Wagner, a simple minded Cincinnati brewer, who takes a trip to his old home in Pilsen, with his daughter Nellie, and is received with royal pomp and ceremony under the mistaken impression that he himself is the Prince of Pilsen.

The part of Nellie is played by Anita Stewart, who has a large screen following. Miss Stewart, last seen on the screen in "Never the Twain Shall Meet," has a part which offers unusual scope for her ability as a player.

The Prince of Pilsen is played by Allan Forrest, who was recently seen in the leading male role of "Fifth Avenue," produced, as was "The Prince of Pilsen,' by A. H. Sebastian. The other principal part —that of the Princess Bertha of Thorwald—is in the hands of Myrtle Stedman, who is regarded as one of the most beautiful actresses on the screen. Rose Tapley is in the cast.

Paul Powell directed 'The Prince of Pilsen.' He produced "The Awful Truth," with Agnes Ayres, and "Pollyanna," with Mary Pickford.

The screen version of "The Prince of Pilsen" was written by Anthony Coldewey, who adapted "Ruggles of Red Gap," "The Beggar on Horseback" and "Fifth Avenue."

Don't Tell the Wife

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce. Ranny hesitates, loving her, although secretly knowing she loves Abner Gratman. A widow, Clare, who is loved by Stivner, a lumber king, vamps Ranny. Ranny mollifies Stivner. Joan is overjoyed when Ranny, as a part of a secret plan to rewin her, tells her he will get a divorce. But her joy is changed to jealous rage when Stivner tells her Clare left town with him. In Maine, Clare confronts Ranny, and swears undying love for him.

CHAPTER XVIII.—Continued.

There was no denying the intensity of Clare's passionate declaration. Fled were the lisp and the baby stare. In their place flamed the hot, strong determination of a woman who has her body and soul set on a particular man.

Ranny had gone very white of face while he stared at her and listened to her burning whispers.

"Clare, you're mad!" he managed to mutter at last.

"Never saner in my life!" she said, and her smile was not pleasant to behold. "I love you, Ranny Forbes. And whom I love—I get! Livingstone Stivner would trade all his billions for the chance to hear me say that to him!"

Ranny, aware that he was stacked up against a very serious problem, thought slowly and spoke gingerly.

"Not that I am unappreciative of what the privilege to be foremost in your affections may mean, but merely because it's impossible for me to reciprocate anything deeper than friendship with you, I'll make the deal with Stivner!"

He tried to speak lightly, but there was no glimmer of levity in Clare's dull fire.

"Friendship won't do between us, Ranny!" she murmured, while the play of color behind the delicate skin of her temples and cheeks was like rich wine in a frosted decanter.

"Women frighten me, especially women like you."

"I'm sorry, but I'm afraid it will have to suffice. Now, my dear Clare, please be reasonable. I am a married man. I love my wife—"

"—and she loves somebody else!" tauntingly.

"That remains to be seen. I have my doubts. And I am trying to find out—"

"You mean, then, am I to understand," she asked in a low and menacing tone, "that the fervid attentions you paid to me on the yacht were all—nothing more than play to make your wife jealous?"

Ranny nodded soberly, facing the issue frankly.

"I'm sorry, but I guess I do mean just that. I feel like a cad to admit it, but I never dreamed you were regarding that little sideplay on the yacht as anything more than I meant it to be—which was just pure fun."

Of course that was not so—that is, not STRICTLY so. Ranny had been impinged deeper than he liked to think by the sweet barbs of Clare's eyes. Furthermore, he knew that she knew it. The knowledge made him dreadfully uncomfortable.

He squirmed now under the dull blaze of her eyes.

"Look here, Clare," he continued hurriedly, "even if Joan and I never could mean anything to each other again, you and I wouldn't be free to—to love. Stivner loves you ever so much. You know that. You know, too, that he is my friend and associate. Don't you see that circumstances, silly-nilly, impose responsibilities upon both of us—to him?"

"Hang Stivner!" Clare rasped evenly. "Don't hide behind any mythical loyalty to him. You made love to me, Ranny. You made me love you. And your first loyalty, at this moment, is to me!"

"I'm sorry, Clare, but that isn't so. Please be reasonable."

The dining room had cleared by now. They two were alone in the room and unobserved, except for an occasional discreet glance in from the kitchen by the single waitress, who was also the wife of the proprietor.

Clare leaned across the table in a sudden surge of pleading. She was hopefully demeaning herself for the final time:

"Ranny, dearest—I love you. I want you. I am yours for the asking, body and soul. Your wife does not love you, nor want you. You needn't let a mistaken idea about her stand in the way of our happiness. Ranny, why won't you—say that you love me!"

Two small hands, warm and moist, pressed over his; slipped up his forearms and clung to him beseechingly. All the passionate intensity of which Clare was capable trembled on her lips, in her eyes, on the tips of her slim fingers.

"Because," Ranny spoke fatefully, and was very pale under his habitual tan, "I love Joan, my wife, and always will love her and her alone!"

Again, an amazing metamorphosis. In an instant Clare resumed her tigercat ferocity.

Ranny now had his first personal experience with, his first intimate observation of, the traditional fury of a woman scorned.

With an incredible swiftness that took Ranny so by surprise it nearly cost his life, Clare whipped a small, pearl-handled revolver from the low-cut bodice of her frock and thrust it into his Adam's apple.

Her finger had already begun to tighten on the trigger when he seized her hand in a vise of steel fingers.

"Women frighten me, especially women like you," he said steadily, while his eyes never flickered from boring into hers, "but guns never frighten me. You're talking more of my language when you flash one!"

"You're hurting me!" she complained tensely.

He unloosed the revolver from her nerveless fingers and placed it quickly in his pocket, out of sight and harm.

"Sorry I had to hurt you," he said contritely, "but I'm afraid you're a bit unstrung, and if you had pulled that trigger it would have created a deuce of a scandal and no end of unpleasantness."

In her rage and disappointment Clare had risen to her feet. Ranny got up, too, now and spoke soothingly to her. The storm had passed, leaving her an emotional wreck.

She began to cry.

Ranny, feeling sorry for her, gently put his hands on her shoulders, patted her a little, indulgently. Sobbing and spent, she swayed forward. Almost unconsciously he suffered her to rest her head upon his bosom, the while he mumbled awkwardly cheering advice into the golden floss of her hair.

So absorbed had he become in his unguarded physical and whispered verbal efforts to placate her that he took no note of his surroundings, gave no thought to the compromising picture they made standing there.

Then a pungent voice jabbed into his consciousness like a needle; a cool, sneering, mocking voice:

"Even in MINNESOTA one oughtn't to be so conspicuous with his rottenness!"

"Great Scott, Joan!" he yelled.

"None other! Joan, your wife—still, and for some time to come." Her eyes were inscrutably remote as she kept them upon Ranny and remained contemptuously unconscious of Clare's presence. "I've added and Mrs., to your signature on the register out there, and had my bags sent up to your room."

"Joan," Ranny cried, "that impossible—immoral—"

"What's immoral about a wife sharing a room with her husband?"

"Nothing—that is, everything, when things are as they are between us. You loving Abner, you know, and itching for a divorce. You've spoiled all that, though! Now I can't sue for desertion unless you go right away again. You want it badly, don't you?"

"It's not that I love Abner less, but that I hate this woman and your deceitful, shameful liason with her the more!"

Clare by now had recovered her wits. Fear departed, pushed out by venom. She shook an enraged fist in Joan's face:

"You dare to call the love between Ranny and me shameful? You, who have been the talk of the town for months because of your disgraceful conduct with that little rotter, Gratman!"

"The pot calling the kettle black!" It was a new voice. Stivner's.

The lumber king loomed in the doorway, with the disturbed hotel proprietor at one shoulder and Clay Varick, much worried, at the other.

Clay managed to squeeze through ahead of Stivner, when the latter turned to reassure the innkeeper.

He sidled up to Ranny and whispered in a voice audible only to him:

"Nice mess you've made of things now!"

"I agree that it's a mess, but it's not of my making."

"You won't be able to convince Stivner of that. He's come here to kill you!"

WORK ON SINGAPORE NAVAL BASE IS PROGRESSING VERY LEISURELY

Much Discussed Port as Yet Looks Little Like Naval Centre.

RADIO OPERATING.

Dredge and Attendant Hoppers Only Vessels There Yet.

LONDON, Feb. 7 (By Canadian Press).—Despatches from Singapore tell of the deliberate progress being made with the construction of the naval base at Singapore, which figured largely in the discussions of Imperial Defense at the Imperial Conferences and was mentioned by the British Antipodean premiers in their speeches in Canada.

Although it has been in the hands of the Admiralty, for about three years Seletar, the site of the Singapore naval base, looks to-day no more like a naval base than a middle reach of the Thames—and probably it is far less busy, says an article in a London paper.

Seletar is 15 miles from Singapore, on the north-east side of the island, and is reached only by road. It is ten or twelve miles from the eastern end of the strait which separates Singapore island from the mainland of Johore, and is approached by sea only from the east, although small native craft may go through the lock to the west of the causeway carrying the Singapore-Kuzla Lumpur—Penang railway.

The strait is about three-quarters of a mile wide and the land at either side is covered by virgin jungle and some rubber plantations. Many acres of rubber are to be cut down for the base.

No Warships Yet.

A swamp has been drained and some clearings done for the base. Attractive and comfortable bungalows have been built on a hill for administrative offices and quarters; a rough pile jetty has been built, and there are several workshops. The only ships in the harbor are a dredge boat and six attendant hoppers; the British Navy is not represented yet. The dredging for the new floating dock's mooring has begun. It will take at least 18 months to excavate the berth, which will be over 70 feet deep and sloping down from normal sea bed on completion, some 400 yards long and 300 yards wide. The dredge is of the endless chain bucket type, and each of the 82 buckets has a capacity of 2½ tons.

As it would take six months to tow the dock out from England, Hong Kong, which has suffered much by trade depression and China troubles, is anxious to build the dock. Hong Kong is five days from Singapore. Two graving docks are to be built at the base. A few miles further inland, and within view of the main line railway, is the oil storage for the base, and already nearly 40 large tanks have been built. An air station will be on the sea side of the naval base—the site has yet to be cleared of rubber and jungle—and behind this, on a hill, is a naval wireless station, in commission and working.

The port of Singapore is of great and growing importance toBritain' Eastern trade—its annual tonnage clearance comes next to that of Liverpool—and it is a pivotal point in the Empire air routes to Australia and New Zealand. Soon it will have a fourfold importance—a commercial centre by sea and air, and a naval centre by sea and air, in addition to the export trade of rubber, tin, and tropical produce from the Malay peninsula.

WIND STORM DAMAGE

Trees Blown Down, Silo Wrecked and Chimneys Damaged.

BETHANY, Feb. 7—The wind storm which passed over this community on Thursday night did considerable damage. Telephone lines were put out of use, trees were blown down, Lloyd Kennedys silo was blown over; the chimney on Mrs. H. H. Ryley's house was blown off, slightly damaging the roof and the top was blown off Fred Dawe's new gasoline pump, besides other minor damages.

Only one form of lizard is venomous, the gila monster of Arizona. These reptiles have about 50 poison fangs each.

MANY RANCHES TREE SHELTERED

Government's Activity Is Changing Appearance of Western Lands.

SEEDLINGS SUPPLIED.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 7(By Canadian Press).—The treeless prairie is becoming only a name. The greater appearance of the prairie in many sections is gradually changing. There are cosy farm houses, set amid well-planned shelter-belts, surrounded by gardens, containing bush and fruit trees.

This is an outcome of the activity of the Department of the Interior in supplying settlers with little trees and seedlings, last year the Department sent out 5,500,000 little trees for distribution among the 5,590 farm homes in Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. And the distribution for 1927 will be the biggest yet. Nearly eight million seedlings and cuttings are ready for packing to meet the 6,200 applications which have been approved. Since the work began 25 years ago more than 87,500,000 trees have been sent out.

The resulting plantations are not part of a wood-lot scheme. The trees are usually set in strips or shelter-beds around the farm buildings, but a new idea is gained of the extent of the work when it is learned that the 1926 plantations covered a little over 2,000 acres and that the total plantings since the inauguration of the scheme exceed in extent 32,000 acres. The plantations, form but a patch in the immensity of the Canadian West, but they have given an artistic touch to 80,000 farm homes and to many a rural school ground in the prairie provinces.

The aim of the Department, it is intimated, has been to give farmers a start so that once a plantation is established the seeds and cuttings from it can be used to begin other shelter-belts. It has been demonstrated that by breaking the force of high winds and by conserving moisture, shelter-beds increase the production of the farm. But they return a dividend a hundred-fold greater in the increased comfort and enjoyment afforded by themto t he farmer and the household.

CAMPBELLFORD HIGH WINS FROM COLLEGE

Heavy Checking Game Marks Last Home Encounter of Series

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 7.—The High School won their last home game of the Interscholastic League schedule, defeating Albert College, Belleville, at Covert's Arena on Friday night, 6 goals to 1. It was a heavy checking affair, with some of the boys more intent on getting the man than the puck. Chant was the worst offender in this respect, and continually went out of his way to upset an opponent when the play was in some other quarter of the rink, and his flare-up with Davidson near the end of the second period nearly caused a riot when players and spectators joined in the fracas.

Bond, the big defence man of the College boys, drew the displeasure of the crowd by handing out hard body checks to his smaller opponents. While he may have been taking undue advantage of his size, most of his checks were legitimate. Ibey was the worst offender of the local boys, and several times let the rubber go to hand his opponent a jolt. "Teddy" Blute was the most effective man on the ice, and played hockey all the time he was out there. He had plenty of speed, and several times stepped around the College defence when they tried to use their body. Blute was credited with four counters, and while two of them were of the soft variety, he came close to scoring on several occasions.

McAvoy continues to show improvement and Irwin turned in another fine performance in goal.

Jenkins, who played the first period for the College, showed a lack of experience, and the local students had a margin on the play and bagged four goals. They found a different proposition in Eadie in the second and neither team bulged the twine.

Both teams had plenty of opportunities but clever goal keeping prevented a score. The locals outscored the visitors, 2 to 1, in the last period.

Line-up:

Campbellford.—Goal, Irwin; defence, Davidson and Dewey; centre, E. Blute; wings, Ibey and McAvoy; subs, B. Blue and Bland.

Albert College. — Goal, Jenkins and Eadie; defence, Armstrong and Bond; centre, Chant; wings, Uren and Mason; subs., Rogers and Prosser. Referee, B. Kerr.

WARSAW SCHOOL UPS AND DOWNS IN MANY YEARS

First Teacher Was Miss Helen Greig—Private Tutor.

MUST EXPAND.

Building Says Writer is Unfit For School Purposes To-day.

WARSAW, Feb. 7.—The first teacher in Warsaw, was Miss Helen Greig, who used a small building which stood in the present school house, and near the Anglican Church, was used for a class room. Among the early teachers were a Mr. Fitzpatrick, Thomas Riggs, Kate Hill (daughter of Captain Hill, first Reeve of Peterborough) A. R. Anderson, brother of John Anderson, now living in Douro, a mile north-west of Warsaw. In 1859, the last year in which this wooden building was used, the total expenses were $200.27½; the teacher was paid $270.98.

In 1860 the trustees, William Kidd, Thomas Choate and Lazarus Payne, bought a parcel of land from Henry C. Rogers for the sum of five shillings. The deed was fully drawn up, describing the exact parcel of land, and stating that it was to be the possession of school-section, No. 3, in the United townships of Dummer and Burleigh, forever. It was signed by the trustees and Mr. Rogers and witnessed by Thos. Geo. Choate, and T. Garlick.

On this site was built a stone school house, thirty feet by forty feet, and that structure is now the south and main school room. J. D. White was the first teacher; his salary was under three hundred dollars. He remained until 1864.

In 1871, the trustees bargained with Henry Bell, that he would furnish ten cords of good maple at $1.20 a cord.

In 1872, John Renfrew was hired to light fires and sweep, at a yearly wage of ten dollars.

In 1878 there were 128 names of children of school age on the roll.

An assistant teacher, Miss Cook, was engaged. A partition was put up in the room. The head master was a Mr. Edminson, and in the minutes it says, "He asked $320; all the others asked $400—so they took Mr. Edminson."

Miss Cook's salary was $200; later it was raised to $230.

In 1896 a stone addition was built to the north of the first building to accommodate the junior pupils.

In 1910 the number of pupils had dwindled to less than forty, and Mr. Waterman taught the whole school for a year.

Miss Jennie Barrie also, for part of the time she was here, about 1920, taught all the pupils.

And To-day—

The number of pupils on the roll in the senior room, taught by M. Blakely is thirty-three. These names include a continuation class. The roll in the junior room, taught by Miss Janet Quinn, numbers thirty-six.

In olden times, especially in the winter, there were full grown men among the pupils, now there is no one over sixteen years, and few of that age. The teacher's salaries are now $1000 and $850. The janitor's wages $80.

Mrs. Julia Choate Graham, whose violin work is well known, received her public school training here.

Most of the farms near Warsaw are owned by men who attended Warsaw school. Much of the business of the village is carried on by those who attended the school, and perhaps their parents did before them.

Many of the old Warsaw boys and girls are now doing well for themselves in other places, especially in parts of the West.

The names of twenty-four former pupils are on an honor-roll, as having gone to the Great War. There are at least two others who attended the school whose names are not there.

Among the auditors, Washington Reid's name is most frequent, appearing for the first time in 1868. Alexander Watts is the next most frequently seen signature. The signature of Thomas Hawthorne appears once.

In 1820 consolidation with the fourth line school was voted upon, Warsaw carried by a large majority, but the fourth line lost by a small majority.

About a year ago a vote for a new school was taken, and carried by a good majority, but for some reason, nothing was done.

During the last twenty years, much money has been expended on repairs and equipment. The equipment is good, but many claim that all the repairs in the world cannot make a proper building.—at best, the lighting and ventilation are poor, the proponents of new arrangements claim, and there is no proper play-room, nor even cloak-room.

The trustees have always given good service, and the school rate is quite high.

The school house was built before there were any regulations regarding play-grounds, so that they are very limited, and there is absolutely no suitable land at all near that could be obtained. The consequence is that the children are on the road for outdoor exercise and play. Fortunately, accidents are rare, though narrow escapes are fairly frequent.

The little old stone building near the road, north of the village is dear to the heart of many a man and many a woman.

ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL

For the sermons of yesterday, Adoration Sunday, at St. Peter's Cathedral, Rev. P. Costello took his text from the 39th verse of the 36th Psalm: "But the salvation of the just is from the Lord and He is their protector in time of struggle. The Lord will help them and deliver them and He will rescue them from the wicked and save them, because they have hoped in Him."

"As rational creatures," said Father Costello, "we must take advantage of every opportunity to gain a knowledge of the revealed truth of God. A Catholic who is ashamed of the practise of religion, and will, for instance, eat meat at a public function on Friday, should remember the words of our Lord: "He that denieth Me before men, I will also deny him before My Father that is in heaven."

We adore God, as adjured in the First Commandment, by acts of faith, hope and charity. Hope is built up on the attributes of God, on His omnipotent goodness and mercy and truthfulness. God's power is such that He could, in the space of a moment, annihilate the entire universe. But His infinite mercy to His creatures is manifested time and time again. Hope in His mercy is a duty of every creature, in times of sickness and tribulation, as well as in times of ease and comfort. That man is wise who can say with Job: "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. Blessed be the Naue of the Lord."

A serious sin against the First Commandment is the sin of despair. "He that persevereth to the end, he shall be saved." We must rely upon God and trust Him absolutely, at all times. But there is also the sin of presumption to guard against. Christ died on the cross to merit eternal salvation for us, but, in order to gain it, we must apply to our souls the precious Blood so shed for us, through the channels of the sacraments. We must use the grace provided for us, by avoiding the occasions of sin.

SALVATION ARMY TEMPLE.

(Contributed).

Taking the third chapter of Genesis, Adj. Ham on Sunday evening said that here is the story of the origin of evil, the story of Paradise lost, but thanks be to God provision has been made whereby Paradise can be regained. There is considerable discussion about the story in these days, but to those who question this story we can answer that it is surely true, for there is now the same doubting of the Word of God as was manifest in the Garden of Eden. There are present tonight in this Temple those who doubt God and His power, and this is due mainly to the subtlety of the evil one. There is a divine warning issues from this story.

As to what lessons we can learn from the story of the fall in the Garden first seems that good surroundings do not shield us from the wiles of Satan. Quite a crowd of people seem to rely on the fact that they keep good company and associate only with those of good repute—or that they come from good homes. Others suggest that it is through the circumstances they are placed that they cannot be good. Here we see Adam and Eve in the best of surroundings, but they fell. History shows that the greatest of sinners had the best of surroundings and associations, for instance—Jezebel high in social standing, Judas intimately associated with Christ himself. But there is also emphasized in this story the fact that God can keep you in any circumstances—He will provide grace for all your needs.

Secondly, the moment you parley with the temptor the job of the devil becomes easier; it is foolish to argue with him. Beware of that soft, crafty voice as in our story to-night, "and he said to the woman hath God said that thou shouldst surely die." In Matthew iii., 3, "If thou be the Son of God," he makes no assertion of error, he does not contradict the truth, he doesn't come that way, he comes like the worm at the root of the plant. To Job he came with the question, "Does Job serve naught?"

Then thirdly, after he has made you doubt God, he suggests that you try sin. The devil's argument is that there is no harm in a little sin, but sin is not a trifling thing, it is not a small thing, and the position of one arguing against the right is very uncomfortable. "Be sure your sins will find you out." You cannot afford to test the devil's theory. From here it seems the next step is to entice someone else to sin. Eve parleyed with the devil, agreed to try sin, then tempted Adam.

But what are the results of sins—the unveiling of the tragedy of the Garden of Eden. Primarily comes "Shame." There are some here who are trying to hide their sins from God. Some are neglecting to pray, neglecting to read the Word of God; others neglecting to come to the house of God in an effort to conceal their sinning. See how stealthy is the homecoming of the youth who has taken his first drink; watch how he enters his home, the home often of a praying mother. Then again, what of the "banishment" following sin. Sins bring separation from God, from home, loved ones, friends. The Word of God says "the wages of sin is death."

But still there can be sounded a note of triumph right through this tragedy of Eden, in that there is a way whereby the sinner can regain Paradise. There is hope for all who have sinned, hope for those who have and who still doubt God. You and I are in distress, liable to be lost, but, thanks be to God, provision has been made that, notwithstanding the dour consequences of the fall of man, there is life eternal for all through Jesus Christ.

THIRD PETERBORO TROOP. "VIMY."

The Third had a session on Mapping last Friday. A.S.M. laid a paper on the floor and on it drew a rough sketch map of a more or less imaginary section of the country showing conventional signs. Mapping is one of the most interesting of a Scout's many studies. To be able to "put" a whole section of the country on a small sheet of paper, so that someone who has never seen the place, may be able to accurately describe it, to read a map, or to travel guided solely by a map, is wonderfully interesting work. A Scout must know how to make a map so that a stranger can know what his signs mean; so Scouts learn certain "Conventional" signs, i.e., signs that are used on Army Ordnance maps. On a large scale map everything is shown, buildings, roads, railways, streams bridges, fences, pathways, trees, etc. Of course everything is drawn accurately to scale.

For the First Class Test a Scout must know the conventional signs, draw an intelligible rough sketch map, and be able to read a map.

Observation tests were many on Friday—many mistakes being made by A.S.M. The programme had three errors and several mistakes were made in the orders given, some of which were intentional and some not. Many point were made, however by Scouts noticing them and reporting immediately to the A.S.M.

In the first period of instruction, three Patrols worked on Morse signalling. There should be some good signallers in the Third if the continuous work on Morse means anything. Some are finding it pretty hard to get the dots and dashes into their heads.

Relay races were run and each team won one event—making another game necessary to break the tie. "Kelly Says" was played for ten minutes, but the Third are getting too wise to be caught when Kelly doesn't tell them to do something. Very few mistakes are made.

At the Council Circle Gordon Roper entertained for fifteen minutes with songs, chalk talks, conjuring tricks, etc., in an effort to win his Entertainer badge. It was a good attempt, but Scout Roper was not satisfied and will try again to give a better performance.

Starting next Friday a regular course of study will be taken First Aid and Signalling will be carefully studied until all boys in the Troop have passed the Second Class Tests. Memory Training Games will be played and each week a lively new game will be taken. The Patrol Leaders are advised to purchase a small note book in which they can keep a record of all games played so that when their time comes to take the Troop for a night they will have a good assortment to choose from.

Now, for a welcome announcement. On Wednesday evening, Feb. 9, at 6 p.m., the Third meets the Fourth in a "sudden death" game of hockey at the Collegiate Rink. The losing Troop is to put up a supper for the winners. The Third needs every Scout out to cheer. If they don't play hockey they can yell, so come and give all the support possible. Every Scout who can skate is to be on hand with his skates and a hockey stick, so that his Troop can give the Fourth the time of their lives for an hour or so.

An Interesting Plan for a Small Home

(By Maurice D. Klein, Architect.)

It is indeed an interesting home that combines such picturesque appearance with dimensions of 25 ft. x 22 ft., and an estimated cost of 4,800.

The principal idea in planning the floor arrangement was to provide the utmost in comfort and convenience with the utilization of every inch of floor space. This has resulted in obtaining an impression of spaciousness in this small home that is entirely lacking in the ordinary cramped-up house.

The door from the vestibule, which has a roomy coat closet, leads directly into the unusually large living-room, 13 ft. 6 ins. x 20 ft. 6 ins. At one end a brick fireplace and at the other the ceiling is furred or dropped, making an attractive alcove. Ample light is provided by the three windows and the French door which opens onto the large porch overlooking the front, side and rear gardens.

Another feature of this plan is the combined dining-room and kitchen, an arrangement that is becoming increasingly popular. In this case, the built-in seats and table at the front of the kitchen form a dining-alcove which overlooks the front garden. When desired, a gate-legged table can be used as a dining table in the living-room with charming effect.

You will notice the service entrance is ideal, providing convenient space for a refrigerator and access to and from the kitchen, outside and basement.

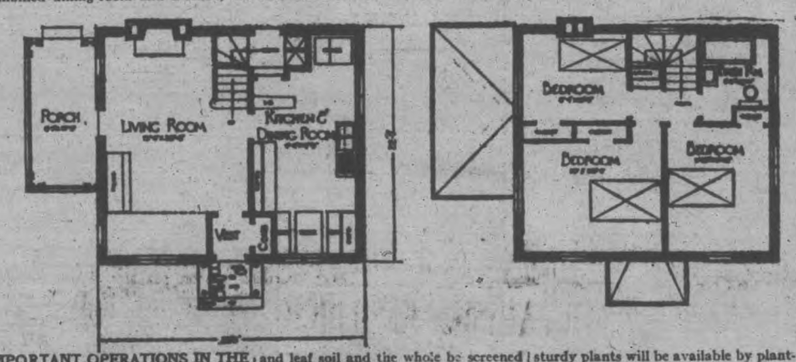
Upstairs are one large bedroom and two smaller ones, all having adequate closet space, while the linen-closet is very convenient to all rooms. The bathroom is located over the kitchen and laundry to ensure economical plumbing.

With regard to construction, the foundation walls may be built of brick, concrete or stone. At the base of the house is a soldier course of red brick and above this a grey-white stucco on hollow-tile or brick. Cedar shingles are recommended for the roof and other places where a similar material is designated as may be seen from the illustration.

Of even greater importance than the choice of materials is a knowledge of the architect's views on the matter of colors. For all shingled surfaces he suggests a reddish brown stain with the metal work of the gutters and conductors painted black. The shutters, front door, posts and balusters should be stained a much darker shade of brown than the roof and the sash and frames painted ivory.

Should this design appeal to you, you would be well advised to carefully follow the foregoing suggestions with reference to materials and colors. It will be a real beauty spot if you do.

Readers desiring further information regarding the plans and specifications for this house should communicate with the architect direct. Address: Maurice D. Klein, 71 Bay St., Toronto, Ont. Copyright 1927, MacLean Building Reports, Limited.



IMPORTANT OPERATIONS IN THE INDOOR AND OUTDOOR GARDEN

1. With the advent of February the preparation of the soil for potting and seed sowing purposes indoors will be a matter of first importance. Soil screened to the degree desired and composed of equal parts of loam and leaf soil, to which is added a little sand, will be found proper for the general run of ornamental plants.

A good soil in which to sow seeds is that which is shaken off the roots of potted plants during repotting; to it, if insufficient, may be added a little loam and leaf soil and the whole be screened through a one-eighth-inch screen. It is essential that enough sand be added to ensure porosity.

2. Sow late in the month in all early spring localities in the greenhouse or warm window, seeds of early cauliflowers, cabbages and onions for later transplanting outdoors. If, when large enough to handle, the seedlings are transplanted to other containers, a fine root system will be formed and the plants will make a good start and mature early when set out.

3. It is now time to propagate all manner of bedding plants from cuttings so as to ensure that well-rooted and sturdy plants will be available by planting time in May. Among the kinds are geraniums, coleus, lobelia, ageratum, acryanthus and iresine. If propagated early and after potting on, the plants are pinched back, they will become bushy and of good appearance.

4. The selection of early potato sets should now occupy your attention. Sort the tubers, reserving those of about the four-ounce size as "seed." Spread out the required quantity of sets on well-lit shelves or floors so that sturdy sprouts will be produced. For this purpose the temperature should be about 50 degrees; when planted in April outdoors the crop will mature more quickly and thus be of greater value.

Uncle Wiggily

By Howard R, Garis

To-day's Bedtime Story.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

UNCLE WIGGILY FIXES THE FIRE

"Come, my dears, it is time to go to bed," said Uncle Wiggily's wife to the bunny rabbit children one evening.

"Oh, so early!" exclaimed Jingle.

"I'm not a bit sleepy!" objected her sister Jangle.

"You will not say that when I call you to go to school tomorrow morning!" laughed Uncle Wiggily, playfully shaking his pink, twinkling nose at his boys and girls. "Then you will beg to stay in bed a little longer, and you will say it is too early to get up. Come now—off you go!" and he shooed them toward the stairs as if they were fluffy little chickens.

"I wonder why we have to go to bed so early now?" murmured Buster.

"'Cause it's so near Christmas," said his sister Custer.

"And I think, after we are up stairs, daddy and mother open the secret closet under the stairs and see what's inside," went on Tumble.

"Oh, I wish I knew what was in there!" sighed Baby Bunty. "It must be something wonderful.

"But we mustn't try to find out," said Mumble, who was a brother to Tumble.

And when all the little bunnies were in bed, Mrs. Longears said to her husband:

"I think you had better go down cellar and fix the fire for the night. It is later than I thought. I am sleepy."

"So am I," yawned Uncle Wiggily. "And as soon as I fix the fire I'm going to bed."

He hopped down the cellar stairs and, sitting in her easy-chair, Mrs. Longears could hear him rattling away at the furnace, putting on coal, tilting the damper and so on. Then she waited and waited and waited. Still Uncle Wiggily didn't come up from having gone down to fix the fire.

"Oh, something must have happened to him!" exclaimed Mr. Longears.

"Happened to whom?" asked Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, who was getting the pancake dough read to use next morning.

"Something must have happened to Uncle Wiggily!" whispered his wife. "I don't hear a sound from him! He hasn't come up from the cellar. I'm so worried!"

"Nonsense!" squeaked Nurse Jane. "What could have happened to him in his own cellar?"

"The window might have been open and the Bob Cat might have crawled in," said the rabbit lady.

"Oh, I never thought of that!" said Nurse Jane. "I'll go down and look!"

"No! Don't!" cried the rabbit lady, catching the muskrat lady housekeeper by her tail and holding her back. "Stay with me! Oh, what can have happened to Uncle Wiggily?"

"I'll call his name and see if he answers," proposed Nurse Jane. "If he does, he is all right and is just twinkling his nose at the fire." So she called: "Uncle Wiggily! Oh, Uncle Wiggily!"

But there was no answer.

"Oh, I know something has happened to him!" cried Mrs. Longears. "I'll send for the Police Dog! Telephone for the Police Dog, Nurse Jane!"

And when the big, red-faced Police Dog came, with his brass buttons and his club and his heavy shoes, he said: "I'll look down cellar and see what happened to Mr. Longears when he went to fix the fire. I'm not afraid of the Bob Cat."

Down stalked the brave Police Dog, and, all of a sudden, Mrs. Longears and Nurse Jane heard him laughing.

"What happened to my husband?" called the rabbit lady. "If the Bob Cat got him I don't think that is at all funny!"

"No Bob Cat got him!" chuckled the Police Dog. "He just fell asleep in the coal bin, that's all! He was asleep when I came down. But he's awake now!"

And so Uncle Wiggily was. He was sleepy when he went down to fix the fire, and while he was waiting for it to burn up a little before shutting off the damper, he sat on the edge of the coal bin and fell asleep. And he also fell in, but never awakened until the Police Dog went down cellar.

"Oh, I'm so glad nothing happened!" said Mr. Longears. And so was every one else. And if the fire shovel doesn't take the hole out of the chimney to make a coop for the mud turtle to sleep in, I'll tell you about Uncle Wiggily's bread and butter.

ANCESTORS USED CRUDE IRON PENS

Evolution of Pen is an Interesting Story of Human Progress.

It is a far cry from the crudely wrought iron pens—with which our primitive ancestors wrote their hieroglyphics on stone—to the luxurious iridium tipped, gold pointed fountain pens of today.

The evolution of the pen is an interesting story of the evolution of human progress. Reference to the use of pens dates back many thousand years before the Christian era. First came the primitive iron pen; then there were pens of brass, silver, bronze and bone; the iron hodkins, reed pens, quills, steel nibs, and the modern fountain pen.

It was the inventive genius of Lewis Edson Waterman, of Decatur, N.Y., that perfected the world's first practical fountain pen. Like all successful leaders, Waterman achieved greatness because he saw the need of the times—and filled that need. In 1883 he founded the Waterman industry.

From the small beginning of 200 pens the first year, the L. E. Waterman Company, Limited now manufacture and sell millions of fountain pens annually—aided by the power of the Press in acquainting the world of the virtues of this perfected writing instrument. Waterman's products can be purchased in every civilized country throughout the world. One of the largest of their many factories is at St. Lambert, Que.

Waterman's success in building up such a great international organization is attributed to two important factors—quality plus advertising. They have satisfied the writing public for 44 years by giving them a superior product—and backing that superior product up with consistent press advertising.

Cheese Factory Report.

The cheese box factory has closed for the next six weeks after a successful season. Last year they made 57,000 cheese boxes and delivered them to the cheese factories of this district. These boxes when filled with cheese would contain about five and one-half million pounds of cheese, worth about one million dollars. About 110,000 boxes were shipped in the flat; $12,000 was paid out in wages and $8,000 to the farmers for logs, bolts, etc., besides what was delivered to the factory on cars. A new $1,500 boiler is to be installed, and other improvements made which will increase the efficiency of the factory for 1927.

W.M.S. Meeting.

Last Tuesday night, the W.M.S. of St. Paul's United Church, journeyed by sleigh to River Valley school house, where they held their regular meeting. The main number on the program was a play entitled "Aunt Polly joins the Missionary Society" given by five ladies, viz:—Mesdames Mills, R. P. Coulter, Jackson, E. G. Bailey and Barrett.

St. Andrew's Guild held their meeting last Tursday night at the house of Mr. and Mrs. Baruch Hoard, journeying thither by sleighs. Messrs. A. B. Fargey, Geo. E. Grier and Thos. J. Readings were given by Lorne Anderson, Edna Spry and Freda Thompson at the social period which followed. Lunch was served. Miss Freda Matthews called the meeting to order and expressed to Mr. and Mrs. Hoard the hearty thanks of the guild for the use of their home. Mr. A. B. Fargey and W. L. Anderson also expressed the fact that the host and hostess had done much for the development of the spirit of co-operation, and fellowship which the discussion of the topic had brought out.

Makes Extensions.

Mr. Thos. Cranston, who already has the most extensive poultry farm in this section, is adding more buildings that he may more conveniently house his extensive flock of over 1200 white leghorn pullets which he intends to augment considerably this spring, having installed a new 6,000 egg incubator recently. His poultry houses are equipped with electric light and other appliances.

Carnival a Success.

The carnival at the Arena last Wednesday night was a great success. The attendance being one of the greatest since the opening of the building. Nearly 200 people were in costume and over 800 others present as onlookers. The different events were keenly contested. Mesdames James Haggerty of West Huntingdon and J. Thompson of Rawdon, with Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, Reeve of Sidney, had a difficult task in awarding the prizes for the various contests, as follows: Races: Junior, boys, 12 and under, A. Fraser, Stewart Kerby; Junior girls, 12 and under, Thelma Green, Jean Morton; Inter girls, 13 to 16: Dorothy Morton, Rosa Spry; Senior girls, over 16, F. Thompson, Edna Spry; Senior boys, over 16, R. The slippery condition of the streets and walks during the past few days has made it dangerous travelling. Mr. Alex Morton had the misfortune to fall, striking his head, cutting it badly and rendering him unconscious for a time. Mrs. Geo. Reynolds also fell and fractured a rib.

Open Meeting.

The annual open meeting of the Women's Institute was held on Thursday night in the Agricultural rooms. Owing to weather conditions the attendance was not up to other years, about 50 being present. Mrs. R. W. Meikle-john, 1st vice-president, occupied the chair.

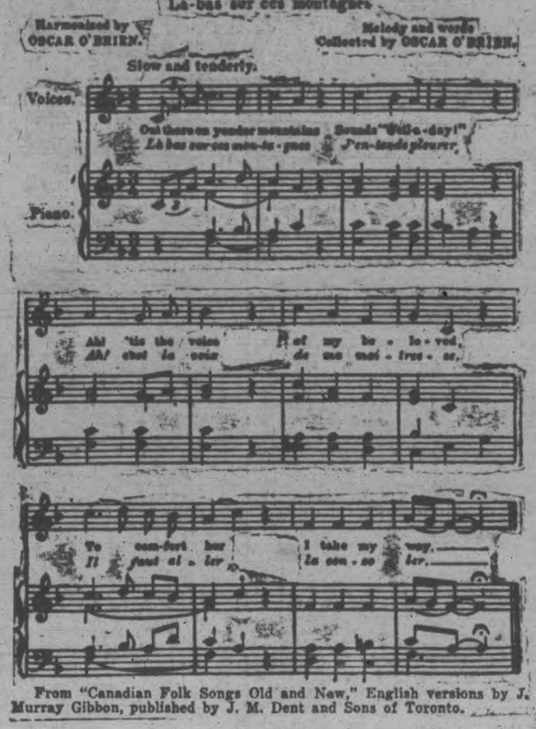
Canadian Folk Songs

Out there on yonder mountains.

Là-bas sur ces montagnes



From "Canadian Folk Songs Old and New," English versions by J. Murray Gibbon, published by J. M. Dent and Sons of Toronto.

Among the various methods of promoting a better understanding between the various partners in Canadian Confederation during this Diamond Jubilee Year, none has been happier than that originated by the National Council of Education, namely, that of familiarising the English-speaking provinces of Canada with the folk song music of the Province of Quebec. As a means towards the accomplishment of this end there has been published a most attractive book of the best of the French-Canadian songs with music and English translations. The English words are by J. Murray Gibbon, head of the Canadian Publicity Department, and a prominent figure in the Canadian Authors' Association, who has very happily captured the spirit of the old French chansons. The music has been harmonized by Geoffrey O'Hara and Oscar O'Brien. The book is published by J. M. Dent and Sons of Toronto, who state that the demand for it from both English and French readers and musicians is very heavy. Geoffrey O'Hara is a Canadian by birth, well-known as the composer of the songs, "There Is No Death," "Give a Man a Horse He Can Ride," and "K-K-K-Katy," one of the big hits of the war period. Oscar O'Brien is a musician of Montreal whose harmonizations of these chansons are much beloved by the French-Canadians themselves. A historical introduction to the book, describing the origin and present use of these songs is provided by Mr. Gibbon.

These songs date back, in some cases, more than four hundred years, when the first explorers and settlers came to the shores of the St. Lawrence with the words and melodies in their hearts and on their lips. They have recently been made familiar to English-speaking Canada by the tour of Charles Marchand, the well-known French-Canadian singer, who sang the English versions of these songs with gratifying success.

Some of these songs, originally sung at the court of French monarchs, were passed on from father to son, and were brought by the early settlers from France to Canada. And as the years passed the old ballads have been supplemented by new ones created by the voyageur, the lumberman and the habitant. Music is a living art in French-Canada, and songs illustrating the life of the people are still being created.

LEGION NOTES

Tom Tothill, the Eminent English Billiardist, Will Be a Feature at the Canadian Legion Hall on Thursday Evening Next.

Tommy Tothill, brilliard player, demonstrator, and lecturer, is billed to give an exhibition at the Canadian Legion Hall on Thursday evening next, where he is matched to play a 700-point game with our local champion, that versatile player so well known as "Jack Matthews." It is also expected that Comrade Art Graham will also take part.

Tothill is one of the outstanding personalities among the experts of the great English game. Born in Lancashire at the close of the last century, Tom, or "Tum" as he is known in the county of clogs, has a record to his credit that few veterans can surpass. Shunning toys for the fascinating click of the ivories, he became the boy wizard of the age, realizing the student's greatest ambition, a century break, before celebrating his thirteenth birthday.

As boy champion of the United Kingdom he reigned from 1904 to 1907, defending this title against the present world's champion, Tommy Newman, in 1905.

With the coming of war, Tom ceased to nurse the ivory cannons, to become acquainted with cannon of a different calibre, which held his attention for five years. With the signing of the armistice, however, Tom was soon back on the job and annexed the North of England Championship, defeating Jimmie Harris in one of the greatest uphill battles of his career.

Just previous to leaving England, on his present world tour, Tothill defeated two of the finest veterans of the game, one being Tommy Reece, the other no less than the world's famous Mel. Inman, who was the world's champion from 1910 to 1920.

Much interest is being created over the visit of Tothill and it is expected that a large crowd will welcome him on Thursday night next at the Legion Hall. All billiard enthusiasts are requested to keep this date open. Tickets are now on sale, the price of admission being 50c. Watch The Examiner for further particulars from day to day.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

Faith did not faint, but it seemed to Bob that she was dying, as her strong body crumpled in his arms.

It was the rector, the Rev. Mr. Ashburn, who finally spoke. "What do you mean? What has happened? Speak up, man."

Bob's horror-struck eyes never left Faith's white face turned up to his. He spoke gently, soothingly, his love for her routing horror from his voice. "I would have given my life to have spared you this, dear heart. But—you had to know. Shall I tell you now? You're not going to faint?"

She swallowed twice, painfully, then whispered hoarsely. "I'll be—all right. Tell me."

"Mr. Ashburn, I think you had better make an announcement that the wedding will not take place. You can use your own judgment as to how much you should tell, but I do not think it would be wise to tell that mob in there—" he motioned toward the auditorium of the church—"that Mr. Cluny is—dead. It would be better to dismiss them without explanation, see that they leave quickly and quietly. The police may be here any minute—"

"This is terrible, terrible!" the rector made a few uncertain steps about the room, then, seeming to gather courage, turned toward the door leading into the vestryroom where the bridesmaids awaited the bride.

"Where is Cherry?"

"God knows! When I saw you here, dressed as you are, terrified, I thought she had fled to you. It would be like her. She has turned to you in trouble all of her life. Now, darling, let me tell you all I know. Uncle Ralph had asked me to call for him in my car at a quarter to nine, as he was sending the limousine for you and Cherry. The parlor maid, Mary Kearney, who has been with Uncle Ralph for two or three years, opened the door for me. She was looking sullen and angry, and I supposed it was because she had not been allowed to go to the wedding.

"I went right upstairs to Uncle Ralph's room, expecting to find him in the very last stages of dressing, or walking the floor in anticipation of my arrival. Instead—" he paused, gathered her hands tightly against his breast, "I found him—lying on the floor—blood matting his white hair—dead."

Faith shrank back as if he had struck her, tugging to release her hands. "Cherry didn't do it!" she cried out sharply. "She couldn't. She never could bear to hurt people. She never fought like other children—" Her voice was rising hysterically.

"Listen, Faith! You mustn't go on like that! I'm not—accusing Cherry. But I have to tell you the truth, all that I know of it. I'll have to tell it all to the police in a few minutes anyway. Wouldn't you rather hear it first, alone, like this?"

"Tell me. I'll be good," she said humbly.

"We'll stand together through this, Faith. We'll save Cherry. Ashburn or the police will be here any minute, Mary Kearney, the maid, says Cherry rang the front door bell at about eight-thirty. She had on a brown coat suit and hat, and a coupe was waiting at the curb. In it, Mary saw a man, indistinctly, because the snow was falling, you know. Cherry pushed past the maid and ran upstairs to Uncle Ralph's room, where he was dressing for the wedding.

The sound of heavy footsteps interrupted him.

"It's the police, darling. Be brave."

ARTICLE No. 14

There have been many articles written on the proper kind of hand with which to take out partner's no-trump, second hand having passed, but very few have emphasized the element of distribution. They tell you the kind of hand you must hold in hearts or spades to justify the take-out, but they neglect to mention the rest of your cards. No rule for a take-out is sound or complete that doesn't take into account the distribution of the entire hand. Suppose, for example, your partner bids one no-trump, second hand passes, and you hold one of the following hands:

A
Hearts — A, 9, 8, 4, 3, 2
Clubs — 7, 2
Diamonds — 10, 8, 3
Spades — 9, 4

B
Hearts — none
Clubs — K, 10, 9, 4, 3, 2
Diamonds — J, 10, 3, 2
Spades — 9, 8, 4

C
Hearts — 10, 8, 3, 2
Clubs — none
Diamonds — Q, 10, 9, 5, 4
Spades — J, 10, 7, 5

D
Hearts — 4
Clubs — 10, 6
Diamonds — J, 10, 9, 4, 3, 2
Spades — Q, 8, 7, 5

E
Hearts — 8
Clubs — Q, J, 10, 8, 7, 5, 2
Diamonds — 10, 7, 2
Spades — 9, 3

All writers agree that the no-trump should be overbid by two hearts, holding hand A, but very few advocate a take-out with the remaining four hands. Yet in all of these four hands the distribution should act as a warning. None of them can help a no-trump bid and yet all have a chance to win tricks at their suit bid. They may not go game but they are point savers and very frequently game savers. With a singleton or void suit, take out your partner's no-trump freely. With a six card suit, major or minor, always take out partner's no-trump bid if the hand contains a singleton or void suit. With a seven or more card suit, always take out partner's no-trump bid, irrespective of the remainder of the hand.

The test hand given in the preceding article is of the type just analyzed. It is as follows:

Answer to Problem No. 17

Hearts — 8, 5
Clubs — A, K, 7, 5
Diamonds — Q, 10, 9, 8, 5, 2

	Y
	Z

No score, rubber game. Z dealt and bid one no-trump. If A passed what would you bid with Y's hand? Y should bid two diamonds. The hand contains a six card diamond suit and a singleton spade. Y-Z can make five diamonds but only one no-trump; quite a difference. Be on the look out for this type of hand and don't hesitate to take out partner's no-trump with the type of hands just analyzed.

Here is a hand that has just been received from England, with the request that it be analyzed and the proper bidding indicated. Look it over and compare your opinion with the analysis that will be given in the next article.

Problem No. 18

Hearts — K, Q, J, 4
Clubs — K, Q, 10, 7, 3
Diamonds — 2
Spades — J, 8, 6

Hearts — A, 8, 7, 6, 5, 3, 2	Y	Hearts — 10
Clubs — 8		Clubs — A, 9, 6, 4, 2
Diamonds — A, Q, 9, 5, 3	A B	Diamonds — 7
Spades — none	Z	Spades — K, 10, 9, 7, 4, 2

Hearts — 9
Clubs — J, 5
Diamonds — K, J, 10, 8, 6, 4
Spades — A, Q, 5, 3

No score, first game. Bid the hands as you think they should be bid, and thus determine the final bid. Then play out the hand and obtain the result.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

This long skirted frock of quaint design was worn by the little train bearer at a recent wedding. It is of white crepe with white pearl em roidery and the little cap is of strands of pearls.

Long skirts and long hair are almost as quaint and amusingly old-fashioned in the eyes of the little folks of to-day as hoop skirts and bustles seemed to us when we were little. They can hardly understand the embarrassment that overcame the old woman of the nursery rhyme who, after having gone to the market to sell her eggs, sat a-napping on her way home, only to wake up and find that her skirts had been cut all round about.

"What difference did that make?" asks the precocious four-year-old, who is as familiar with the sight of his mother's knees as with the tips of her toes. Even Stevenson's verses must be explained to the child of to-day.

You read "The Wind" and the four-year-old listens understandingly enough at first.

"I saw you toss the kites on high
And blow the birds about the sky,
And all round I hear you pass,
Like ladies' skirts across the grass—"

There you have to pause and expla in It is quite inconceivable that ladies' skirts should make any sort of sound across the grass.

Short skirts are no longer the exclusive property of youth—in fact, from the experience of the very youngest generation, long skirts may be more closely associated with childhood than with adult years. Occasionally one sees a bride and her grown-up bridesmaids dressed in long skirts, but much more often the very little flower girl or train bearer has skirts that might even be heard across the grass.

These long-skirted frocks are truly period frocks and inspiration for many of them has been taken from old paintings of a period when little girls were dressed like counterparts of their mothers and the only difference between juvenile clothes and those for adults was in their size. At a fashionable wedding recently the little flower girl was dressed in a lovely apricot-colored frock with a very long, full skirt of chiffon with a closely moulded velvet bodice to match. The bride's frock was just a shade more than knee length.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1927

(Copyright, 1927, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Astrologers read this as an uncertain day, although benefic aspects dominate. It is a time to exercise caution and good judgment.

Women are well directed under this sway, which makes for success in clubs and public affairs, as well as in domestic interests.

This should be a fairly happy wedding day, although there may be an inclination to deceive and to live in independent ambitions.

There is a sign indicating that sentiment will be easily awakened while this sway prevails and it is favorable for first meetings between persons of opposite sex.

It is not wise to trust one's judgment under this day's planetary judgment when there will be a trend toward discouragement and disappointment.

Writers and editors should benefit in the evening of this day when it is likely they will receive praise and recognition.

It is not wise to seek promotion or to change employment while this rule prevails, for it is easy to make blunders.

Arrogance and even unreasonableness are likely to affect persons in authority under this aspect and for this cause it is wise to defer asking any favors.

Politicians are subject to planetary influences encouraging corruption in municipal affairs and in more than one American city there will be reform movements, if the stars are read aright.

In the spring large contracts from foreign countries are to come to American manufacturers, it is foretold.

All the seers forecast seismic shocks for many places not hitherto affected in the United States.

Persons whose birthdate it is will enjoy many friendships in the coming year, it is foretold, but they must not neglect practical affairs for pleasure.

Children born on this day probably will be exceedingly bright and attractive, popular in society and successful through life. They should be taught the meaning of gratitude.

SHORT STORY

HERBERT'S ANTIQUE

(By Ruby Douglas.)

"Whatever is the man trying to do with the house?" was the question a neighbor asked.

"Ruin it—looks to me," replied her companion across the fence.

They were both watching the, to them, ridiculous proceedings of the young man who, apparently, had bought the little house on the corner. From a neat and tidy, conventional cottage set in a veritable bower of shrubbery, this new owner was making what his feminine neighbors considered a total wreck of the place. He had scraped and whittled down the perfectly good shingles until they looked like nothing so much as some handmade things used because there was nothing else. He had lopped off a nice even corner to make it look as if it had sagged on its foundation. And, now, he seemed to be smearing the whole with a sort of dirty paint that looked like a cross between moss color and mole. He had removed the door to replace it with one that was made in two parts, had taken out the up-to-date electric bell to place a brass knocker to serve the purpose. He had let in seven window lights above the door that would only need a lot of washing and extra work. Altogether, in the eyes of his neighbors, this new owner had destroyed the beauty of the little house on the corner.

In his own estimation, Bob Herbert was creating a work of art. And, in the opinion of the friends who spent week-ends with him in his unfinished abode, he was accomplishing something genuinely artistic. "Herbert's Antique," they called the wee house with its fast aging look.

"Out comes that grand cement walk next week," announced Bob as he stood in the doorway framed in pink hollyhocks. "Someone might have saved himself a lot of time and money if he had looked ahead—for out it comes. I'm going to have a flagstone walk all overgrown with grass and portulaca to match these lovely hollyhocks. How they ever came to be here I'll never know. They seem to have been born here—for they are so much a part of my scheme."

Bob's vacation was beginning and he arose bright and early on Monday morning to get done with the distasteful task of taking up the cement slabs to clear the way for his flagstones. He had found the letter on a trip down the island and had carted them home himself in two or three trips in his car.

It was well into the week when he found his walk nearly finished so far as the laying of the stones was concerned. He surveyed it, whistling, and lighting his pipe in the failing daylight. It was only darkness that forced him to abandon his work.

Tired, he sat down on the pile of unused stones and puffed away at his pipe, his legs crossed, his mind's eye visualizing the walk when it would be overgrown with grass and look as if it had always been there.

A high, thick privet hedge separated his garden from the grounds next door. He heard voices on the other side. They came nearer. Two women discussed flowers and were examining, apparently, some lily-of-the-valley plants that grew near the hedge. Bob smoked on, but his heart took an unfamiliar quickening. One of the voices was vaguely recognizable to him. And yet—it couldn't be hers. She was in Europe taking a summer course in art. She had said goodby to him almost coldly because he had suggested that he cared for her.

"I have nothing of the sort in mind," she had said. "My art is my life. I shall not let any man interfere with it."

"Oh—there is nothing I would love more," replied the voice that Bob was certain, now, was Beth's own. "But I must get to work. The big strike in England that sent me back home post haste was not for nothing. My plans have not been upset by anything but Fate. It must be that I am to remain at home and work. It is lovely out here, Helen, and it is good of you to want me."

Beth asked about who owned the house and all the conventional questions, but the answers were so guarded that he did not hear them.

Then the voices drifted away; the lights were switched on in the house next door and Bob was alone with his newly aroused longings for the only girl he had ever loved.

He watched the house from his own darkened room and when he caught sight of the dear face of Beth as she reached up to lower the shade in her sleeping room, he decided that he must find some way to win her.

There was a song she had always asked him to sing—for he sang a bit. "Just You" was the title. Would she understand if she should play his ukelele under her window, as lovers did in story books, and sing to her?

He found the opening in the hedge and, with a scratch or two from rose thorns, he found his way to a spot beneath her room. He sang their song once and then listened. Softly, the window opened. She had heard. The moon was up. He stood in its rays.

"Bob," she whispered.

"Beth," he answered.

And there followed a whispered explanation and a promise of meeting in the morning.

"Herbert's Antique" became, thereafter, to two young people, "Herbert's Paradise," and before another summer had rolled around Beth was helping to plant the seeds in the old-fashioned garden. Often as she worked, she hummed the minor melodies in "Just You."

Preventing Influenza

(By Dr. Frank McCoy, Diet Specialist and Author of "The Fast Way to Health")

Influenza is an acute disorder which is most prevalent during the winter months. The atmospheric changes from year to year determine the severity of this disease. One year all the attacks of influenza will be very mild; while another winter they will be more severe.

Grip, la grippe and influenza are different names for the same ailment. At the start of an attack there will be a slight fever and an aching in the lower back. Finally different joints in the body will ache and a hacking cough develops. The urine is at the beginning very highly colored, which indicates the presence of a great deal of poison, which is being partially eliminated through the kidneys. Consequently, the bladder becomes irritated and acute cystitis frequently develops. The bronchial tubes are inflamed by the feverish breath and a cough, slight at first, soon develops into a hacking cough, but without much mucus for the first few days.

Influenza closely resembles acute rheumatic fever and one is often mistaken for the other. The distinguishing difference is in the absence of the cough in rheumatic fever.

There is no question but what influenza is brought on by two harmful conditions—first, auto-intoxication, and secondly, enervation. It is impossible for any disease to develop in the body unless the system is self-poisoned by its own toxins. This is the common fundamental cause of all disease, so the one who has an "attack" of influenza is one whose system is burdened with effete toxic wastes, which the eliminative organs have not been able to throw out. In addition to this, anything which produces enervation will weaken the body's resistance to disease. Late hours—mental overwork—and the nursing of destructive habits of thought may be cited as the principal causes of enervation.

If influenza is prevalent in your community, it is the better part of wisdom for you to start at once to get your body in such a fine state of health that you cannot develop this ailment which has taken its toll of so many lives in the past few years. Start by giving yourself a good bodily house-cleaning. Stop all regular food for four or five days, and take a fruit fast, using some one kind of fruit three times daily in place of meals. You can get good results by using your choice of these fruits, oranges, grapefruit, grapes, pears, apples, pineapple, or tomatoes. Take only one kind of fruit on any one day. For instance, if you use oranges for breakfast, you should also take oranges at noon and at night, on that day. The next day change to one of the other fruits if you so desire. At the same time as you are taking the fruit fast, you must keep the bowels open by using one or two enemas daily. Begin to develop strength and endurance by exercising more with calisthenics and long walks. If you have been working long hours, cut the hours down to not more than eight hours, five days of the week; also take one afternoon off each week besides an entire day on Sunday. Get out in the open air for an hour or two each day, and while taking long walks, practice deep breathing exercises. If you will follow this advice, you will be able to avoid an attack of influenza.

Montreal Maroons Blanked By Canadians in 1-0 Victory

BLACK HAWKS DEFEATED BY LEAGUE LEADERS

Ottawa Senators Outshoot Illinois City Team in Saturday's Game.

FAST HOCKEY

Return to Form After Longest Slump Suffered This Season.

OTTAWA, Feb. 7 (Canadian Press).—After going two games without a win, the longest slump Ottawa has suffered in the National Hockey League this season, the Senators returned to form Saturday night to tag the Black Hawks of Chicago with a 2 to 1 defeat. The victorious streak of the league leaders which had been broken only by single losses until the Maroons held them to a scoreless draw one week ago and then the New York Americans took them for a 4—2 win, was picked up again because the Senators had the ability to outshoot their opponents from the Illinois city. Hughie Lehman in the Chi-Hawk net had almost twice as many drives to handle as did Alex. McConnell in the citadel of the locals.

The contest sparkled with brilliant play in the opening period, when the muldoon men cut out a milling pace on the attack from the start to shower pucks on the Senator net. With Frank Nighbor, poke-checking centre of the Ottawa front line not fully recovered from a leg injury sustained in the last clash with the champion Maroons, a revamped forward trio had to be infused into the game and for a time this makeshift line was carried back by the fast-skating Chicago attackers. But few minutes elapsed before "Hooley" Smith borrowed a page from the defensive book of Nighbor whom he substituted for at centre, and soon had the Hawk rushes dumbfounded as his long stick was flattened on the ice time after time to hook the disc away from them. Smith succeeded in stemming the Chicago tide and then began a sortie on Lehman, flanked by the substitute wings allotted him, Hec. Kilrea and Frankie Finnigan. The contest raged on scoreless until 25 seconds before the termination of the period, when "King" Clancy pierced alone only to be forced behind the Hawk cage. Cy Denneny however, who had just come on as relief, worked his way to the front of Lehman, and as Clancy passed to the podgy wing was there to bat the rubber in for the first goal.

Lehman had had little chance to save this one, and the tally which the Senators registered near the close of the second period caught him in a like manner, when he had no opportunity to stop. The middle frame, like the first one, had gone scoreless until near the close when Captain George Boucher raced in to send a stiff goal shot. The drive was terrifice and in saving it the veteran Chicago tender was knocked down. "Hooley" Smith was close behind his pilot and as the puck bounded out he took it and flipped it over the head of Lehman before he had an opportunity to rise off the ice.

Throughout the game Dick Irwin, grey thatched centre for the Windy City sextette, had been leading in the rushes of his team. From the face-off of the third period he was in to test Connell. He was back again on the next Chi-Hawk rush, but once more his drive was futile. But showing the perseverance which has been his for many years, the aged forward rushed again, one minute and thirty seconds after the third stanza had opened, and this time he sent a waist high shot from close in that gave the visitors their line goal.

BRISTLING BATTLES of BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

By Jack McAuliffe

About this time Major McLoughlin, a millionaire sportsman out in California, and Jimmy Carroll, boxing instructor at the California Athletic Club, got hold of Bob Fitzsimmons, who was going well in Australia.

They were still sore and had sworn they would get even with Jack Dempsey and me. They got their revenge on Dempsey, all right, but never got me—in fact, I plastered Carroll all over his clubhouse ring and finally knocked him out, as I told you before.

I had been tipped off that Fitz was a great fighter and when Dempsey was matched with him I went to Jack and told him so.

"You know," he said, "that no greener can beat me."

Fitz was nursed along carefully and was not shown in public much and when the terms for their famous fight was being considered Dempsey confidently wanted the winner to take all. Fitz insisted on the winner getting $500 and then Dempsey was convinced that Fitz was not too sure of winning.

Fitz trained at Bay St. Louis, La., with Jimmy Carroll handling him and while I never liked Carroll, in fairness I must write he was a good trainer.

Fitz was guarded so closely none of us could get a line on him and Dempsey had never seen him till they stepped into the ring. Tom Maher and I were Dempsey's seconds, and when we got one look at Fitz, who towered over Jack, having weight, height and reach and that added to the fact that Dempsey had not trained hardly at all, we knew we were sunk if Fitz had a heart.

From the second round on there was not question about the outcome. Dempsey was terribly beaten round after round and even Fitz was asking him to quit. Between rounds we would ask him to let us throw in the sponge as he was out of condition and had all the odds against him.

"No," he said, "I'll take it when I go, I'll go like a man."

In the 13th round Fitz stopped it with a knockout.

Dempsey never was the same after that. He pined away with a broken heart.

NOTE—In the next chapter McAuliffe tells of his return bout with Billy Myers in the same boxing carnival that held the George Dixon-Skelly match and the Sullivan-Corbett match, three nights running.

CANADIENS CAP WINNING SPURT BY A SHUT-OUT

Climax Week in Defeating Montreal Maroons by Score 1-0.

ONE-GOAL LEAD

Win Second Place in Canadian Section of N.H.L.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Feb. 7. — Canadian Press. — Canadiens concluded a week of brilliant hockey by speeding to a 1-0 victory over the Montreal Maroons at the Forum on Saturday night. The triumph capped a three game spurt by the Canadiens which found them riding over three teams—the New York Americans, New York Rangers and Maroons, all of whom they set down by one-goal margins in six days. The result leaves the Canadiens comfortably squatted in second place in the Canadian section of the National Hockey League race, while the defeat of the Maroons Saturday set back the champions' chances of climbing closer to the New York Americans and third place in the standing.

For the fourth time this season an inter-city contest here was won by a one-goal margin, and this time the hero's mantle fell on the shoulders of Albert Leduc, the gallopping sub-defence player of the Canadiens, who tallied the deciding goal near the end of the secnd period, when he crashed through the Maroon defence with the puck, turned a shot through Benedict, and then followed it to force a pile up in the Maroon goal, Wildore Larochelle, making one of his few appearances with the Canadiens this season, made certain of the tally by ramming the puck back in the net after it had been fished out during the scramble. There was a question regarding the goal owing to the delay in flashing the light signal. The switch went wrong and the light failed to function, which led to the officials crediting Larochelle with the goal, until they were informed after the game that the puck had crossed the line on Leduc's shot and charge.

While the goal that gave Canadiens the triumph was a scrambled rally, yet the margin was full earned by the winners, for they outplayed the Maroons for the greater part of the struggle. The victors had too much speed for the champions, launching vicious attacks on the Maroon net and doubling around to back check the Montrealers when they attempted to retaliate on the Canadien goal. Canadiens were canny at first. They let their shot go, and sped back to the blue line to await Montreal's return thrusts, making little effort to bore in. But once they found that they were holding the Maroons the Canadiens opened up more confidently. They went hunting for the rebounds and worried Maroon defence consistently. In the last two periods they almost doubled the number of shots on goal they allowed the Montrealers, flashing back to check the Maroon attacks and frequently poke-checking these out before they reached the defence.

Homie Morenz and Pete Lepin stood out as the barrier against which the more heavy Maroon chargers crashed. Morenz has seldom been seen to better advantage this season than on Saturday night. He was a steady worry on attack, even if many of his shots were too strong and wide of the goal. Lepine parked a few feet in front of his own blue line, swept the ice with a long poke-check. Between them this pair relieved the Canadien defence of a lot of work and properly fuddled up the Maroon attempts at combination to sneak through for a close in shot on the Canadian goal.

It was a costly win for the Canadiens, however. They lost Carson Cooper in the second period and the hard luck player recently obtained from Boston is out of the game for a considerable time again, probably for the remainder of the season. He was rushing the puck, when he was bodied by Frank Carson. Cooper fell to the ice, landing on his shoulder. He rolled over against the boards in great pain, and had to be carried off. Examination revealed a broken collar-bone. He was removed to the Western hospital immediately, and later was transferred to Royal Victoria, where he is reported resting well. There were no complications.

Montreal gave their best in the game, but it was not good enough. The Maroons were forced to concede an edge in attack to their opponents, but they held on through a stubborn defence, and even though outplayed seemed in a fair way to prevent Canadiens from getting the break. They had fewer scoring chances than Canadiens, being out shot 32 to 21, in the struggle, but they battled to the end in an effort to trick by the fast-skating Canadien forwards, a sound defence, and the brilliant Hainsworth in goal.

Siebert again turned in a flashing style of play, while Munro, Broadbent and Stewart worked in for procussion shot only to be foiled time and again. The line up:

Canadiens: Goal, Hainsworth; defence, Gardiner and Mantha; centre Morenz, wing Gagie, Joliat, subs, Leduc, Lepine, Hart, Cooper and Larochelle.

Montreal; Goal, Benedict; defence, Munro, Dutton; centre, Stewart; wings, Broadbent, Siebert; subs., Hogie, Donnelly, Phillips Oatman, Carson, Rothschild.

Referees, Bill O'Hara, Bobby Hewitson, Toronto.

First period: No score.

Second period: 1: Canadiens Leduc, 16.30.

Third period: No score.

Penalties: First period, Broadview. Second period: Stewart, Button (2), Siebert.

Third period: Carson, Mantha (2), Stewart.

CROWN DOFFED AS CHAMP WINS

Rosenberg Comes in Overweight and Bushy Graham Takes Beating.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7 (Associated Press).—The bantamweight championship of the world was vacant on Saturday, the second of the lighter tastic classes to lose its crown-bearer within a year through inability to make weight.

But despite forfeit of his throne, Charley (Phil) Rosenberg proved Friday that he still is one of the greatest of the present day little men when he battered Bushy Graham, curly-headed little aspirant, for 15 gruelling rounds in Madison square Garden.

Rosenberg vacated his title in accordance with the articles of agreement for the match when he scaled 112½ pounds, four and a half over the class limit, at weighing-in-time Friday. He then announced his intention of campaigning in the future among the featherweights, another class that lost its champion when Louis (Kid) Kaplan gave up his crown last June because of difficulty in paring down to the 126-pound limit.

Graham Too Frail

Graham, scaling 117½, could have gained the championship by victory in the scheduled title defence last Friday, but the dancing master of Utica, almost frail beside his rugged opponent, was whipped and battered throughout. His dazzling speed and bouncing style carried him through the first four rounds with a shade the better of the going. Graham's flashy attack in that period baffled Rosenberg, as the nimble challenger swooped about the ring, whipping swinging hooks to the head from all angles.

From that point on, as Rosenberg solved the puzzling attack and found the range with his own heavy artillery, Graham took a merciless pounding. The cleverness seeped from Graham's dancing legs and he sought to close with his heavier opponent, only to meet a withering fire at close range that closed his left eye, completely opened a streaming cut in the lid above, and left his face a mass of puffy welts.

Gamely struggling back in that fire, Bushy sought at times to flash again his weaving, bobbing attack, but the bounce was gone from his style. The tired assaults only served to carry him into nailing hooks to the head. Although he failed to go down for a count at any time, Bushy wobbled to his corner, badly battered, in the closing rounds.

Rosenberg, gaining in strength as the fight went on, proved he had lost none of his cleverness and punching power in over a year's absence from major competition. After winning the championship from Eddie (Cannonball) Martin on a decision in March, 125, Rosenberg staged his last title defence here against Eddie Shea, of Chicago, five months later.

Shortly after his knockout victory in that match, Rosenberg found himself in weight difficulties. He was indefinitely suspended by the New York Boxing Commisson over a year ago for failing to meet Graham, picked as the logical contender. The solons reinstated him when he agreed to meet Graham and vacate his title in the event of failure to make the class weight limit.

SAYS NO CHANGE IN MANAGEMENT

O'Bryne Still to Act as Manager of Catalina Swimmer.

PAY EXPENSES

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., Feb. 7 (Canadian Press).—A controversy centering around the management of George Young, 17-year-old Toronto, Ont., youth, who won the Santa Catalina Channel swim last month, was believed settled yesterday, when Mrs. Jane Young, his mother, announced there would be no change in the present handling of her son's affairs.

Announcement of the agreement between mother and son came after a midnight meeting between the pair at which the son apparently convinced his mother that he was under the proper management. Young's meeting with his mother was the first since the youth swam his way to fame across Catalina Channel.

Barring legal complications, the youthful swimmer is to continue under the management of Henry O'Bryne, who holds a contract for forty per cent of his earnings, while a second group headed by Townsend Paul and Johnnie Walker, Toronto swimming instructor, are repudiated.

Paul and his group hold a contract signed by Mrs. Young when she arrived in Los Angeles, but William Sheldon, her attorney, has asked them to relinquish that agreement. It calls for twenty per cent of her son's earnings.

Mrs. Young arrived from Los Angeles Saturday night, and yesterday moved to the same hotel her son is stopping at. Following the meeting between mother and son, Mrs. Young announced: "I'll stand by George." Her son affirmed the decision, saying, "It is all settled in favor of O'Bryne. There will be no more arguments."

Young is appearing in tank exhibitions at a local theatre and as a result of the decision of his mother will continue the engagements.

Mrs. Young agreed to pay expenses incurred by Paul and his constituents in accompanying her to San Francisco, while her attorney said he would seek to nullify the contract at once.

TEAMS TIED AT MILLBROOK

Anglicans and Unionists Tie in Fastest Game of Season.

SCORE 5-5

MILLBROOK, Feb. 7.—One of the best hockey matches of the season, in connection with the local league, took place on the Cosmos rink on Friday night, the Anglicans and the Unionists competing for the victory.

Good clean hockey marked the game throughout, the result being a tie score, 5-5. The line up was:

Anglicans—Goal, D. Sheppard; defence, H. Jordan, A. Thorne; centre, R. Shaw; wings, J. Mitchell, S. Sloan; sub, W. Budd.

Unionists—Goal, C. C. Garside; defence, M. McDowell, Ross Edmunds; centre, R. C. Richards; wings, J. H. Anderson, J. Larmer; subs, A. Johnston, N. Rowland.

At the end of the first period the score stood 4-0 in favor of the Unionists; 4-2 at the end of the second period, still in favor of the United church seven; the Anglicans pulled up in the final period, leaving the score 5-5. The decision was not to play any overtime. A. McCorry refereed to the satisfaction of all.

This is the second tie score in the local series, the Presbyterians and Anglicans having 2-2 in their last game.

The scheduled games end by Feb. 17, and it will then be decided how the final play-off will be arranged.

MIDGETS WIN GAME AT CAMPBELLFORD

Hastings Juniors Lose to the Locals 12—2—Goalie Helped.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 7. — The local Midgets added another link to their chain of victories at Covert's Arena Saturday afternoon, defeating Hastings Juniors 12 to 2.

The Midgets' clever stick-handling and fast skating, coupled with fine goaltending by Heptonstall, was too much for their bigger opponents, and there was never any doubt about the outcome after the first period. "Doug." Runions and Lambert were the best boys on the ice, and the others held up their end in fine style. Learmouth was the best for Hastings. The line-up:

Campbellford—Goal, Heptonstall; r. defence, McPherson; l. defence, Lambert; centre, Hendy; r. wing, B. Blute; l. wing, D. Runions; subs., Garrison and Peake.

Hastings—Goal, Bailey; r. defence, C. Scriber; l. defence, M. Scriber; centre, Learmouth; r. wing, Whitewood; l. wing, Hubbs; subs., Wilson, Boyle and Sargeant.

Referee—L. Scriber.

WOULD HAVE UNIFORM RULES FOR PRO AND AMATEUR HOCKEY

James T. Sutherland, Kingston, Former Amateur Hockey Head, Urges Universal Regulations For Both Classes of Players.

WOULD BE GENERALLY APPROVED.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 5.—(By Canadian Press).—Urging a universal set of rules for professional and amateur hockey in Canada, James T. Sutherland, Kingston, Ont. former president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association and the Ontario Hockey Association, says the innovation would undoubtedly meet with the greatest approval from hockey followers throughout the country.

"The question arises as to just why hockey in Canada has such a conglomeration of rules to govern its national winter sport," he writes in the Toronto Star. "Not so many years ago we had only the Quebec and Ontario rules to consider, and as the only difference consisted in the off-side regarding the skating and non-skating of a player on-side, the difference was so slight that it amounted to very little. Quebec rules that a player must always be on his own side of the play and could not be skated on-side whereas the Ontario rule permitted this."

Mr. Sutherland continues that after their college days at McGill had closed, Lester and Frank Patrick journeyed to the western coast and established hockey in Victoria, Vancouver, Seattle, etc., and they set out to manufacture rules 'that in their opinion would be more pleasing to the masses, to whom they catered, than the staid uniform rules of the east afforded. Thus it happened that when the teams from the east and west met to contest for the Stanley Cup, emblematic of the Canadian professional championship, part of the games were played under eastern rules and part under western rules. Consequently, there gradually crept into eastern professional hockey the conglomerate rules that have done so much towards causing the present chaotic conditions that exists and which is so mystifying to many spectators, particularly those who attend both professional and amateur games."

He points out that despite all the changes that have occurred in playing rules of the professional game, the amateur authorities have tinkered so very little with the rules that they are today "just as interesting to the fans who follow amateur hockey as they were to their fathers who either followed or played the game twenty-five or thitry years ago."

Some of the western rules, Mr. Sutherland says, such as permitting the goaler to stop the puck while on his knees or other similar position—seem to have been a good proposition and have been adopted by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association authorities.

"For any such other practical rule or rules that came out of the west the Patricks are entitled to all due credit," he says. "The trouble appears to have been that there has been an undue amount of tinkering with the rules and it is high time that the professional and amateur authorities got together and decided upon a universal set of rules applicable alike to pro and amateur, which innovation would undoubtedly meet with the greatest approval from hockey followers throughout the country.

"The recent arrangement between the pro and amateur authorities whereby all rink surfaces in Canada and the United States will be marked off alike, is a sound step in the right direction and should be followed by a conference on the playing rules that should bring similarly happy results."

LINDSAY PLAYS HAVELOCK HERE

Wednesday's Night's Game Promises To Be Interesting Hockey Match.

O.H.A. PLAY-OFFS.

Havelock Intermediates will play their home game with Lindsay here on Wednesday evening, and it should be a good one. The two teams play in Lindsay this evening in the first game of the O.H.A. playoffs.

The Lindsay team, a mixture of old favorites, known here for years, and juniors who have come along, won their group without a loss, and added to their laurels by defeating the Petes in an exhibition game. The aggressive Havelock boys are well-known here as a fast, hard-fighting team, and will have many supporters among Peterborough citizens.

Both teams will be accompanied by numerous rooters, and there should be a good contingent of Peterborough fans out for this game.

RICHARDS SAYS AMATEUR A JOKE

May Tour States To Tell the Truth About Tennis Situation.

CITES EXAMPLE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 7 (Canadian Press).—Vincent Richards' reaction to the decision of the United States Lawn Tennis Association in refusing him 1926 ranking as an amateur because of professionalism, may cause him to tour the United States "to tell those who care to hear the truth about the tennis situation."

"The amateur in tennis," Richards said, "is a joke, with few exceptions. Take the drawings of a famous woman amateur tennis player appearing in papers subscribing to a newspaper syndicate. She is reported to receive a salary of $250 a week for these drawings. If she is paid for the drawings and not her tennis name, then I am the world's greatest tenor."

WOMAN FINISHES CATALINA SWIM

Thirty Year Old Mother Is First of Her Sex to Cross.

WILMINGTON, Cal., Feb. 7 (Associated Press Despatch)—A 30-year-old mother, Mrs. Myrtle Huddleston, of Long Beach, Cal., who took up swimming less than a year ago as a means of reducing, yesterday succeeded, after almost superhuman effort, in her third attempt to swim San Pedro Channel, and was proclaimed the first woman ever to have paddled across the 20-odd mile waterway separating Santa Catalina Island from California's mainland.

When Mrs. Huddleston touched land she collapsed, her left side was paralyzed, and she was unable to move.

20 Hours, 42 Minutes

Her time was 20 hours 42 minutes, approximately 5 hours longer than was required by George Young, Toronto youth, who won the $25,000 William Wringley Jr. cash prize for swimming the channel on Jan. 16. She bettered, however, by nearly two hours the time of Henry F. Sullivan of Lowell, Mass., who crossed the waterway a week ago in 22 hours and 45 minutes.

Mrs. Huddleston was accompanied throughout her swim by Charles Toth, who once swam the English Channel, and several others. The finish was witnessed by three newspapermen from Los Angeles.

No official observer was appointed to accompany the Long Beach beauty parlor proprietor on her swim, as the $15,000 prize for the first woman to cross the channel posted by William Wrigley, millionaire sportsman in connection with the $25,000 prize hung up for the winner of the ocean marathon, Jan. 15, was withdrawn.

To Help Her Son

LONG BEACH, Feb. 7 (Canadian Press).—The "pot of gold," the means of giving her son an education, today appeared within reach of Mrs. Myrtle Huddlestone, as a result of her courageous and successful swimming of the San Pedro Channel. She was the first woman natator to negotiate the 20-odd mile passage which separated Santa Catalina Island from California's mainland.

Mrs. Huddlestone, a former resident of Mattoon, Illinois, competed for no prize in her swim, but expects to realize large revenue from motion picture, vaudeville and advertising contracts as the result of her conquest. The fruits of her victory, she says, will be used to send her boy, Everett, through school.

The second inquest is to be held on February 16 at Warkworth.

DYNAMITE USED AS HOCKEY PUCK

Toronto Boys Chop Explosive Into Chunks and Play On Ice.

TORONTO, Feb. 7. — Chopping sticks of dynamite with an axe and then playing hockey with the deadly explosive formed the exploit on Saturday of three Toronto boys who are none of the worse for their hazardous escapade, although their parents almost suffered collapse when the story became known. The boys obtained the dynamite from a shed on the Russell brickyard property, Blake Street, chopping off a good part of the 200 sticks stored there and afterwards using some of the portions as pucks for a game of hockey. That there was no explosion is attributed by experts to the fact that the dynamite was frozen. At present the three boys, whose aged range from 10 to 13, are under arrest on charges of theft and doing damage to property.

The boys, very tearful and very penitent, were taken into custody yesterday by Detectives Clarke and Dodds, following a complaint of the break-in. Employees of the brick company said that they had found portions of a number of sticks of dynamite in the yard, severed by an axe. Other sticks were found buried in the coal piles near the boiler-house, and yet more were discovered hidden in the fireboxes of the boilers themselves.

The boys admitted that they had broken into the shed and stolen 200 sticks of dynamite and 200 percussion caps. They confessed that they did not know the nature of the stuff they were playing with, but thought they were just ordinary sticks of wood. The dynamite is contained in boxes of fifty each. The parents of the lads were horrified when informed by the police what the youngsters had been doing. All day yesterday brick company employees were searching for the explosive in the coal piles and the fire boxes.

Should any be left in when it comes time to light the fires ready for the season's work, there is no knowing what might happen. It is the opinion of persons versed in the peculiarities of this explosive that the fact that the dynamite was frozen probably saved the boys from being blown into atoms.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

GOOD ICE FOR TO-NIGHT'S TILT

Petes Expect To Have Full Strength In Action.

VISITORS STRONG.

Canoe Club Will Provide Plenty of Opposition For Locals.

The Petes expect to be at full strength for tonight's most important game at Brock Street Rink with Toronto Canoe Club, although Frankie Collins had his hand hurt while playing with the Imperial Oil Company's team Saturday night.

The ice conditions will be good and the game looms up as one of the most interesting of the season.

Canoe Club have given every team in the group some tough arguments and they will furnish the Petes with plenty to think about tonight. Art Smith, the Paddlers' defence man, is one of the stars of the season, while the forward line is fast and aggressive.

Harry Batstone, who made such a good job of refereeing the North Toronto game, will officiate tonight and will send the teams into action at 8.30 o'clock.

TICKET CONTEST FOR HOCKEY CLUB

Valuable Prizes Offered To Winning Girls—Next Week Hockey Week.

Next week will be 'hockey week' at the Regent theatre and for this period two fine shows will be put on.

The senior hockey club, which has brought much fame to Peterborough, is in charge of the week's shows. A special ticket selling contest is being put on, and five fine prizes will be donated to the five girls selling the most tickets for the week.

The first prize is a ladies' wrist watch, second prize a diamond ring, third a trip to Toronto with a reserve seat in the Arena for the play-off game; fourth a five pound box of chocolates donated by the Laura Secord, and fifth a two-pound box of chocolates. These may be seen at Schneider Brothers' store window.

The management of the theatre is trying to give the public two fine shows. For the first of the week is hoped to have "The Third Degree" presented by Dolores Costello, with Louise Dresser, a former Lindsay girl playing one of the important parts.

For the end of the week Harry Langdon in "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp," will be shown. This is a fine comedy and Harry Langdon shows a wonderful genius in this picture.

Tickets for the contest may be procured at The Examiner Office, and as there are some valuable prizes offered it is expected there will be a real close contest.

CONDITIONS IN CHINA ARE TOLD TO ROTARIANS

Rev. Canon Simmons Discusses the Present Situation.

THE CAUSES.

Chinese Have Developed Intensely National Spirit.

Hope that the gesture of friendship made by Great Britain to the people of China would lead to a closer rapprochement between the Orient and Occident and avert the yellow peril that some people prophesied was expressed by Rev. Canon Simmons, for seventeen years Anglican missionary to China, in the course of a splendid address upon the Chinese situation before the Peterborough Rotary Club today. Rev. Canon Simmons' explanation of the causes leading up to the present situation gave Rotarians a new view of the controversy and a new conception of the Chinese viewpoint.

The speaker, referring to the charge of Lord Inchcape that the conditions in China to-day were brought about by the missionaries, and the reply of the Bishop of Salisbury that the commercial exploitation of China was responsible, declared that neither Inchcape nor the Bishop of Salisbury were incorrect in what they said. Explaining the Confucsian classic under which the people of China had for centuries been educated, with its doctrine of filial reverence of subject to Emperor, son to father, etc., Rev. Canon Simmons pointed out that the introduction of the Gospel of Jesus Christ brought about the desintegration of the Confucsian system. The ages-old ideas had been discarded by reason of the impact of the Christian Gospel, and with their disappearance had been born a new spirit.

China was not anti-foreign, nor anti-Christian, Rev. Canon Simmons declared. What was happening there was the developing of an intensely national and racial antagonism against foreign domination, a domination that had been made possible by treaties signed by the old Manchu dynasty that had been discarded by the Chinese people. The speaker explained the situation under these treaties by reason of which non-Chinese were not amenable to Chinese law or to Chinese taxation. Into the 50 treaty cities which had been set apart for foreign trade and in which foreigners were allowed to furnish their own administration, police protection, etc., hundreds of thousands of Chinese had also crowded and were outside the workings of Chinese law.

These conditions were resented by the literate Chinese, who asked that the Gospel of Jesus that had been brought them by the missionaries should be applied in the relation of nation to nation. Intensely humiliated as they compared the status of China with other countries in the world, conscious that they represented the oldest civilization in the world, looking upon other people as far behind them in culture, the Chinese simply asking for justice in this matter of foreign relations had arrived at a state of intense nationalism.

Rev. Dr. Simmons referred to the offer made by Great Britain, expressing satisfaction that the first of all the nations had offered the hand of friendship. He was hopeful that from that gesture would come a closer friendship and put an end to all fear of a conflict between the Orient and the Occident.

Rotarian A. L. Killaly expressed the thanks of the Rotarian Club to Rev. Dr. Simmons for his most instructive address.

BULLETINS FROM CHINA

SHANGHAI, Feb. 7. — (Canadian Press.)— Tension increased here to-day as the city, now crowded with foreign refugees, awaited news from the battle front south of here and studied the report that the attacking Cantonese army would not attempt to take the city by force.

Messages from Hangchow, the critical point for the embattled forces, declared the booming of artillery could be heard there, indicating that the attacking southerners have advanced again. To offset this, the headquarters of Marshal Sun Chang Fang, defender of Shanghai, his last stronghold, asserted his troops were successfully defending.

BRITISH TAKE SCHOOLS.

HONG HONG, Feb. 7.— (Canadian Press.)—As another step toward the concentration of British troops in China, arrangements were completed to-day for the taking over of two large schools here and in Kowloon as additional military hospitals.

The Peninsula Hotel building at Kowloon and the flour mills at Junk Bay will be used to quarter part of the troops which will arrive shortly.

HANKOW, Feb. 7.— (Canadian Press.)—Posters and circulars appeared in the streets to-day bearing the legend: "Shanghai captured by the Cantonese." The situation here is quiet.

LONDON, Feb. 7. — (United News.)—A demand on Great Britain for the return of Wei-Hai-Wei, British leased teritory in Shantung province, is being prepared by the Peking government, according to the Daily Mail's Tokio correspondent.

IN MEMORIAM.

In fond and loving memory of my beloved brother, Edward George Dormer, who departed this life at his residence, 336 Stewart street, Peterborough, Ont., Canada, on the 7th day of February, 1926, late of Dublin, Ireland, at the age of 54 year, 9 months, late G.W.V.A., and Nassau R.P.P. 261. This is inserted by his fond and only brother and wife, John William and Isabella Dormer, of 101 Chestnut street, Boston, Mass., and Canterbury street, Billerica, Mass.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord."

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Edward George Dormer, who died February seventh, 1926:

The blow was great, the shock severe,
We little thought the end was near,
And only those who have lost can tell
The pain of parting without farewell.

More each day we miss you, father,
Friends may think the wound is healed,
But they little know the sorrow
That lies within our hearts concealed.

Mining Stocks Easier In Heavy Trading To-day

TORONTO, Feb. 7 (Canadian Press)—Stocks lost gronud slightly on the Standard Mining Exchange to-day, in fairly heavy trading. Amulet and Area softened two and three points respectively at 160 and 57 while Teck Hughes sold down to at 6.10. Duprat and Hollinger were outstanding for their strength in a generally easy list, Duprat firming a quarter at 24 1-4 and Hollinger advancing 17 at 22.50. Castle Trethewey eased five at 115 and Capitol was down 3 1-2 at 29 1-2.

Prices Generally Lower On Toronto Stock Market

TORONTO, Feb. 7.— (Canadian Press.)—There was a tendency to lower price levels on the Toronto stock exchange this morning, but the market had some firm features, chief of which were the active distillery stocks. Seagram, continuing the leader, firmed a quarter at 22 1-4, an example followed by Hiram Walker, which advanced a quarter at 37 1-4 and Gooderham and Worts, which climbed sharply to 47, 1-2 higher. British Columbia Fishing was another active and firm stock, strengthening 1-2 at 88 1-4. Canadian Railway softened one at 178, and Brazilian at 114 1-8 and Atlantic Sugar at 87 -2, were both slightly lower. International Nickel eased to 41 1-2 and Massey Harris lost a point at 69.

Wheat Prices Go Down Because Of Big Shipments

CHICAGO, Feb. 7. Canadian Press—World shipments on a record breaking large scale led to lower prices to-day. It was pointed out, however, that shipments to Liverpool were comparatively small. Opening at ⅜-8c decline to 1-4 advance, wheat sagged. Corn and oats were also easier, corn starting at 1-4c to 1-2c to 5-8c decline but then holding near to initial figures. Provisions tended upgrade.

Opening prices were: Wheat, May 143 7-8, July 135 1-8, Corn May 81 3-8; July 83 3-4, oats, May 37 3-8, July 47 3-8.

Stocks Continue Firm On New York Exchange

NEW YORK, Feb. 7 (Canadian Press).—Speculators for the advance continued in control of the price movement in today's stock market despite the uneasiness caused by the strained Wheeling and Lake Erie situation and sporadic bear attacks against a few specialties. The industrial list was featured by a sharp run up of four points in Hudson Motors, reflecting reports of increased sales of new models.

The predicament of the "shorts" in Wheeling and Lake Erie Common was strikingly illustrated by the premium of $5 per share per day, the highest in the history of the Exchange, which was charged for the loan of the stock, and an extreme gain of 10 points in the stock, which touched a new high record at 90, as against a low of 27 1-2 earlier in the year. Directors of the road today authorized the conversion into common of the prior lien and preferred stocks, then adjourned until later in the day without indicating what arrangements had been made to bring this about, as there is no authorized common stock outstanding for this purpose.

Buying of the dividend paying rails was spread over a fairly broad list with Chesapeake and Ohio, Lehigh Valley, Lackawana, Bangor and Aroostock, and Pittsburg and West Virginia standing out with extreme gains of 3 to 4 points above last week's final quotations.

Farm implement and railroad equipment shares also presented several points of strength.

THE LAZY BRITISH

LEISURE AND POVERTY OR WORK AND PROSPERITY?

By Sir Phillip Gibbs.

It is a fact—not necessarily bad, but beyond dispute—that, outside the South Sea Islands and a few other chosen spots on the earth's surface, the English people are the laziest (or shall I say the most leisured?) on earth.

This may surprise some of my readers and lead to indignant remonstrances, but I do not exaggerate. We have carried laziness to a point when it becomes not merely a habit but an art. Or perhaps it would be better to say that it is scientifically organized and efficiently arranged as part of our social system.

There is, for instance, no other country in the world outside the British Dominions which has the weakend holiday. Here, in most classes of society, from top to bottom, it is regarded almost as a religious law.

There are many men in this country, some tens of thousands, who have carried the philosophy of laziness so far that they abstain from work altogether as a thing abhorrent to their bodies and souls, and they live, not with any great margin of luxury, indeed with considerable self-sacrifice and hardship—as a matter of principle—on the dole, and the relief of public bodies and charitable institutions.

There is also growing up a younger generation of men—hardly more than boys now—who have never acquired the habit of work, and regard it as a moral disease from which, so far, they have been mercifully spared.

There is a good deal to be said for this philosophy of life, provided that life itself is possible under such a faith.

The worst of it is that in this cruel world it is sometimes necessary to work or die, and I am convinced, most unhappily, that if the English people as a nation do not give up the beautiful privilege of laziness, then as a nation we are going to die, slowly but very surely.

It is partly the fault of those foolish foreigners. They will go on working in a most unreasonable way. The Germans are unhappy if they are not working. No week-ends for them, whether master or man. Long hours, on far less wages than our men. No limitation of output, but every man working to his full capacity, so that costs of production are lowered, and prices are cheap in the markets of the world.

The French are desperate workers. A peasant family in France never leaves off working except to sleep and eat. They are up at dawn in the fields, women as well as men, children and old grannies, stooping over the earth, tending every inch of it, weeding, hoeing, watering, harvesting.

In the little shops the French woman toils with her husband all day long. The daughter does the bookkeeping. The small boy does the errands.

There is little unemployment in France. It is a disgrace, even a crime, for a man to be out of work. They are prosperous, though they refuse to pay their taxes. They have little hoards of money in every home, however humble.

They are working hard in the French mines, without taking days off for whippeting and football matches, and local races. They are becoming the greatest steel producers in Europe.

In Italy they like their leisure. The southern Italians are not naturally fond of hard work. But Mussolini has passed a law against laziness. He has made it a criminal offence to be workless and idle. The whole spirit of his dictatorship, enforced by cudgels, is to establish efficiency, increased output, national energy in trade and commerce. It has had that effect.

One no longer sees beggars, lazy scamps, sleeping philosophers lying about the sun-baked streets. Even dirt is disappearing, slightly, from the slums.

How are we going to compete with all these people in Europe, in many other countries, toiling for long hours on small wages, making many of the things that formerly they used to buy from us, selling in the markets that used to be ours, and selling cheaper? The answer is that we cannot, if we limit our output, demand high wages.

There is something to be said for this leisure of ours. All work—and no play makes Jack a dull boy. Man does not live by bread alone. But we shall have no bread, or at least no decent standard of life, no margin for the fun of things, unless we can maintain and even increase our export trade of raw material and manufactured goods by which we have to pay for those things.

Sooner or later, on a philosophy of labour which limits the output as well as demanding high wages, we shall be hit straight between the eyes by the hard economic facts of life.

For there is a fallacy in that limitation of the output. It does not provide more work for one's pals. It slows down the activity of the nation, puts prices up, crippies industry, creates unemployment. With a larger output and cheaper prices in the markets, employment increases, and prosperity increases.

We can make up our mind to one thing or another. Poverty and leisure, poverty and short hours, or prosperity and harder work. We cannot have it both ways. Life is not made that way in the world to-day.

We may prefer poverty. We may see no cause for lamentation in the loss of world trade and world power. We may be willing to see unemployment spreading, and young men lounging on the dole.

But don't let us squeal if, having accepted the privilege of short hours and time to think, we find ourselves rather poverty-stricken on lower wages all round, and without work, even if we want it.

There is only one alternative, in my judgment. It is to get higher wages all round, greater national prosperity, lots of money to spend, by abolishing that limitation of output which is the curse of industrial England, from an economic point of view, and working a little longer and a little harder, not only in the lower ranks of our social life but in all ranks.

It is the secret of American wealth which some of us envy, though we profess to dislike it as a nasty, vulgar thing.

In the United States, wages are rising all the time. The standard of living, in a material way, is vastly higher than our own. Every family has its Ford car, and many other amenities and luxuries. It is done by speeding up production.

The "speeding-up" is too severe in some of their factories. They exaggerate that side of things, and the rich American often has no time to enjoy his money. But adopting the policy of the middle of the road, we should go half-way in their direction, or a little more than half. It is, I am certain, the only solution to our labour troubles.

Don't let wages be reduced. That means dragging down the standard of living, and limiting the expenditure of the individual upon which the general prosperity of the nation depends. Let wages be higher, if production is increased and cost reduced. Instead of cursing capital, let every working-man be a capitalist, as most of them are in the United States.

It would, of course, spoil the fine art of laziness which we have acquired as a national habit. In some ways it would be a loss to the charm of our leisured life. But it would help us to survive in a world of competition—and that seems worth while.

So that citizens affected by the increased rates may gain a correct idea of the change, The Examiner presents the following comparisons:

DOMESTIC LIGHTING

Local discount 10 per cent; prompt payment discount 10 per cent.

Flat Rate Water Heaters

The flat rate for water heaters is $40.00 per h.p. per annum.

A 660-watt heater, which is the usual type of flat rate heater installed in the city has been charged for at the rate of $2.16 net a month. Under the new rate the charge will be $2.97 net a month.

Examples of New Rates

The following are examples of the effect of the changes in domestic rates:

Mr. A. Water Street North—Last bill for two months $4.53 net. Figured on basis of new rate is $5.18, showing an increase of 65 cents for two months.

Mr. B. Brock Street, last bill for two months $16.59 net. Figured on basis of new rate is $17.47, showing an increase of 88 cents for two months.

An illustration of the effect of the change in commercial lighting is shown by comparing an account of a store on George Street, where the last bill, under the old rate, was $4.75, and under the new rate, for the same consumption, will be $5.09, an increase of 34 cents for one month.

The effect of the increase in power rates to users, will vary slightly according to the use made of the power. This illustration, however, will give an example of the effect. Assuming that a power user has an 80 h.p. peak, and an average consumption per month of 60 h.p., the increase to him over the former rate would be 17 per cent, and would still be lower than the charge for power in Toronto, Kingston, Ottawa, Welland, London, Kitchener, Galt and nearly all other cities in Ontario.

Billing.

The bills for commercial light and power, which are being delivered at present, are at the old rates, and cover consumption used up to January 31st, 1927.

The new rates will apply for these services in the next bills, which will cover consumption used during the period February 1st to 28th.

All bills for commercial services will be delivered at the beginning of each month, in future.

The new rates will come into effect with bills in district No. 1, which will be delivered during the first week in March. Domestic light and water bills will be delivered every two months, as heretofore.

CANTON FORCES ARE RETREATING FROM SHANGHAI

Southerners Driven From Base in Chekiang Province at Chucow.

SUPPLY SHORTAGE.

Nationalists Strongly Oppose Proposals of U. S. To Nutralize Shanghai.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 8 (Canadian Press).—The forces of Marshal Sun Chuan Fang thrust the Cantonese army farther away from Shanghai yesterday. They hurled it from the Cantonese advanced base in Chegiang province at Chuchow toward the border of Kiangsi province, some 200 miles from Shanghai.

Information from a trustworthy foreign source stated that Sun's troops captured Chuchow with a sudden assault, driving out the Cantonese.

The Cantonese shortage of ammunition and the difficulties of transportation, which it was known were hampering them, bear out the reports of northern success, which it is believed here means the removal of th Cantonese menace to Shanghai for the present at least.

Sun's forces are said to have been commanded by General Pai Pao-Shan. This disposes of the rumor of his betrayal of Sun by going over to the Cantonese army.

Fighting in this region has proceedgd for more than a week. The Cantonese at first were successful, forcing Sun's troops northward to Yenchow, where they dug in on the Tsientang River and awaited reinforcements. These came in large number from Hangchow and other northern Chekiang points.

Meanwhile, the Cantonese, whose army numbers 30,000, also received accessions to their ranks.

Cantonese Oppose

SHANGHAI, Feb. 8 (Canadian Press).—A Japanese dispatch from Hankow received yesterday states that the Nationalist (Cantonese) government is strongly opposed to the proposals of the United States Government to neutralize Shanghai, to prevent its becoming a battleground for the contending armies of the Peking government and the Nationalists.

Sun Fo, son of Sun Yat-Sen, founder of the Cantonese government and its first president, was quoted as saying:

"We see no necessity of having our own territory protected by foreigners."

The Nationalist Foreign Minister, Eugene Chen, was represented as having asserted that the blame for any troubles of Shanghai would be placed as due to the martial preparations of the British, who have ordered heavy military and naval concentration at Shanghai, and to Marshal Sun Chuan-Fang, who mobilized his troops to prevent the city's invasion by the Cantonese.

Bandits Choose Luxuries In Three New York Raids

NEW YORK, N.Y., Feb. 8.—(United News.) — Three gangs of bandits launched what seems to be luxury week of the better bandits' association to-day by robbing a cabaret, a tobacco company and a silk concern.

Five slick haired youngsters stuck up the scrub woman and porters of the Everglade cabaret in the rearing forties and removed $2,000 from the safe.

Three hundred bolts of satin valued at $40,000 were stolen through a neat hole chopped in the wall of the Arnat Silk Co., Inc.

At about the same time $5,000 worth of tobacco was loaded into a truck by strangers who visited the Gotham Tobacco Co.

ELLIOTS JOIN MONTREAL FIRM IN BIG MERGER

Local Firm Finds Expansion of Business Makes More Capital Necessary.

MARKET ARRANGED.

Plant Will Be Kept Operating at Full Capacity—Increase Possible.

Announcement is made to-day that another industry in Peterboro has found it necessary to enlarge its scope of affairs on account of increasing business and that the Elliot Manufacturing Company Limited has concluded a transaction involving amalgamation with the Knitters Limited of Marieville, Que.

The Elliot Manufacturing Company Limited was originally founded by T. C. Elliot who, in company with his son V. V. Elliot, formerly carried on a retail business here and branched out in 1920 into the manufacturing trade by making darning cards and skeins. The firm expanded from that into the knitting of infants' garments and Elliot's "Baby Lamb Wool" became a name synonymous with high quality among the trade. The business continued to grow and in 1925 the firm decided to incorporate into a limited liability company with an authorized capital of $150,000, of which a considerable amount was subscribed locally. Last spring the Elliotts branched out into manufacturing their own yarn and installed spinning machinery in their plant. Their business expanded to such a stage that it was necessary to find quite a large block of outside capital to handle the ever increasing trade. This transaction has just been successfully concluded with the Knitters Limited of Marieville, Que.

Speaking to A. J. Reynolds, manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, Elliot's bankers, today in the absence of Mr. Elliot who is in Montreal The Examiner learned that the Knitters Limited is a first class concern in every regard with a paid up capital of over half a million dollars. It is controlled by J. Alfred Ouellette and John R. Ouellette of Monreal, who also have the controlling interest in another wealthy concern, the Acme Glove Works of Montreal. The Knitters' Limited are in a position, if necessary, to take all the output of the Elliot factory and the amalgamation of the two concerns will mean wonderfully increased prosperity to the Peterboro plant. Mr. Elliot expects to keep his factory working at its full capacity night and day with the prospect also of early expansion and Peterboro citizens generally will be pleased to hear of the new merger attracting so much capital and influence to the city.

This is the second group of Montreal capitalists recently to take an interest in Peterboro industries. The business public will recall a similar reorganization of the William Hamilton Limited about a year ago that is proving so successful at the present time.

ALBERT DEBRUCE TO BE TRIED ON MURDER CHARGE

Set Fire To Home While His Wife Was Alone in Dwelling.

WITNESSES HEARD.

Son Believed His Father Had Set Fire To House.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., Feb. 8. — Canadian Press. — Albert Debruce was formally committed for trial here yesterday afternoon for the murder on Jan. 8 last of his common law wife, Jane Lameront, formerly of Ottawa, who had been left alone in her residence at 11 o'clock the previous night while Debruce and his son George went hunting, and their daughter, the only other occupant of the dwelling, was sent to the home of her grandmother, a few rods away. The fire was discovered between 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning and a search the following afternoon revealed the badly burned remains of the woman lying among the debirs in the basement.

Several witnesses were examined yesterday but the most important evidence was given by S. J. Elliott who, until last week, was the provincial officer located here. Elliott swore he took charge of the case on Sunday, January 9, when he inspected the ruins, and following inquiries among the neighbors the next day placed Debruce under arrest. In his possession the accused had receipts for eight thousand dollars worth of bonds, Elliot said. He also swore that in the bee house at the Debruce farm he had found an apparatus consisting of a pasteboard box containing kindling wood with carpet rags attached, and a candle, which were produced in court.

Carpentering tools had been found also in the garage on the Debruce farm, which had previously been kept in a workshop over the woodshed.

To Gordon Henderson, counsel for Debruce, Elliott admitted the candle, wood and rags might have been placed in the bee house after the fire.

George Debruce, son of the accused, had shown the witness how the apparatus worked, and said that his father, after the arrest, had asked him to destroy the box.

Elliott said George told him that it was intended to use this apparatus to set fire to the barn of a neighbor named Joyce, but the boy told the witness he would not use it for such a purpose when his father had requested him to do so. Albert Debruce wanted the fire trap set because there had been trouble over horses for which the prisoner had served part of a term in the penitentiary.

George, Elliott stated, had told him that he believed his father had set the fire which burned his mother." At his home the night before the fire George asked Miss Maud Prue to stay with his mother until Sunday, but his father gave him a "wicked look" at the time and he did not press the invitation.

George corroborated Elliott's evidence and added that while he was filling the radiator of his car on the night before the fire, and shortly before they left the house he heard a squeaking of steps as though his father had gone up the back stairs to his workshop over the woodshed.

In earlier testimony the mother and sister of the accused, who were the first to discover the fire, admitted that the woodshed, which had been attacked to the dwelling, was destroyed before they arrived. On examination, Elliott said he had tested a candle and found it would burn an inch in 45 minutes.

William J. McCoy testified that after the fire, Debruce told him he would give him $200 a month to hide him until spring, when he could make a getaway.

During the morning of the fire, McCoy said, Debruce was alone in a field in the rear of McCoy's house keeping watch on all parties entering his (McCoy's) home. He had also threatened to shoot any man who came after him.

C.P.R. AGENT FOILS EXPRESS ROBBERY

Wires Ahead For Police To Investigate Light in Sealed Car.

BELLEVILLE, Feb. 8.—An attempt at organized train robbery was frustrated this morning through the quick action of the Canadian Pacific agent at Wilkinson. As train No. 41, bound from Montreal to Toronto, sped through his station at 2.30 a.m., G. E. Dopking, who was on duty at the time, noticed a light in the forward express car, which is invariably sealed at Montreal for Toronto. He immediately wired to Belleville, and when the train drew in, Canadian Pacific Railway constables were able to effect the arrest of three or four men who had broken into the car, and were waiting in a dead-head passenger coach behind the tender for the train to pull out before resuming operations. Their depradations to the time of their arrest meant the loss to the express company of five pounds of chocolates. The three train robbers captured were arraigned before the magistrate here this morning and remanded for one week, during which time it is expected that the arrest of their confederates will be effected.

This is the first attempt at train robbery to be recorded by the Canadian Pacific Express Company since the days of Bill Miner, and Mr. Dopking is in line for the president's reward to anyone instrumental in effecting the arrest of persons engaged in crimes of this nature.

ROUTINE WORK FOR PARLIAMENT ON RE-ASSEMBLY

Government and Private Bills To Be Introduced To-day.

NO CEREMONY.

No Government Business But Supply On Order Paper at Present.

OTTAWA, Feb. 8 (Canadian Press). — Without pomp or ceremony, Canada's sixteenth Parliament will re-assemble to-day after a long recess. Unless the unexpected happens, the House of Commons will find only the work-a-day routine on the orders of the day. Government business has the right-of-way, after the introduction of bills. A number of private bills will be read into the record, as will, no doubt, some Government bills. It is not likely they will be debated to-day. There are some interesting bills to come up, notably one affecting the power rights in the Ottawa River.

Of Government business, there is nothing on the order paper but supply. A few millions of supplementary estimates for the current year remain to be voted. After that motions and resolutions of private members occupy the order paper, and to-day may resolve itself into a private members' day after all. Just what will be taken up has not been decided. The Cabinet Council and a meeting of whips are scheduled for this morning.

BRITISH HOPE KELOGG'S PLAN WILL REMOVE DANGER OF WAR

Officials Optimistic About Result of Neutralization Suggestion.

SOLUTION OFFERED.

Chang Pledges Safety of Foreigners—Renews War on Bolshevism.

LONDON, Feb. 8. — (United Press.)— Solution of the problem of foreigners in the Yangtse Valley and removal of the last vestige of danger of a clash between Chinese and foreign forces may result, the British government believed to-day, from Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg's suggestion that the international settlement at Shanghai be neutralized.

From pessimism over the potency of the neutralization suggestion Britain has turned to optimism. The authorities were speculating to-day on the possibility of a solution as follows:

1. Obtaining the agreement of the Cantonese Nationalists to Kellogg's suggestion.

2. Diversion of British troops now en route to Shanghai, to some other Far East port.

An authorative spokesman informed the United Press that the British believed the events of the week end had almost removed the possibility of fighting between the white and yellow races in China.

It offers the people protection, but expects their hearty co-operation, "since we are fighting for a common cause."

Audience Cheers McCormack Demanding Many Encores

LONDON, Feb. 8.—(United Press.)—An enraptured audience at Albert Hall caused John McCormack, Irish tenor, to increase his scheduled programme of twelve songs to twenty-two yesterday. McCormack, whose return to London after an absence of eighteen months, was a triumph of the season, approached the record set by Ben Davies, a Welshman, who once sang twenty-nine songs on a single programme. He opened with his favorite old Italian airs and then after a group of French and German songs brought the programme to an enthusiastically received climax with Irish ballads.

The audience rose and cheered him after the last number.

BROAD MINDED FAVOR CHANGES

Believe Prayer Book Revision Wise and Prudent Compromise.

SOME FEAR SCHISM.

LONDON, Feb. 8 (Canadian Press). — Initial comments on the revision of the Book of Common Prayer, announced yesterday at a meeting of the two Synods of the English Church, York and Canterbury, seem to promise that the changes will be welcomed by broad-minded persons as a wise and prudent compromise between extreme views. Foremost among the deep doctrinal matters on which the two extreme parties of the Church are divided are reservation of the Sacrament, whereby the officiating clergyman may set aside at Communion a portion of the consecrated elements to be used later for the sick, and the inauguration of prayers for the dead. Around these is raging a conflict which some fear may end in a bitter hopeless schism in the Church of England.

School Children Sing Dirge At the Funeral

TOKIO, Feb. 8 (United Press).-Japanese school children chanted this dirge, specially written for the ministry of education by Dr. Y. Haga, with music by the Tokio Academy, at the funeral of the late Emperor Yoshihito last night;

"The Land of the Rising Sun is in sorrow.

"As prayers for the recovery of our late emperor were futile.

"We cannot help shedding tears on this funeral day.

"And our souls, chilled by the wintry blasts of February.

"Await with anguish for the coming of the spring."

The debonair Prince, however, recovered quickly, and flashed one of his roguish smiles as he left the House.

KING DISCUSSES CHINA PROBLEM IN HIS ADDRESS

Says Britain Desires To Remove Grievances and Establish Good Will.

OPENS PARLIAMENT.

British House Opened To-day With Time Honored Ceremonies.

LONDON, Feb. 8 — (Canadian Press.)— The third session of the present British Parliament, elected in 1924, was opened in state by King George with the time honored ceremony to-day. Huge crowds lined the streets to see the Royal procession. Queen Mary accompanied the King to Parliament for the ceremony. The Speech from the Throne was unusually brief and was mainly devoted to the Chinese problem.

His Majesty explained that it had been deemed necessary to send to China an adequate force to protect British subjects, because of happenings at Hankow and other places, but emphasized that it was the desire of the British people to "remove all grievances, renew our treaties on an equitable basis, and to place our future relations with the Chinese people on a footing of friendship and good will."

The King expressed pleasure over encouraging signs of improvement in trade and industry and hoped those engaged in industries would do their utmost to prevent the arresting of the improvement of industrial strife.

A bill would be presented, His Majesty said, to encourage the production and exhibition of British motion pictures.

The briefness of the King's speech was due partly to the Government's decision to drop cetrain proposed measures from its programme in hopes of making the parliametnary session as short as possible so that Premier Baldwin may visit Canada, the intention being, it is understood, to adjourn in July or early August.

Aldermen Consider Investigation of Power From Otonabee River Sources.

TO MAKE INQUIRIES.

Information Booth For Tourists Suggested—Slippery Walks Discussed.

Peterborough will co-operate with the other municipalities in the Central Ontario system of the Hydro-Electric Power Commission in the meeting to be held in Cobourg next week. The advisability of securing the power rights on the Otonabee River for development by the city was also stressed by several of the Aldermen at last night's meeting of the City Council, and the Manufacturers' Committee asked to secure information.

The discussion ensued when a letter from the City Clerk of Oshawa asking the participation of Peterborough in the meeting, was taken up. Ald. Denne discussed the matter of power from Burleigh and Dams Four and Five. He said that in the past Council had turned down the Kendry (Auburn) dam. Now he understood it was possible for the city to lease these other power sites, which were capable of being developed to give 3,000 horse-power each. There should be some way of co-operating with the local Utilities Commission about getting power. If the city expected to get manufacturers it must have power. Some manufacturers in the city, he understood, would like to get the rights at Burleigh. The day was coming when the whole Central Ontario system would be flattened out and Peterborough would have to pay the piper. Now the cement company has a contract for its Belleville plant, and Peterborough and other municipalities pay.

A year ago, continued Ald. Denne, the city was told it would have to buy the street railway or it would be closed down. It is not closed yet. The city might have to buy the railway and the gas plant too to get its birthright back and possess the power rights at Burleigh and Dam 5, and also at Auburn. He urged a conference with the Prime Minister to see what could be done, and in closing moved that Peterborough be represented at the Cobourg meeting.

Ald. Ackerman said that there had been many arguments and confusing reports about the power possibilities north of the city. He urged consideration of the future before committing the city to any course. Few people knew the exact power situation in the city, and he could see no chance of finding out.

Ald. Phelan suggested the engaging of a competent independent engineer to prepare a report on the power available. It would cost money, he said, but the city would know then where it stood, and would be the proper process before going to the Government.

Ald. Denne thought that the Government should be asked for information as to what could be done before spending money.

Ald. Macdonald said the manufacturers were the backbone of the city, and more could not be secured unless the power cost could be kept down. It was up to the Council to do something quickly.

Ald. Denne said that he was not suggesting breaking away from the Hydro, but that he thought that if the power were at the dams it should be used, especially if it could be got cheaper. Mayor Holloway suggested co-operation of all the municipalities of Central Ontario in their own power system, and concurred with Ald. Denne's contention that when the sinking fund to be raised had been completed the system should belong to the municipalities.

Well Babies' Clinic.

The Aldermen listened last night to a comprehensive lecture on the benefits derived by the mothers and babies of the city from the Well Babies' Clinic. Dr. Jessie Birnie, Mrs. Stevenson and Mrs. Mowat appeared as a delegation from the clinic, asking that the usual grant be made, but suggesting that an increase would enable the work to be better carried out. Dr. Birnie outlined the workings of the clinic and its growth from an average of five children at a meeting to twenty. She quoted Dr. McCullough, Provincial M.O.H., as saying that no health work compared in importance with that for mothers and babies.

Louis Yeates' application for the renewal of his eating house license was refused. Ald. Denne, whose motion to this effect carried, said that he didn't think it was an eating house, but the counter was in for a convenience and for the sale of other things. He said that if the licence were granted it should be on the understanding that it should be

POMP AND GRANDEUR FEATURES OPENING OF BRITISH PARLIAMENT

King and Queen To Take Part in Military Procession.

COLOR COSTUMES.

Reads Summary of Conditions in His Realm From Throne.

LONDON, Feb. 8 (Canadian Press).—The state procession and ceremony of the opening of the British Parliament at Westminster at noon today is one of the sights of London.

At eleven o'clock the King in uniform, and Queen Mary resplendent in ermine and jewels, enter the royal coach of shining gold and glass. Six white horses pull it away from Buckingham Palace.

Just outside the gates the coach rolls into its place in the royal procession to parliament, and is surrounded by the king's personal bodyguard of beef-eaters from the ancient Tower of London in colorful mediaeval uniform. Preceding and following the coach are detachments of cavalry, with sparkling breastplates and helmets with tossing red plumage.

Mounted bands set up stirring music, cavalry prances and clatters, orders are shouted, crowds cheer in a quiet, dignified London manner, the King and Queen bow slightly from the windows of the Cinderella coach, and the whole pageant of royal splendor moves up the broad Mall, which is lined with troops and packed with crowds.

It is the best royal show in England, and the King's subjects throng to see it. From dawn they gather at points of vantage to watch the King and Queen go by.

An hour before the procession passes, traffic is barred from the route. Workmen cover the streets with a golden sand, so the royal parade seems to passing over a roadway that has never been marred by the hoofprints of lowly work horses or stained by oil from plebian motor trucks.

Up the Mall, through the Admiralty Arch a fleeting glimpse and a stately bow for the crowds in Trafalgar Square, and the King and Queen and all their royal party turn sharply into Whitehall. They pass the old palace, government buildings, Downing Street and the cenotaph, more government buildings, cross Parliament Square, where the crowds are densest, pass the rear of Westminster Abbey and finally disappear from public view through the arch of the Victoria tower of the House of Lords.

Their Majesties retire to robing rooms, to appear a little later in the chamber of the House of Lords, where the peers and peeresses of the realm and the diplomatic corps await them.

Then the final scene of parliamentary pageantry is enacted. The nobles are garbed in long robes of royal red; their wives in court dress, set off by sparkling tiaras, foreign ambassadors and ministers attend in uniform with gold braid and merals and decorations on their breasts.

The United States ambassador to the Court of Saint James in severe evening dress, once was conspicuous by his simplicity in this colorful array, but nowadays diplomats from South America, from Germany, Czecho-Slovakia and other European republics appear in democratic garb.

In a gallery to the rear, members of the House of Commons crowd their way to watch the ceremony. Even the most radical of Laborites troop across their chamber to see the regal display.

Soft lights play on the throne chairs as the royal procession enters the House of Lords. Peer bow deeply and peeresses curtsey with the unison of a well-trained chorus. King George extends his arm to Queen Mary, assists her up several steps to her seat, and then follows her.

An official hands the King a parchment roll—the Speech from the Throne—and the King, unrolling it, stands before the hushed assembly and reads in clear deep tones the brief summary of conditions in his realm, comments briefly on foreign affairs, and outlines broadly what may be expected in the field of legislation during the forthcoming session of parliament. When he has finished, the royal procession reforms, their Majesties depart to their state coach, the cavalry forms about it again, and the procession retraces its way to Buckingham Palace through the crowds that have waited for its return.

After the soldiers and the King depart from Westminster, the members of the House of Commons troop into their cushioned benches and begin the serious business of Great Britain's parliamentary government. The House of Lords has enjoyed its brief hour of pageantry. For the remainder of the parliamentary session the ears of the nation are held by the House of Commons.

Purchase Value Of Wages Rises Higher Than 1914

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—The average "real" weekly wage of industrial workers—the measure of the purchasing power of the pay envelope—was higher in the latter part of 1926 than at any time since early 1924, the National Industrial Conference Board disclosed yesterday.

Study revealed that while there was a general slowing up of business at the end of the year, "real" wages in November were twenty-eight per cent higher than in August, 1914 — the start of the World War.

Has Discovered Violin Varnish Said To Produce Same Tonal Qualities Of a Genuine Stradinvarius

PARIS, Feb. 8.—Quiroga Losada, the well-known violinist, asserts that he has discovered a varnish which, when applied to the ordinary modern violin, will produce the same marvellous tonal qualities o a Stradivarius.

"I believe I have brought back to life the magnificent tones of the great master," Losanda said today.

"After years of research I came to the conclusion that it was in the varnish of the Stradivarius instruments that the secret of the amazing smoothness of sound rested, and I have produced a varnish which I hope soon to give free to the musicians of the world for the benefit of art."

Critics who have listened to instruments after watching him apply the varnish say the effect is almost unbelieveable. With not more than thirty-five genuine Stradivariuses in existence, Losanda's theory and formula, it is declared, are of great importance to music.

closed on Sundays. Mayor Holloway said that the point had been discussed when Chen's place was being opened up. There was no comparison between the two places, he said.

A public meeting will be called shortly to consider plans for a celebration on Dominion Day to mark the sixtieth anniversary of Confederation.

Mayor Holloway was commissioned to obtain a suitable souvenir for presentation to Miss Martin for her services in giving notice of two dangerous fires in the business section of the city.

The Tax Collector was ordered, on motion of Alderman Phelan, to return the 1926 roll immediately.

Tourist Information.

An information booth for tourists, to be located on the edge of the highway, just west of the Monaghan Road, was the suggestion of Ald. Greene, and was endorsed by the Council. He proposed the use of the house built for the skaters at the west end rink as the booth, and the hiring of some young man or woman on vacation. His reason for advocating such a place was that a great proportion of those visiting the city do not call at the Chamber of Commerce office, while most of them would see the booth at the roadside. Literature could be distributed and information given out. A committee was appointed to consider the matter further.

Ald. Ackerman, on behalf of the Humane Society, asked for a grant to aid in the work, stating that most cities give such assistance.

Whether or not the city could stop sleigh-riding on the streets was debated. Some of the Aldermen feared an accident that would result in the city being found responsible. Ald. Cotton said that this was a reason for providing a slide at Jackson Park.

Ald. Hancock proposed the use of a drag for breaking up the ice on the sidewalks. He said that the city was relying too much on the fact that a policy was held to cover accidents and was taking no steps to prevent them. Mr. Parsons said that the city spent $870 in looking after slippery sidewalks, and that the drag proposed would make the walking worse instead of better. Mayor Holloway said that those who sought damages should not be paid as gross negligence could not be proved against the city.

Richard Hall was re-appointed to the City Trust Commission. A proposition presented by F. G. Stinson of the Chamber of Commerce for advertising in Ackerman's Sporting Guide was referred to the Manufacturers' Committee for consideration when the estimates are struck.

OLD MASTERS

Out of the night that covers me,
Black as the pit from pole to pole,
I thank whatever gods may be
For my unconquerable soul.

In the fell clutch of circumstance
I have not winced nor cried aloud.
Under the bludgeonings of chance
My head is bloody, but unbow'd.

Beyond this place of wrath and tears
Looms but the horror of the shade,
And yet the menace of the years
Finds and ahall find me unafraid.

It matters not how strait the gate,
How charged with punishments the scroll,
I am the master of my fate:
I am the captain of my soul.

BRITAIN MAY DIVERT TROOPS

Understood Idea Was Seriously Entertained at Cabinet Session Yesterday.

NOT CONFIRMED.

LONDON, Feb. 8. Canadian Press—Although no decision has been reached, it is understood that the ministers at yesterday's four hour cabinet session seriously entertained the idea of deflecting the British defence force, now en route to Shanghai, from Hong Kong.

It was reported but could not be confirmed officially that Charge d' affaires O'Malley who had been negotiating with the Cantonese foreign minister, at Hankow, himself counsels this course as facilitating a resumption of the negotiations which were suspended when Chen objected to the concentration of large British forces at Shanghai.

The cabinet session had before it the latest developments in the Chinese situation as imparted Minister Miles W. Lampson at Peking and Charge d'affaires O'Malley during the week end. Much of the future course of Great Britain will naturally depend on the movement of affairs in China and it is expected the question of deflecting Shanghai defence forces will be allowed to simmer pending the outcome of Secretary of State Kellogg's suggestion at Washington that the area of Shanghai be excluded from the fighting in China.

It is felt that there is no urgency in making a definite decision pending the approach of British transports to Chinese waters, and for the present the matter remains in the hands of the war office, where no fresh orders have yet been issued.

It was understood that the view of the ministers is that when other treaty powers are holding forces for the defence of their interests within easy reach of Shanghai, it will be easier for the British government to adopt the same attitude.

A report reached London yesterday from Shanghai that Marshal Sun Chuan Fang's forces had captured Chuchow, the advanced base of the Cantonese armies, in Chekiang, and that the Cantonese were retreating to the southwest. If this report is confirmed, it would remove much apprehension over the safety of Shanghai, and it is considered here that one solution might be for the foreign colonies in Shanghai to announce satisfaction with the arrangement of holding the protective forces within easy reach, instead of landing them at Shanghai.

The cabinet will meet almost daily while the crisis continues. The feeling in official quarters tonight is more optimistic than for a long time past, mainly owing to Secretary Kellogg's proposal.

One prominent ministerialist said: "I believe the situation will resolve itself more happily and quickly than the public is inclined to think."

REVOLTS SWEEPING WHOLE OF PORTUGAL

Revolutionary Movement in Support of Oporto Rebels Grips Lisbon.

LONDON, Feb. 8 (Canadian Press).—Portugal, north and south, is in the grip of revolutionary activities. Attention was partly drawn yesterday from the serious situation at Oporto, where the war minister's strong measures have not yet succeeded in compelling the surrender of the revolutionary leaders, to what appear to be far graver events in Lisbon itself. A brief message which passed the censorship reported a revolutionary movement against the government in the capital and in support of the Oporto rebels. This movement, it was stated, was receiving active assistance from both police and the people.

After that the censorship closed down on outgoing messages and no details as to whether the movement has been successful are available.

With President Carmona, who also holds the portfolio of war, absent directing the military operations against the Oporto revolutionists, it is feared that events at Lisbon may take an extremely serious turn, and further advices are awaited with the greatest anxiety.

In the meantime the government's drastic steps, both in the way of reinforcements and bombardments, have failed to bring the Oporto rebels to terms, although here again, owing to strict censorship, it is difficult to ascertain the exact course of events.

There seems no doubt, however, that heavy fighting has been going on and that the bombardments have done real damage to the city. Hundreds of casualties were reported, while public buildings such as the post office have been burned.

GIRLS DROWNED IN OLD CANAL

Pair Were Reported Missing From Port Dalhousie Homes.

ALL NIGHT SEARCH.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Feb. 8.— (Canadian Press.) — Cecilia Howe and Ruth Baker, two 15-year-old Port Dalhousie girls, were found drowned off Muir's Point, old Welland canal, near the Royal Canadian Henley rowing course yesterday morning. The girls had been skating on the old canal Sunday afternoon, and after sending their skates home, went for a walk.

Their failure to return home on Sunday night caused a search to be made, which lasted all night, but without result until some time after daylight yesterday morning. The bodies were found close together, only a few feet from the bank. The girls are the eldest daughters of William Howe and Joseph Baker, life-long residents of Port Dalhousie.

LEAGUE SERVICE.

Regular Gathering Held On Thursday Evening at Petherick's Corners.

PETHERICK' CORNERS, Feb. 8.—The League service on Thursday evening was in charge of the devotional convener, Mr. Thomas Fry, with Stewart Nelson as leader. In spite of a very severe storm of wind and rain thirty-three attended with the colors again almost tied. At the next meeting the results of the contest to date will announced.

The programme consisted of devotional hymns; scripture reading, Mrs. Fred Barnum; devotional talk, Thomas Fry, and the topic, "What Does Our Church Teach About Ourselves," by Rev. Mr. Daniel, who conducted the topic in the nature of a discussion period, this proving interesting and helpful.

It was decided that the Young People's League of St. John's, Campbellford, should be invited for a social evening on the night of February 17th, this being the night set for the first of the inter-league debating series. Messrs. Wilbert Kingston and Cecil Stephens are the Campbellford debaters while Earl Fairman and Lindsay Anderson will try to uphold the cause at Zion. The subject is "Resolved that the inventor has done more to promote human happiness than has the legislator." The Campbellford team has the affirmative.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 8.—(Canadian Press.)—Amendments to the Live Stock Act may be submitted to Parliament this session. Complaints have been made to the Federal Dapartment of Agriculture by live stock men in different parts of the Dominion that there is need for amendment of the Act to make easier the management of stock yards, the control of sales and the rendering of accounts to vendors. MANY CHANGES IN PRAYER BOOK Announced To Convocation of Two Synods of English Church.

FIRST IN 265 YEARS.

Henceforth, Will Be Known as "Alternative" Prayer Book.

LONDON, Feb. 8 (Canadian Press).—The first changes in the book of common prayer for 265 years were announced in a hushed silence to the convocation of the two great synods of the English Church, Canterbury and York, sitting yesterday for the first time in over a century when the Archbishop of Canterbury picked up from the table in front of him a green covered book. It was what henceforth will be known as the "alternative" prayer book, and consists of the old book of common prayer with a number of permissive alternative forms of service. These are the compromised results of long church deliberations over matters of rites and practices, which have been the subject of heated controversy between the Evangelical, or low, church, and the Anglo-Catholic or high church.

The principal changes concern the dropping of the word "obey" from the marriage service, questions of reservation of the Sacrament, the use of vestments in the Communion service, softening of the comminations service and authorizing prayers for the dead in the burial service and the making of the Athanasian creed optional.

Although many concessions are made to ritualists, any service or ceremony of adoration of the Sacrament is expressly forbidden. The right of ministers to retain the use of the old book of common prayer is absolute, neither his bishop nor his congregation can compel him to use the alternative services. But his right to use the new forms is not unqualified. He cannot force them on his congregation without their consent.

The Archbishop of York is understood to have long resisted certain alterations in the marriage service. These include "softening" of prayer. For instance, the prayer that "they may be fruitful in the procreation of children" now becomes "bestow the heritage and gift of children."

Furthermore, references to Abraham and his wife, Sara, and other patriarchs disappear. The baptismal service omits the phrase, "all men are conceived and born in sin," while the new service at cremation reads, "commit the body to be consumed by fire."

Among the combinations now considered archaic, and discarded, is "cursed is he that removeth his neighbor's landmark."

All prelates and high dignitaries of the Church had been invited to attend yesterday's convocation, which was held at the Church House in Westminster. The changes must be approved by the present convocation, by the house of bishops in March, by the National Assembly in July and by Parliament.

That the alternative suggestions, even if ultimately adopted by Parliament, will not find universal acceptance in the church, is shown by the fact that the Bishop of Norwich, a prominent evangelical, dissociates himself from his colleagues in the convocation on the Sacrament changes. The Bishop of Birmingham, in an interview last night, also was unable to concur in all the proposed changes. He considered perpetual reservation of the Sacrament "a dangerous innovation," regretted the disappearance of uniformity and feared that laxity might lead to abuse.

The Bishop of Birmingham thinks that permission for extemporary prayer by priests at the end of the services may lead to invocation of the saints and that there would be no safeguards against a further drift in the direction of Rome. He says that under the new rules it may be possible for the consecrated elements to be placed in a tabernacle or "hanging pyx" with a red lamp burning before it.

"Simple people," he added, "then will be taught to pray before, or to the elements. Thus the whole cultus of trans-substantiation can be set going, not as an illegality, but with the apparent consent of the Church."

STARTS CAREER AT $3 A WEEK; NOW OFFERS FORD $1,000,000,000

One and Nine Ciphers Looks Easy To John Wing Prentiss.

JOLTS WALL STREET.

Still Gets a Thrill When the Exchange Opens in Morning.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8—Even Wall Street, the blase, with its plungers, it's bull-baiters, bear-hunters and seasoned traders in millions, was startled.

Here was a man, so testimony at the Ford tax case hearing at Washington revealed, who sat in a witness chair and glibly told how three times within the past ten years he had made a cash offer to buy out the flivver magnate for a billion dollars—one with nine ciphers after it.

John Wing Prentiss is the man. He is senior partner in the firm of Hornblower & Weeks.

John W. Prentiss.

He is 51, black haired, brown eyed, tanned by yachting, alert, dressed in faultlessly tailored blue, grandson of a New England shipowner and leather merchant, great-grandson of the Wing family which settled on a farm in 1636 in Cambridge, directly opposite the Harvard gate.

There is the summary of this keen-eyed, friendly voiced individual who goes about making huge bids as if he were buying a dime's worth of two-cent stamps.

This is the first time in financial history a $1,000,000,000 offer has been made for any individual property.

"How would you go about raising $1,000,000,000 to buy out Mr. Ford?" he was asked.

"Wall Street was jolted when news of the offer leaked out," he replied, "but you'll note experienced financiers were not skeptical. They agreed the deal could have been swung easily, with prospects of over-subscription. Ownership could be transferred in one week. Stiff credit would be necessary but it could be obtained.

"I am senior member of a firm of thirteen partners. We act in concert with other Wall Street firms who would have participated in any offering of new Ford securities had not Mr. Ford laughed at our bid and turned it down.

"Shifting of funds would have been greater than at any time since the flotation of Liberty bond issues during the war. We would face the task of collecting enormous amounts of money from all parts of the country as small and large investors sold other securities to get funds to buy the new Ford shares.

"We look upon the Ford Motor company as the most wonderful, the most remarkable single industry in the world. Its securities on the market would have the highest value of any in the automobile class."

This man who talks in billions says he got the biggest "kick" out of his financial life when as a boy I walked the streets of Boston, picked out the biggest office building in town, blindly went in and landed a job for the munificent salary of $3 a week!"

Prentiss made his own way to the top. He later peddled stocks and bonds around Boston. Then he came to New York, still as a salesman for a Boston house. He saved his commission, purchased interests, and gradually advanced to his present peak.

"The average person out in this country who picks up a paper and reads about this billion dollar bid is going to growl and vent his spleen against the blankety-blank capitalists," continued Prentiss.

"Every swindler who happens to operate anywhere near Trinity Church is represented as being a typical Wall Street man. This is a different vintage here in 1927. The public still thinks of the Black Friday era.

"I have been in Wall Street for 31 years—I have been more or less intimate with all its leading characters—and I can truthfully say that not in a single instance did the desire to make money constitute the chief incentive of any one of them.

"Life is a game. I still get a thrill when the exchange opens in the morning. It is like the curtain of the biggest show on earth going up.

"How to win the game? Easy," he says. "Simply make a lot of friends."

HOTEL KEEPERS ASK FOR RIGHT TO SERVE BEER

Wish To Serve It With Meals in Main Dining Room.

TO THEIR GUESTS.

Conservative Members Holding Caucus To Discuss Liquor Legislation.

TORONTO, Feb. 8 (Canadian Press).—After a private meeting of the executive of the Ontario Hotelkeepers' Association to-day, George O'Neill, Toronto, left for the Parliament Buildings after stating that the hotels were going to ask "that the hotels be allowed to serve beer and wine with the meals in the main dining-rooms." Mr. O'Neill is quoted as adding, "We feel that we should be allowed to serve beer and wine to guests who wish to have such drinks with their meals."

The Conservative members of the Legislature were in caucus this afternoon, discussing the Government control legislation which is to be introduced during the session.

ST. LAWRENCE PLAN WILL BE ADVANCED

Prediction of Advocates That Negotiatoins Will Start Soon.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—(Canadian Press.)—The prediction that negotiatoins will be begun the coming spring or summer between Ottawa and Washington on the improvement of the St. Lawrence river is made here by the foremost advocates of the St. Lawrence lakes to the sea project:

It is predicted that such negotiations will get under way not long after the Hon. Vincent Massey comes here as Canadian Minister and the Hon. William Phillips assumes his duties as United States' minister to Canada.

Strong pressure will be exerted by the backers of the St. Lawrence project in this country to have the treaty ready for submission to the regular session of Congress next December.

Mr. Phillips is said to be friendly to the St. Lawrence improvement.

Crown Life Has Big Year's Gain

New Insurance Shows 20 Per Cent Increase — Company Doubling In Size Each Four Years.

A substantial increase in new business over the previous year and continued progress in all departments, were shown by the directors' report, presented by Director H. Victor Cawthra and General Manager H. R. Stephenson of the Crown Life Insurance Company at the annual meeting held at the company's head office, Toronto, on Monday, February 7th.

Amount of policies issued during the past year was $22,314,509, an increase of 20 per cent. over the amount of new business written in the previous year. Insurance in force on Dec. 31st was $72,443,853, also an increase of 20 per cent. A review of figures for the past nine years showed that the insurance in force had increased to this amount from $17,398,195 in 1918, and that at this rate the size of the company is doubling every four years.

The report showed that interest at the average rate of 6.81 per cent. had been realized on assets during the year, without prejudice to the security of principal. About one-half of the total assets of $8,697,234 comprised mortgages on real estate, on which less than two thousand dollars of interest is in arrear for even one day. Bonds and debentures represent about one-quarter of total assets on which there is practically no interest in arrear.

The policyholders' reserve of $7,480,780.30 was shown to be more than adequate to guarantee fulfilment of all outstanding polic obligations. The increased scale of dividends to policy holders' adopted a year ago, will be continued with further slight increases on certain plans.

The report stated that "it is the aim of the company to provide insurance of the most complete and satisfactory type to its clients. We shall continue to effect improvements in our policy provisions as experience warrants and in fact to improve our entire service to the highest possible point of efficiency.

Reference was made to the passing of the late estemed President, Mr. G. T. Somers, who had held that office for 18 years ,and to his unfailing cheerfulness and helpfulness in the face of the trying illness of his later years. Special reference was made to the election of the late President's son, Mr. C. W. Somers, to the directorate.

Thre new directors were elected to the Board: Messrs. H. D. Burns, F. Erichsen Brown and C. W. Somers; Mr. John K. Kent was re-elected President, Mr. A. H. Walker, Vice-President, and other directors re-elected were Sir Charles H. Tupper and Messrs. R. W. Morson, F. R. McD. Russell, G. O. Somers, John F. Ellis, David Wood and H. V. Cawthra.

The chair was taken by Mr. H. Victor Cawthra in the absence through illness of the President, Mr. John G. Kent.

"Shorts" Battle For Shares Of Wheeling and L. E. Line

NEW YORK, Feb. 8 (Canadian Press).—Panic stricken "shorts" in the Common and Preferred stocks of the Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad, faced with ruin as a result of the passing of control of that railroad from the Rockefeller interests to the New York Central, Baltimore and Ohio, and "Nickel Plate" railroads, and the withdrawal of large blocks of stock from the open market, bid franctically against each other on the New York Stock Exchange in an effort to cover their commitments, the Common stock soaring 25 points to 120, or more than four times the year's low, and the preferred 13 1-2 points to 93 in the first hour of trading.

Strength Of Laval Quebec Features Slow Weak Market

TORONTO, Feb. 8.—(Canadian Press).— Laval Quebec was outstanding for its strength and activity in the generally slow list on the standard mining exchange this morning. The stock sold up from an opening mark of 35 to 39, which was a net gain of three points. Castle Tretheway, up three at 116, was another firm spot. Noranda eased 20 at 21.05 and Barry Hollinger, in which a fifth of the morning's turnover was centred, eased 2 1-2 at 67 1-2. Amulet lost two at 155 and Area lost one at 56.

Wheat Prices Stronger On News From Abroad

CHICAGO, Feb. 8 (Canadian Press). — Firmness at Liverpool tended to steady Chicago wheat today in the early dealings. Nearby deliveries were in good demand abroad and the forvign crop outlook unfavorable. Opening unchanged to 3-8 cent higher, wheat here held close to initial figures. Corn, oats, and provisions were easy, corn starting unchanged to a shade up, but later undergoing a slight sag.

Opening prices were: Wheat: May 141 3-8; July 134 3-8; Corn: May, 81 1-8; July 84 3-8. Oats: May 47, July unquoted.

Massey Harris Leader On Toronto Market To-day

TORONTO, Feb. 8 (Canadian Press)—Massey Harris developed into the dominating and strong leader on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Climbing to a high of 78, Massay Harris eased only two points to 76 at the close, a net gain of 6 1-8 points. Brazilian was another conspicuously strong feature of a generally dull market, climbing 1 5-8 at 115 1-2. Distillery issues continued weak and Seagram eased an eighth at 22 1-4, Hiram Walker 3-8 at 37 1-2, and Industrial Alcohol an eighth at 23 7-8. International Nickel also was easier, losing 7-8 at 40 1-4. Trading was tighter in volume.

New York Mart Active; Many Price Records Made

NEW YORK, Feb. 8 (Canadian Press).—With speculative imagination fired by the recent changes in the control of the so-called "merger keyroads," the stock market today developed another outburst of strength, sending over a score of issues to their highest prices in years. The advance was by no means uniform, several of the standard industrials being liquidated on fears of drastic reaction if speculative activities were carried to excess. Trading was in unusually heavy volume, averaging nearly half a million shares an hour during the early part of the session.

Rails continued to monopolize interest. Wheeling and Lake Erie Common was run up 35 points to 130 on a further retreat of the "short" interest, but the volume was not very large. The preferred soared over 13 points. New peak prices since 1925, or longer, also were registered by the St. Paul issues, Chicago Great Western Common and Preferred, Wabash Common, Reading, and Chicago and Eastern Illinois Common, the gains running as high as 5 1-2 points.

Resumption of dividends on Remington Typewriter started a buying movement which sent that stock soaring 13 points to a record high at 152, largely at the expense of an overcrowded short interest. Federal Mining and Smelting Common jumped seven points, the preferred 3 3-4 and Houston Oil, Pressed Steel Car, National Cloak and Suit Preferred, and Producers and Refiners sold three to five points higher.

BRITISH HOPE, ETC.

Playing With Fire

LONDON, Feb. 8 (Canadian Press).—The British Government is playing with fire" in sending troops to China, the House of Commons was told today by Ramsay MacDonald, former Labor Premier, during the debate on the Speech from the Throne. Mr. MacDonald appealed for the reopening of negotiations with the Chinese after which he said the troops now on the way to the Far East could be diverted and not landed in China.

Premier Baldwin, who followed the Labor leader, said that if the British representatives in Shanghai consider the emergency requires the immediate disembarkation of the British troops in Shanghai, then the Government will act accordingly. If an emergency does not exist, the leading brigade will be held in readiness in Hong Kong while the rest of the force is approaching.

Keep Troops at Hong Kong

LONDON, Feb. 8 (Canadian Press).—On the basis of data forwarded from the British Minister at Peking, Sir Miles Lampson, and Owen O'Malley, British representative at Hankow, the Cabinet is understood to be leaning toward a proposal to divert to Hong Kong the British defence troops now on the way to Shanghai. It is felt here that the solution of the difficulty might be brought about by the foreign colonies in Shanghai declaring from the fact that troops were held in readiness nearby as if they were in Shanghai.

At any rate, no definite decision is looked for until it is seen what is the Chinese reaction to the United States suggestion that the warring factions in China give an undertaking to keep the Shanghai area free from fighting. The United States proposal is responsible in a large measure for the feeling of optimism over the Chinese situation which prevails among government officials.

A battalion of the Gloucester Regiment arrived at Hong Kong today.

The Premier declined to enter into arrangements with Eugene Chen, Cantonese Foreign Minister, or anyone else regarding troops despatched to protect British life. "Nothing has happened at Hankow," he said, 'to induce us to alter our determination to achieve our ends by negotiation."

He added that the British Charge d'Affairies, Owen O'Malley, was now awaiting further communication from Chen and possibly the Government would be in a position on Thursday to inform the House further.

ANGRY PRINCESS CAUSES REVOLT

Objects To Husband Receiving Affection of Pretty Sulu Girl.

IN PHILIPPINES.

MANILA, Feb. 8 (Canadian Press). — Princess Tarhata Kiram was willing enough to share her husband, Datu Tahil, Moro rebel chief, with his three other wives, but to allow a comely Sulu girl to shower affections on him—ah, No, No, No, No. That in substance is the reason for the downfall of Datu Tahil. So say despatches received here today from Joli Island, scene of the recent drama of love, rebellion, flight, and capture.

It was related that as soon as it became known to the Sultan of Sulu that Tahil, one of his chiefs, was in rebellion against the Philippine Government, the Sultan sent his favorite niece, the Princess, for a conference looking toward the peaceful settlement of difficulties which caused insurrection.

Princes Tarhata, arriving at the fort where Tahil had dug in with two hundred of his armed followers, found him in the process of taking a bath. That in itself was not so bad, but the Princess incidentally discovered that a comely young woman was scrubbing his back.

Being the fourth wife of Tahil, the Princess objected. The royal lady, graduate of the University of Illinois, seized a pail of the chieftain's bath water and threw it in the face of the accommodating young woman.

In order to make it clearly understood that she was displeased she then seized a bolo and attacked Datu Tahil's trousers, which were lying nearby. In a moment they were in shreds. They were the only trousers Tahil had with him. He positively could not attend a conference at the Royal Palace without trousers, and so negotiations were held up.

The Sultan, the story goes, waited until his Royal patience was exhausted and then, believing one of his chieftains had ignored his command, sent word to the Philippine constabulary to go ahead and attack Tahil if they cared to.

The constabulary did. It moved up to fortification and then learned that the Princess was inside. That stove off the attack for several days. Finally Tahil and the Princess fled with a few followers, but leaving most of the rebels to face the fire. Special correspondence reported that sixty Moros were killed in the attack. Officials listed the dead at thirty-five.

The Princess was later found exhausted and penitent, wandering on the mountainside, but her husband was nowhere about. He is being sought on a charge of sedition. His people have turned against him. The Princess is being kept in semi-confinement, but she has shown such penitence that, it is believed, she will not be punished further.

SHEEP FOR MONEY.

It is a statement that requires no proof that everything that raises the purchasing power of the farmer helps to increase the prosperity of every institution in the community.

The action of the Bank of Montreal, therefore, in going to the expense of having prepared for the benefit of Canadian farmers a Canadian edition of a valuable little work on sheep raising can be hailed as raising the standard of local prosperity.

There is an awakening interest in sheep production in this country, with steady progress being made in the Canadian wool industry, and this practical hand-book on "Sheep for Mutton, Wool and Money" should be of value to the farming community generally.

This, of course, is not the only agricultural booklet issued by the bank. Others in the series are:

"Diversified Farming."

"The Cow, the Mother of Prosperity."

"Poultry for the Farm and Home."

"Hogs for Pork and Profit."

The latest work is designed to give farmers, in compact and easily understood form, a ready guide to methods which will increase their profits.

All who apply for the booklet, whether customers or not, will be supplied by the local branches of the Bank of Montreal.

LONG SPEECHES.

The St. Thomas Times-Journal finds fault with Premier King's speech at the banquet in his honour last week—not with the subject matter or with the Premier's eloquence, but because The Times-Journal believes the address was much too long.

The newspaper report occupied twelve columns, and the St. Thomas editor remarks that "at a guess we'll further say that nine hundred and ninety-nine out of every thousand of his admirers gasped in despair and never attempted to read it."

The same critic adds that the length of the speech drove thousands of radio listeners-in "to shove the button in and go to bed."

There is, of course, this to be said on behalf of the Premier, that the occasion was a notable one, and that he was expected to deal fully with the Imperial Conference and the result of the deliberations of that body.

However, there is little doubt that all our public men in Canada have a common failing in regard to their speeches; they consume too much time in what they say and much of the effect is thereby lost.

The art of condensing speeches to a half hour of really important utterances has not yet been attained by Canadian politicians, in which respect they have a great deal to learn from British statesmen, whose brief addresses are masterpieces of English that contain all that is really necessary to serve their purpose.

Such speeches are remembered when they are heard and read when they are published, and neither of these things can truthfully be said of the majority of public addresses given in this country.

A LOSS TO CANADA.

In the death of Senator Fred. Pardee Canada has lost a citizen who had given most of his life to the public service, and who will be remembered by political foe as well as political friend as an able statesman, a splendid orator and a patriotic Canadian.

Senator Pardee, the son of an Ontario Cabinet Minister, entered political life at an early age, and was a member of the Ontario Legislature in his early thirties, soon passing on to the larger field of Dominion politics, where his ability was soon recognized.

Few members of the House of Commons enjoyed such a large share of the confidence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier as Mr. Pardee, who became Chief Liberal Whip and was a tower of strength to his party in that capacity.

When in 1917 came the political crisis that resulted in Union Government, Mr. Pardee was one of those Liberals who believed that it was the duty of Canada to enforce conscription as a necessary means of prosecuting the war to its fullest extent, and it was a bitter hour when he had to withdraw from his association with Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Although he became a Unionist for the time being, he declined to accept a Cabinet portfolio in that administration, and lost no time when the war was over in returning to his old party.

Four years ago he became a member of the Senate, his elevation to the Upper Chamber having been richly earned by years of splendid service not only to his party but to the country generally.

CAMPBELLFORD'S SCHOOL BOARD.

While Peterborough's Board of Education was receiving a jeremied from Mr. Kenner on the inadequacies of the Collegiate Institute, Campbellford's Board was holding out to their ratepayers the prospect of a probable reduction of two mills in the 1927 school tax rate.

And this cheerful intimation, if it is fulfilled, will provide a pleasant climax to an exceedingly successful year. It directs attention to the financial affairs of Campbellford's Board at a time when the material and scholastic conditions and results were never more satisfactory.

On the material side stand out particularly a new High School and grounds that have won the warmest commendation from departmental inspectors. In that respect Campbellford's controversy as to the need and location of the new institution is a fading memory. Peterborough's problem lies ahead and apparently is inescapable.

In the scholastic achievements of the year Campbellford has not forgotten the splendid results of last summer's examinations. Generally speaking, therefore, the ratepayers and their trustees have every reason to congratulate themselves upon their enviable position.

Their school property, personnel, equipment, attendance, and finally, the Board's financing of its obligations comprise a solid structure and efficient public service of which any town could be proud.

"We are in the best financial condition in the fifteen years I have been on the Board," the retiring Chairman, Mr. George O'Sullivan, told The Examiner.

A two-mill decrease in the 1927 school rate, following closely upon the completion of the new High School, is partly a result of the increased accommodation and improved equipment, and in any case will be a grateful announcement to the ratepayers.

LEGAL BANS ON PERSONAL HABITS.

Kansas has repealed its once celebrated law forbidding the sale of cigarettes. In the Wisconsin Legislature is pending a bill which, if passed, would legalize the sale of cigarettes even to minors.

According to recent figures, Americans—numbering 118,000,000—consume, on the average, two cigarettes a day. The demand is growing rapidly, although physicians continue to differ in opinion as to the relative merits—or harmfulness—of cigarettes, cigars and pipes. Last year the increase in the number of cigarettes consumed was unprecedented. The number of woman smokers is becoming a real factor in the situation.

The passionate agitation of a decade ago against the cigarette has become only a memory. The triumph of the cigarette over the law was so complete in Kansas that there was little serious opposition to the bill repealing the anti-cigarette statute.

Here is another object lesson in the futility of sentimental legislation in a sphere that should be beyond the control of political agencies. Though smoking, if indulged in to excess, is injurious to health, the world insists on using tobacco. Statutory shall-nots are ineffective as against the personal habits of all sorts and conditions of men, including philosophers, savants and moralists.

Some day science may render a verdict against tobacco, but the cigarette, apparently, will remain as long as the cigar. The home, the school and the college, not the law, will have to keep the cigarette away from the minor if it is kept away. Drastic legislation has failed in that endeavor.—Chicago Daily News.

OLD-AGE PENSIONS.

On Tuesday the sixteenth Dominion Parliament since Confederation will assemble at Ottawa under conditions vastly different from those of its brief but hectic predecessor. With a Government now firmly seated in the saddle and able to steer its own course without dependence on votes coming from other than its own fold, Premier Mackenzie King and his Cabinet have now an untrammeled opportunity to show their mettle as wise legislators. Among the measures that came to an untimely end in the Upper House last year is the bill respecting the establishment of an old-age pensions system in Canada. Originally introduced in the House of Commons in April of last year, it received on May 28 unanimous approval by the popular representatives. In the Senate, however, it encountered strong adverse sentiment that made itself effective on June 8 by the rejection of the motion for the second reading, the division showing 45 to 21 votes.

The bill was not hastily sprung on Parliament or the country, for the movement in favor of old-age pensions made its first open appearance in Parliament as far back as the 1907-07 session. The resolution that introduced the debate in the same or in variant form served as the peg for debates in subsequent sessions that, however, brought no practical legislative effort. The war then intervened and brought the agitation to a halt. But in 1924, on the motion of the Prime Minister, a special committee of the House of Commons was appointed and instructed to conduct an enquiry into the whole subject of old-age pensions and the position in Canada as conditioned by Federal and Provincial jurisdiction. Its report recommended the establishment of an old-age pension system at the earliest possible date, based on co-operation of the Dominion and Provincial Governments. In the following year the question was further examined and considered by another committee of Parliament.

As outlined in the provisions of the bill of last year, the Government proposed to refund to each Province adhering to the scheme one-half of its net disbursements for pensions, the Province concerned to assume sole responsibility for the cost of administration. But the continuance of Federal assistance was made dependent on each Province entering into an agreement terminable only by repeal of its enacting legislation or upon ten years' notice on the part of the Dominion. This arrangement assured the Provinces that the grant would be continued until freedom from liability was secured, except in the case of such pensions as survived the ten-year period. To ensure uniformity, the bill also contained a specification of the classes of persons the plan was intended to benefit.

In brief the plan proposed to grant a pension to British subjects of seventy years of age and upwards who had been resident in Canada for at least twenty years immediately preceding the date of commencement of a pension, and who had lived in the Province in which the application was made for at least five years. A person would be disqualified from receiving a pension who was an Indian, as defined by the Indian Act, or who had made any voluntary transfer of property in order to qualify for a pension. The proposed maximum pension payable was fixed at $240 yearly, and from this would be deducted the amount of any income received by the pensioner in excess of $125 a year, the total income of any pensioner's income, including pension, being, therefore, $365 a year, or $1 a day.—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Canadian bands are to be featured at the Canadian National Exhibition this year. It is a fitting policy for Canada's jubilee year.

Judging by his address in Toronto Sunday, Hon. E. C. Drury is not even yet quite sure that the Government control policy has a single good point.

And now a woman has succeeded in swimming the Catalina Channel. George Young had better hurry and cash in before the thing grows to be a habit.

With the new Hydro rates in force it may be possible to guess at the nationality of any particular family by the amount of illumination in evidence.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Feb. 8 — Moderate runs of cattle but trade was slow and prices not more than steady. Buyers compalined that too many unfinished and green steers are coming in. These were moving out slowly but at easier prices. Choice quality butcher steers and heifers held about steady, but trade was not brisk. Best butcher from $6.75 to $7.25. A few choice heavy btuch er steers up to $7.50. Bulk of steers going at $6 to $6.50.

Fat cows about steady around $5 to $5.25. Bulls draggy and easier.

Export buyers were going a little easier than expected, taking only a few loads of the best heavy steers from $7 to $7.50. Apparently no bulls wanted for this week's shipment, prices to the old country being away out of line.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Feb. 8 (Canadian Press)—Record breaking big quantities of wheat afloat for Europe tended yesterday to pull prices down, and so, likewise, did large domestic arrivals southwest and west. Wheat closed unsettled, 5-8 to 1c net lower; corn 1-2 to 5-8 to 3-4c off; oats at 1-4 to 3-4c drop, and provisions varying from a shade decline to 10 cents advance.

Corn and oats went lower with wheat and as a result of 2,774,000 bushels increase in the corn visible supply.

Provisions averaged higher, the China situation having some effect on account of uncertainty regarding Oriental oils.

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

NOT ALL KNOWLEDGE IS POWER

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

Knowledge is power—sometimes.

It is power only when it is practical knowledge.

The mere acquisition of facts and information may make a man informed, but unless those facts apply to what he undertakes they do not increase his power.

You may learn all the intimate facts about all the Kings of England without helping you appreciably in the cement business.

It may make it easier to live with yourself, but it will not increase your power.

Barrie has a play about a yacht full of educated people which goes aground upon an uninhabited island.

The only man who knows what to do is the uneducated butler.

He builds a shelter and hunts for food while the others stand helpless. What little education he had was of a practical sort that applied to the needs of the moment.

He had power because his knowledge applied there. In a drawing-room conversation the others would have had power because their knowledge fitted the needs of that situation.

Those who speak of the failure of education make the mistake of thinking that power is the only end of knowledge.

Knowledge is of three kinds.

There is knowledge that gives power; knowledge that gives culture; knowledge that gives wisdom.

Knowledge is like the food we take into our systems. Part of this food goes to make flesh, part to make blood and part goes to make the structure of bones.

So only a part of knowledge goes to make power. Some men without any broad education attain positions of great eminence because the narrow range of their information is all practical and applicable to their work.

Another part of knowledge feeds culture. It gives interests and ideas and appreciations that make men's lives more enjoyable and full.

And another part of knowledge gives wisdom. It builds self-control and understanding. A man may be powerful like Alexander the Great, or cultured like Oscar Wilde, and know not the meaning of wisdom.

And as Durant, using the popular adage loosely, says: "Knowledge is power, but only wisdom is liberty."

Heart Palpitation Dizzy, Sinking Spells

Mrs. M. A. Gagnon, Donatville, Alta., writes:—"Some time ago I was very nervous, could not sleep at night, often had dizzy, sinking spells and palpitation of the heart, and was so run down I could not do my housework, but just leave everything and sit down.

I spent a lot of money using medicine from the doctor, but it did not do me any good.

At last a friend told me to use MILBURN'S HEART NERVE PILLS and after using a couple of boxes I was not the same woman. I began to feel so much better, and after a few more boxes I was in perfect health. I always recommend them to all those I know who are suffering from heart trouble."

BACKACHE

So many correspondents write asking me to explain the cause of their backache, so I am writing this article in an effort to assist these readers to understand the various causes of backaches.

The most common form of backache is in the lower back, and is caused in the female by misplacement of the uterus, or congestion in this organ produced by various causes. This will produce a persistent dragging down pain in the lower back, because of the fact that the sagging organ is pulling upon ligaments which are attached to the spine, or because the uterus being heavy with congestion presses upon the delicate nerve centers, which are located just directly back of it. This lumbar ache in the male is caused by some disorder of the prostate gland, or by an irritation of the urethra or bladder. Trouble in the uterus or prostate will cause a reflex pain in the lower back, in that portion of the spine called the lumbar region. This kind of backache is, therefore, called lumbago.

One kind of backache is caused by inflammation of the bladder, and this occurs in either sex, and produces a constant source of distress in the lower back, as a chronic inflammation of the bladder will often show more pains in the back than in the bladder itself.

A little further up in the back, a sharp colicky pain in either the right or left side will often indicate kidney stone.

Aches in the upper back are many times caused from occupational strain, such as brought on by sewing, or knitting for a long period of time, or by working at some occupation where the hands are used in some strained position, which overexercises the muscles of the upper back that control the movements of the arms.

Backache may be caused simply by general weakness of the back muscles, which have not been sufficiently exercised, and are, therefore, too weak to hold the vertebra in proper position.

There are various forms of backache caused by spinal lesions. The lesions have been caused in some cases by accidents, faulty postures assumed in certain classes of occupations, or a relaxation of the muscles attached to the spine. Spinal lesions are generally caused by vertebra which are slightly out of their proper alignment. Backache from any of these spinal lesions may occur in any part of the spine, and will also affect organs of the body by an irritation or enervation of the nerves issuing from the sub-luxated vertebra.

If you are suffering from any form of backache, you will find it necessary to adopt a general body building regime, in order to be permanently cured. If spinal lesions exist, it is advisable to take some form of manipulative treatment, and to supplement these treatments by graduated exercises for the back muscles, taken while assuming the prone position by lying face downward on the floor, and using those exercises which will tense the back muscles.

Temporary relief of any ache in the back may be achieved by the application of hot towels, or the use of a high candle-power therapeutic light if such is available. Heat may also be applied through the enema, or through treatment by rectal irrigation. Sometimes the application of heat over the bladder will relieve lumbago, sciatica, rheumatism, and pains in the shoulders and arms. This effect is accomplished by a reflex action upon the lower abdominal nerves, especially those located around the bladder.

This article has been prepared in an effort to assist you in discovering the cause of your trouble, and after that cause has been found it will be easy for you to find the proper solution to a cure.

A Thought For To-day

A SUGGESTION.

The detail writer leaves nothing for the reader to think about. The suggestive writer inspires the reader to do his own thinking in his own peculiar way.

Take the successful manager: He will not destroy the initiative in the individual associate. The successful manager will suggest ways and means that the associate can adapt, not adopt, then, when the plans work, the associate will feel that he has been a part of the program—an important part.

Never kill initiative.

Don't Tell the Wife

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, polo star, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce. Ranny hesitates, loving her, though secretly knowing she loves Abner Gratman. A widow, Clare, who is loved by Stivner, lumber king and associate of Ranny, vamps Ranny. Ranny mollifies Stivner by swearing she means nothing to him. Joan is overjoyed when Ranny, as part of a secret plan to rewin her, tells her he will get a divorce. Her joy turns to jealous rage when she learns Clare left town with him. Clare confronts Ranny in Maine, pleading love for him. Joan and Stivner overtake them, Stivner ripe to kill Ranny, who is really innocent of wilful wrong.

Ranny, far from betraying fear at the news that Stivner intended to kill him, merely sighed: "Another one? My word, what a bore!"

Before Clay Varick had time to probe his chum's enigmatic indifference Stivner—who had dismissed the hotel keeper and closed the door—advanced in two angry strides and thrust his teakwood jaw into Ranny's face.

"Forbes, you dog, tell me what's the meaning of this before I take out of your hide the vengeance I've come all this way to get. I gave you my confidence and my association, and by way of rewarding me—he jerked a spatulate thumb toward Clare—"you steal the only real interest I have in the world!"

"Cut out calling pretty names and rash threats, Stivner," shot Ranny evenly, meeting him eye for eye, "and listen to reason, if you've got brains enough! If you're blaming me for that fool woman's presence here," he, too, jerked a thumb toward Clare, "I tell you that I had nothing to do with it, and know nothing about how she got here."

"He lies!" shrilled Clare, hysterically resenting Ranny's open contempt for her; "he asked me to come here with him, and we came together on the train!"

"He asked me to come here with him!"

"I thought so!" gasped Stivner.

Ranny meanwhile, aghast at the falsehood, turned furiously upon Clare. If looks were spoons he would have made her eat her words. As it was, she merely leered triumphantly.

Active trouble came from another direction, so suddenly and without warning that it caught Ranny off his guard. For while his eyes still were accusingly upon Clare, Stivner unleashed a powerful swing at his chin.

It landed flush—and Ranny landed upon the floor.

Then, before Clay could intervene, Stivner jumped back a pace and whipped a revolver from his pocket, leveling it at Ranny. Stivner's expression was as ruthless as a cobra's.

Ranny was groggy from the terrific punch, but he had the fighting man's instinctive brain, and when, from the floor, he saw the flash of Stivner's gun, he acted with its quick dictates.

Throwing his weight forward, he pivotted on one hand so that his legs, sweeping around, knocked Stivner's feet from under him and sent the pistol flying. Ranny pounced upon it, pocketed it, then arose and calmly waited for Stivner to do likewise.

Joan, drawn aside, had remained motionless and expressionless during the melee—the very epitome of dignity.

Clare, on the other hand, was emotionally scrambled, alternately laughing and crying in her excitement.

She wept now to see Stivner upon the floor and hastily assisted Clay to drag him upright and hold him steady.

"Sorry that I had to knock you down, Stivner," declared Ranny honestly, "but you wouldn't give me time to disprove Mrs. Clemoneau's prevaricications. The best I can say for her—is that she's unstrung. If you want the bald truth, here it is—"

He jerked Clare's dainty pearl-handled revolver from his pocket and held it up that all might see. "The whole story's there! She came here to shoot me, because I wouldn't do with her what you foolishly suspected I have done! You all got here on the tail-end of a scene that might have been a murder had I not been rather accustomed to facing guns—though never one in the hands of a woman before. What Joan saw when she came in was me trying to soothe this woman after I had disarmed her!"

There was too much of a wholesome ring of truth in Ranny's explanation for anyone to entertain the slightest doubt of it.

Clare knew that, and, overcome with the futility of further falsifying, she burst into tears and ran from the room.

Stivner twitched from one foot to another awkwardly, looked after Clare, and then to Ranny, alternately a half dozen times. Finally he shambled up to Ranny, and though wagging his head in bewilderment, thrust out a conciliatory hand, which Ranny took without hesitation or rancor.

"There's something rotten in Denmark," Stivner mumbled, "but I'm blessed if I can turn it up! However, there's a lot of questions I want to ask—and I'll see you later, Ranny."

With that he hurried off after Clare—like a huge grizzly bear docilely humoring a petite mate's tantrums.

This left Joan alone with Ranny and Clay. Stivner had not closed the dining room door after him, and there were curious faces pearing in from the small lobby outside, for, of course, hints of mysterious trouble, like a baleful atmosphere, had permeated the house.

Joan had not unbent her calm poise. Ranny was just as aloof:

"You have shown extremely poor judgment, Madam, for a woman who is so eager to become divorced!" He had never addressed her in so strange, so positively unfriendly, a tone before. Joan winced a little under it. But he went on, bowing gravely: "However, I shall try to save you from the damage you have done your own cause by sharing Clay's room, and by removing to other lodgings the first thing in the morning. I shall send the proprietor to your room for my things. In the meantime, good night!"

He swung hostilely on his heel and strode from the room. Clay followed gingerly.

Joan was left standing there in the empty room alone, rebuffed, unhumored. A new experience for her!

The rest of that night and the whole of the next day were no less crowded with tense moments, at Fort Ashnock Inn than the memorable supper hour had been.

Behind the locked door of Clay's room Stivner held grave council with the plotting chums at midnight.

"For heaven's sake, tell me what's what!" he pleaded.

Clay explained patiently, tersely: "It's my theory that women are like pigs, in that to make them go one way you've got to drive them another. We felt that if Ranny eagerly agreed to a divorce, but subtly emphasized Abner's romantic shortcomings, Joan would get cold feet. We felt, too—and this is the only part of the plot you weren't informed of, because we didn't think it would ever reach your ears—that the scheme would be a double-barrelled one, if we could arouse Joan's curiosity by mysteriously giving false scents as to his actual whereabouts, and warning everyone, 'don't tell the wife.' Naturally, EVERYONE told her—only a different story. We never counted on Clare gumming up the works!"

Stivner reflected in heavy silence for a time. Suddenly he roused himself, his face bright with inspiration.

"One thing is certain. You will make no more headway with your plot here. Tomorrow, Ranny, you leave for South Carolina, to manage my lumber interests there, and to get your divorce. Let your wife know frankly where you're going, only to make sure that she will follow you, insist that it's no use for her to do so, because you'll get a divorce regardless. If that doesn't cut Gratman out and bring her repentant into your arms I'll miss my guess,"

"And Clare?" asked Ranny delicately.

"Tomorrow," said Stivner firmly, "she'll either go to the Fort Ashnock parsonage with me or I'll take her out into the woods and lose her."

Next day Ranny, left without saying goodbye to Joan, though he sent word to her via Clay that he would not remain married to her if she were the last woman on earth.

That evening Abner arrived.

"Joan, dear," he chided, "why did you run away on me like that? I had a devil of a time finding out where you'd gone."

"I'm leaving for South Carolina in the morning," she said irrelevantly.

"STELLA DALLAS."

The advertising forerunners of "Stella Dallas" feature to the greatest extent the hero, Ronald Colman, but the lesser-known Belle Bennett should be the featured star. It is she who makes the picture, the flighty, foolish creature who gives one of the most poignant "mother" parts ever enacted on the screen. As a portrayer of emotional roles, this lady, with her ever-tousled curly head, her silly ways and her terrible love for her child, is wonderful. Her acting has a quality of unconscious emphasis that makes it very real, and she is the vital, outstanding figure in the big feature, which is one of the most compelling "mother" characterizations ever seen here. It is one of those extremely artistic pictures where the heart of the woman is presented to the audience's view at all times, and her reactions to varying situations are always in character. Stella Dallas was a cheap woman who threw way her husband's love for a handful of chaff, and then she paid for her foolishness with her heart's blood.

The contradictions of the picture are numerous, but they cannot affect its wonderful appeal to the emotions. The well-bred young girl should have been able to influence her over-dressed, flashy mother in many ways, but this obvious solution of a difficult situation does not appeal to the director, who presents the mother bearing down on a flock of critical young flappers and their escorts, attired in the style of a decade back, while the girl runs away from the sight. Again, it skips with blithsome ease over intervals of years, while it makes much of wearisome small moments, like the bit where the woman turns down the light in the lonely room. The details of a cheap type of trashy existence are shown with impressive clearness, and the whole picture suggests a new style in movies, with an apparent straining after realism at all costs. The view of the mother, with her tousled head and old wrapper, preparing her head for an application of dye, is only one of the realistic touches that might offend the taste of an audience accustomed to sugar-coated pictures of life. It is a far cry from the sort of feature that presents a heroine on a desert isle, for instance, appearing in a white frock and a beautifully marcelled head. The manner of woman that Stella Dallas is is reflected in her surroundings and life, and the director does not mince matters in his portrayal of her charcater. But he leaves her walking lonely in the rain, hustled onward by a traffic officer, while her child, under the care of her father and the woman he has married, after obtaining a divorce from Stella, is being wedded radiantly to the rich youth of her choice. Is "Stella Dallas" merely the forerunner of a new movie art which will present life in the Russian dramatic fashion, with its gross details contrasting with noble and self-sacrificing emotions, or is it just an attempt to show that she who refuses a self-evident duty, as Stella did when she remained aloof from her husband for so many years and trifled with cheap amusement, must inevitably pay? It is hard to say, but at any rate, it is an outstanding picture, with an outstanding heroine in the poor creature with the heroic soul, and it has a logical ending.

A brief showing of the beginning and ending of the famous Catalina swim by George Young is one of the interesting accompanying reels on the programme.—Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT

FINE FEATURE COMEDY.

"The Prince of Pilsen" Makes Hit With Local Audiences.

Anita Stewart, after a prolonged absence, has returned triumphantly to the screen in the featured feminine role of the comedy, "The Prince of Pilsen," which was shown with great success at the Regent Theatre yesterday. As the daughter of Hans Wagner, a Cincinnati brewer on a trip to his old home in the European kingdom of Pilsen, she is quite charming.

George Sidney, in the part of the brewer who is mistaken for the Prince of Pilsen, and received with all the pomp of visiting royalty, is a positive scream. Myrtle Stedman makes a particularly charming Princess, and Allan Forrest is eminently satisfying as the Prince.

The picture is one of unusual beauty and splendor, with an imposing atmosphere of European court life. Especially brilliant are the scenes of a royal wedding in the throne room of Thorwald Castle, with George Sidney and Myrtle Stedman as the contracting parties. In addition to great crowds of court dignitaries, there is a colorful sprinkling of soldiers, and an ecclesiastical procession which is particularly impressive. There is a display of most gorgeous style creations, which should prove particularly intriguing to feminine theatregoers.

Mr. S. L. Burke, Barronsfield, N.S., writes:—"For some time I was nearly crazy with boils all over my body. I tried everything I could think of to get rid of them, but to no avail, for as soon as one was healed up another would appear to take its place.

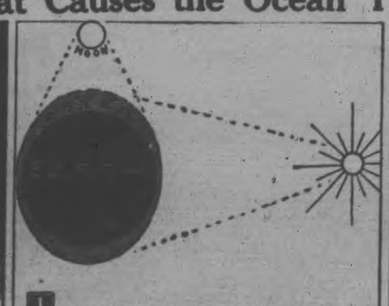
OUTLINE OF SCIENCE XCVII—What Causes the Ocean Tides? by MAX HAHN

PLINY, IN THE FIRST CENTURY, WAS AMONG THE FIRST TO NOTE THAT THE MOON APPARENTLY CAUSES THE OCEAN TIDES. HE HAD OBSERVED THAT THE TIDE RISES HIGHER AND FALLS LOWER WHEN THERE'S A NEW MOON OR A FULL MOON THAN AT ANY OTHER TIME IN THE MONTH.

PLINY WASN'T ABLE TO EXPLAIN WHY THE MOON CONTROLS THE TIDES. BUT THE THEORY ORIGINATED BY ISAAC NEWTON IN 1687 THAT EARTH, MOON, SUN AND OTHER BODIES ATTRACT EACH OTHER FURNISHES THE ANSWER. THE DIAGRAM SHOWS HOW THE MOON'S PULL ON THE EARTH PILES UP THE OCEAN WATER.



IF THE EARTH'S CRUST WERE NOT RIGID IT PROBABLY WOULD REACT NOTICEABLY TO THE MOON JUST AS THE OCEAN WATER DOES. THE MOON'S PULL IS TWICE AS STRONG AS THE SUN'S BECAUSE THE MOON IS NEARER THE EARTH. WHEN THE SUN AND MOON PULL TOGETHER THEY PRODUCE AN EXTRAORDINARY TIDE.

OCEAN STEAMERS GENERALLY LEAVE PORT AT HIGH TIDE BECAUSE THEY ARE LESS LIKELY TO RUN AGROUND AT THAT TIME. THE GREAT LAKE TIDES ARE SCARCELY NOTICEABLE, AVERAGING ABOUT TWO INCHES.

THIRTEEN HORSES SUFFOCATED IN STANLEY BARRACKS STABLES

Soldiers Turn 38 Others Loose When Fire Destroys Building.

JUMPERS BURNED.

Two Prize Winners of Winter Fair Lost—Mascot of R.C.D's Burned.

TORONTO, Feb. 8. — Thirteen horses were destroyed last night in a fire that raged in one of the main frame stables of the Royal Canadian Dragoons Stanley Barracks. Included in the horses lost were two jumpers, Moonshine and Golden Gleam, that carried off jumping honors at the Royal Winter Fair. Billy, a Russian Sheland pany, mascot of the barracks, was also suffocated.

Thirty eight horses were turned loose by soldiers from the barn and ran wild about the streets. The rounding up of them by soldiers, citizens and police presented all the thrills of a rodeo.

Starts in Feed Bin.

The fire of unknown origin, broke out in the feed bin in the northeast section of the long stables. When the fire call was sounded soldiers rushed from their quarters, some not fully dressed. Throwing open a door at the opposite entrance, the troopers were almost overcome by heavy clouds of smoke. Their one thought was to save their mounts. Halter straps were quickly pulled loose and the soldiers rushed their horses to the old fort yard. Here they were turned loose and they kept working their way down the stable releasing as many of the animals as possible.

Of the 13 killed, 8 were burned or suffocated. Five others were found to have been so badly burned they were driven out into the riding yard and shot. Firemen, under Chief Russell and District Chief Bell, managed to confine most of the fire to the northeast wing.

All horses had been blanketed for the night. As they galloped about the Old Fort yards, some of them started towards the exhibition Grounds. In all thirty-eight frightened animals were running wild. As the firefighters from the city brigades relieved soldiers, they obtained bridles and started out on foot and in motor cars to the western section of the city to catch the missing horses.

A. Hurst, 22 Pickering street, reported to police of Cowan avenue Station that as he was driving his touring car south on Parkside drive and was about to turn on Lake Shore Boulevard, he saw about 14 of the horses dashing west. He had his wife and family in the car and to avoid striking any of the horses down he swerved around the corner. One of the horses confused at the course to take skidded into his car. The front windshield was broken as were the fenders of his car as the animal crashed up into the body of his car. The horse, on getting back to the road, continued on toward High Park in pursuit of the other horses.

Edward Bays 32 McKenzie Crescent, and a chum were at Davenport Road and Ossington Avenue about midnight when they noticed two horses come galloping up the street. They stopped them. Constabled Girdstone (172) happened along, and he assisted them in taking the steeds to stables ot No. 7 Police Station, where the horses were kept until soldiers arrived to take them back to the barracks grounds.

Three of the horses were seen by C.P.R. yardmen running along railway tracks at Sunnyside. The yardmen herded them into the side of the tracks, where they managed to get hold of the halters and led the horses to the street. Another citizen found one roaming on Roncesvalles Avenue, and led it down to Cowan Avenue Police Station.

Police Kept Busy

Police were kept busy answering calls from people in High Park district about horses running over their lawns and slipping on the icy pavements. Eight or nine horses were located in a brickyard at the Humber. More of the horses were thought at a late hour this (Tuesday) morning to be still wandering about this district.

The show horses killed were owned by Captain Bate. They were reported to have been prize winners for jumping at recent shows. Billy, the pony mascot, was the pride of the troops quartered in the barracks.

Several valuable show horses were quartered in other stables a safe distance from the scene of the blaze. With the exception of the two show horses reported lost, the others destroyed were known and numbered as "troopers," and were valued at approximately $200 each.

Quite an amount of straw, hay, and oats in the feed room proved great fuel for the flames, which for a time raged so strongly the entire barn looked as if it would be razed to the ground. The Fire Department placed the loss to building, equipment and horses destroyed at $3,500. The stable had been built during the war, about 1916, military officers declared.

CAMPBELLFORD COUNCIL TO BUY MORE FIRE HOSE; GRANTS $300 TO FAIR; APPROVES TOWN PLAN

Two Councillors in Toronto at the Curling Finals.

A BUSY SESSION.

1925 Tax Roll Accepted — Pay $1,550 To Library.

(Special Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 8.—Two vacant chairs at the Council table last night were significant of Campbellford's curling quest in Toronto today. Councillors Wiggins and Cole are away with the two District rinks which won their group honors at Cobourg and entered the draw this morning. The skips are Frank Bonnycastle and Dick Cole.

Mayor Kingston called the Council to order last night at ten minutes to eight with a quorum of members who were willing to start before the "whistle blew."

The Public Library Board's request for $1,550 from the Council was ordered to be paid on a resolution by Councillors Stone and McDonald.

Accept Town Plan.

The new town plan prepared by Fraser Aylesworth, C.E., of Madoc, was submitted to the Council, and on Reeve Bygott's motion, seconded by Councillor Abernethy, was formally approved, and signed by Mayor Kingston and J. F. McGregor, town clerk. It was warmly commended by I. H. Humphries, inspector of legal offices of Toronto, who was so impressed by the compiled plan that he proposed to secure similar contracts for Mr. Aylesworth with Galt and Kitchener.

So pleased was the Council with Mr. Aylesworth's work that it registered its appreciation in a resolution by Councillor Stone, who also spoke of the "genial manner in which Mr. Aylesworth performed his work in Campbellford."

Mayor Kingston remarked: "All I have to say is, 'I told you so.' I had some knowledge of his work before we engaged him."

Mr. Aylesworth: "I am very grateful for your very kind expression. I was delighted with the treatment the Council and citizens accorded me. It is not an easy matter to ask people to show you their deeds, but I was not turned down once. There was no nasty treatment from any person."

1925 Collector's Roll.

J. D. Cummings, tax collector, breathed a sigh of relief as he disburdened himself of the 1925 roll and its worries. The total amount of the roll was $70,912.01, including $233.54 interest.

On the other side the total amount paid the town treasurer was $69,156.96. The difference was made up as follows: Abatements $473.93, arrears $459.22, and discounts $821.90. The abatements approved by the Council were as follows: George Barnum $14.10 business assessment, Trueman Alexander $7, E. Singer $4.07 business, George O'Sullivan, $24 duplication of assessment, R. R. Hutton $5.88, P. J. Kelly $29.70 business, Gordon Barry $16.45, Dr. Bussy $4.70, Geo. Moore $3.06, Hockridge & Mason $11.75, Ronald McPherson $9.40, Peterboro Cereal Co. $269.07.

Of the Cereal Company item, Mr. Cummings explained that the company had been closed down temporarily six months. The full property tax was paid and also the business tax for the remaining six months.

Grant to Fair Board

T. J. Horkins and Dr. O'Hara representing the Campbellford and Seymour Fair Board asked for the "usual grant" of $300 which was granted on Deputy-reeve Davidson's motion, seconded by Councillor O'Sullivan.

"We pay $150 to your band," said Mr. Horkins, "and the balance of the $300 goes for printing, policemen and wages to the men who fix up the grounds and track. And every bill put up in the country helps to advertise Campbellford".

Mr. Horkins declared that every citizen of the town and township should join the Agricultural Society at one dollar a year It used to be said that little Warkworth and Norwood had better fairs than ours, but they can't say that today, and if we get the loyal support of the people there will be no question about our progress."

Dr. O'Hara mentioned an increase of $50 in the grant which elicited from Councillor O'Sullivan the prediction that next year another increase would be sought. Dr. O'Hara stressed the fact that the fair grounds provide a free park to the town and also camping grounds for tourists.

He and Mr. Horkins assured the council that the grounds would not be used for a pasture field when the grass sprouts again.

Deputy Fire Chief

Mayor Kingston suggested that the Fire Brigade should have a deputy chief.

Chief Davidson said that the need of an assistant chief had been mentioned a few days ago. Mr. Farrell had held the position, but he lived too far from the hall. The firemen themselves will meet shortly to elect the deputy chief.

To Buy Fire Hose

The purchase of 500 feet of fire hose was left to the Finance Committee and Chief (Deputy-Reeve) Davidson, on Reeve Bygott's motion, seconded by Councillor McDonald. Two salesmen explained the special features and qualities of the hose made by their companies.

Chief Davidson stated that a recent fire had proved the need of more hose. "When we got back we had only 250 feet of hose left in the hall, and that was not enough if we got another call then. I have been holding back about asking for more so as to keep the taxes down. We should buy more than 500 feet, but we'll try to get along with that."

THIN LIKE A SKELETON; CAN'T EAT, CAN'T SLEEP

"Everything I ate would ferment and I had gas so bad that I couldn't work for two years. Was nervous, had bad cramps, couldn't sleep and looked like a skeleton. Adlerika helped me so that in a month I gained 12 pounds."—F. Santoro.

Unlike most medicines, Adlerika acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel, giving the intestines a REAL cleansing and bringing out old poisonous matter you never thought was in your system. Even if bowels move daily, you will be surprised how much more old matter Adlerika brings out which may have been causing all your trouble. In slight disorders, like occasional constipation, GAS bloating, indigestion or sick headache, ONE spoonful always brings relief.

Adlerika is a compound of the best salts, intestinal cleanser with glycerine, buckthorn, cascara and other gas-expelling and detergent elements. It is excellent for Intestinal Stasis, a disease due to modern ways of living and which is often the true cause of sour stomach, gas bloating, nervous dyspepsia and restless sleep.

Doctors Praise Adlerika

Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York: "Adlerika, in addition to its intestinal cleansing, checks the growth of intestinal bacteria."

Dr. A. C. Curl: "I prescribe Adlerika with highly satisfactory results."

Dr. J. Weaver: "In my 50 years practice, I have found nothing to excel Adlerika."

J. E. Puckett: "After using Adlerika, I feel better than for 20 years. Awful impurities were eliminated from my system."

Dr. F. M. P. (name withheld by request): "I use Adlerika in all bowel cases. Some require only one dose."

No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you. At leading druggists. In Peterboro at McDermid & Jury and other druggists.

DURHAM APPLES AT HIGH PRICE

W. H. Gibson Gets Top of the British Market for Russets.

BIG VOLUME

TORONTO, Feb. 8.—The highest price for any Canadian apples on the British market this year was paid to W. H. Gibson of Newcastle for a carload of Golden Russets. These were sold a couple of weeks ago for around 35 shillings, or close to 14 shillings above the regular market. They netted Mr. Gibson around $5 a barrel. This fruit was of excellent color and in the best possible shape. It was carefully selected right through from picking. These apples were shipped through the Ontario fruit growers' special representative in London, W. B. Somerset.

According to D. J. Gibson, a brother, and also a prominent orchardist in the same district, the British apple has been stiffening very materially during the last few weeks. Prices are now satisfactory and Ontario shipments are going forward in considerable volume for the first time this season. "We thought that the big United States crop would ruin the Old Country market," he said, "and, while it did depress values early in the season, it is not a factor today. For some reason or other the quality of the American fruit seems to be off this year, and apparently the Britisher has realized this.

Even the healthiest men sometimes have aches

TORMENTED BY ACUTE NEURITIS

Crippling aches quickly relieved by simple home remedy

Freed from the crippling pain of neuritis after having tried various treatments without getting relief, a well-known business man of Cincinnati, Ohio, writes:

"Following influenza I was seized with a violent attack of neuritis in the right arm and shoulder. I got no relief until I tried Sloan's Liniment. The affected arm and shoulder were shortly restored to a healthy condition and all pain and symptoms disappeared."

Sloan's gives real relief because it doesn't just deaden the pain. It gets at the cause.

Just pat it on gently. At once you feel the increased flow of healing, germ-destroying blood right in the spot that hurts. Quickly and surely, it reduces swelling and inflammation, drives out stiffness, kills pain. Get a bottle. All druggists—35 cents.

LADY'S ADDRESS ILLUSTRATED BY OWN DRAWINGS

Interesting Talk on Scenes of London Given Women's Canadian Club.

LANTERN VIEWS.

Miss E. Warren, Pupil of Ruskin, Shows Many Fine Pictures.

An open meeting of the Women's Canadian Club, held last evening in the auditorium of the Public Library, had an exceptionally good attendance, and much enthusisam was manifested over the very interesting lecture, illustrated by colored lantern slides, presented by Miss Emily Warren, of London, England, who is given a series of addresses of this type in Canada at the present time. Miss Warren, who has achieved prominence in artistic circles in the Old Country, was a pupil in her early years of John Ruskin, and her colored sketches of various interesting spots in London evoked much applause for her audience. The pictures were especially good, and were selected with evident discernment, with an eye to showing the picturesque portions of a city rich in storied memories and hallowed associations. The effect of sunshine in many of the scenes was a happy attribute, but the aspect of London in a "mist," as Miss Warren described the lesser type of fog, or in the yellow haze of a "London particular," was equally enthralling.

In a type of address which seemed especially appropriate to the pictures on the screen, Miss Warren held the attention of her audience, showing a wide knowledge of historical anecdote and injecting into her narrative a love of her subject which made in entertaining from beginning to end.

An ancient London "Stone," and the old Roman bastions of St. Giles, in Cripplegate, where the first slides shown on the screen, with an interesting little description of the reason for so many of the ancient names of the district, the prayers of the old monks who abode there giving their names to Peterson Row, to Ave Maria Lane and to Amen Corner, the latter marking the end of their prayer route. Likewise, Milk Lane and Bread Lane and Panier Lane were offshoots of the "Cheap" market at Cheapside.

In colors were shown various places of interest: the Traitors' Gate of the Tower, with the "Beefeaters" in their ancient Tudor costume; the changing of the watch; St. Dunstan's spire, built by Sir Christopher Wren; the monument erected after the fire of London, the great conflagration which broke out at Pudding Corner and ended at Pie Lane; a representation of the great diarist, Samuel Pepys himself; Holy Trinity Church, where the verger delights in showing the head of the Duke of Suffolk; the Charterhouse Chapel, where Colonel Newcome, of "The Newcomes" sat; the gate of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, where Johnson abode at one time; the old church of St. Bartholomew the Great at Smithfield, built, with the monastery and hospital adjoining, in the carrying out of a vow. In this church, Cromwell stabled his horses and later, it fell to the uses of a fringe factory, but now it had regained some of its ancient standing.

The roof and oriel window and minstrel gallery of Crosby Hall were shown, as they were before the premises gave way to the encroachment of a banking establishment, and the Royal Exchange, with the grasshopper emblem of its founder, Sir Thomas Gresham, surmounting the peak. "When the grasshopper of the Exchange and the dragon of Bow Street Church meet, there will be no king on the throne," said the ancients, and in the time of Queen Victoria, the prophecy was fulfilled, when the grasshopper of the Exchange and the dragon of Bow Street Church met in the re-gilder's shop.

John Bunyan's monument in Bunhill Cemetery; the "Old Curiosity Shop" immortalized by Dickens; the Guildhall, with the Cornish giants, Gog and Magog, keeping watch over the interior; the old Staple Inn, so called because here the rules regarding weights of staple products were determined; Boybells, whose chimes called back Dick Whittington to be Lord Mayor of London Town; St. Paul's Cathedral, with Wren's wonderful dome, and a view of the exterior showing its variegated architecture of Doric, Ionic and Corinthian style, the chapel of St. Michael and St. George, with the high altar and the reredos, and the famous Whispering Gallery; the "Cheshire Cheese" Inn, beloved of Johnson, still retaining its sanded floor of old tiles; the Temple Church of the Freemasons; the "Eleanor" Cross at Charing Cross, marking one of the spots where the body of Queen Eleanor rested on its way to the grave; the Nelson column; the interior of the National Gallery, and the Church of St. Michael's in the Fields, erected by King Henry Eighth to divert from his sight the numerous funeral corteges of the day, all appeared in turn on the screen, with accompanying descriptive narrative by Miss Warren.

The Horse Guard were shown on parade; Westminster Abbey, the shrine for five centuries of the Empire's noblest citizens; Poet's Corner, and the Chapel of Edward the Confessor, with the ancient Coronation Stone and the "Miserere" stalls where the monks sat in olden time, and the Canadian colors, worked by the women of Toronto and established in perpetuity on General Wolfe's Monument in the Abbey all were shown in colors and in plain views; also the refectory of the Westminster Boys' School with the high white bar over which the annual Shrovetide Pancake is kicked, the boy securing the greatest amount of pancake being rewarded by the Dean with a gift of five dollars.

Cleopatra's Needle, presented by the Khedive of Egypt to England, with a special ship constructed for its passage; the Water Gate at Somerset House; the Houses of Parliament; Buckingham Palace and Trafalgar Square; the Eros on the Fountain at Piccadilly Circus, all precluded the "Country Walk," during which one may walk for two hours through London and be companioned by trees and flowers. Here also were the pavement artists, who commence their performance always with pictures of the King and Queen, and of a string of fish tied together by their tails, and the fortune teller with her green bird.

Here was Rotten Row, the old "Route de Roi"; Albert Hall; the Kingsington Gardens, with the Round Pond and the Peter Pan statue for the children; old Holland House; the Queen's Cottage with its thatched roof, where Queen Victoria loved to stay at times; Hampton Court Palace; the old Church of Stoke-Pogis; and Windsor, with the Eaton College Chapel and the Albert Memorial Chapel, and finally, the Tomb of the Unknown Warrior in the Abbey.

At the conclusion of the address, Mrs. J. Forbes Allan, President of the Women's Canadian Club, extended the thanks and appreciation of the audience to Miss Warren, also thanking the operator of the lantern slides, H. Rogow, Junior.

BURGLARS GET $20,000 IN JEWELS

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 8.—Four armed burglars yesterday afternoon sawed their way laboriously through many inches of iron and cement from an upper floor into a jewelry store at 6467 Chene Street, blew open the safe and escaped with gems and jewelry valued at upwards of $20,000.

Five men and women, including a physician, into whose offices the thugs marched to begin their boring operations, were held captive for several hours while the burglars worked. When a hole sufficiently large had been made in the floor of the physician's office, the four men lowered themselves through it to the jewelry shop and a few minutes later they blew off the safe door with nitro-glycerine. After gathering up their loot the quartette left via the front door without arousing suspicion.

Health Broken—Lost 66 lbs. Now Well, Won Back 28 lbs.

Ottawa merchant, formerly city officer, rundown by kidney trouble. Wasted from 201 to 135 lbs. Tanlac restored robust health; now weighs 217 lbs. and feels fine

Philias Sequin's grocery at 285 St. Patrick St., is well known in Ottawa. Mr. Sequin was formerly a police officer. When ill-health seized him he lost weight rapidly. "I had kidney trouble for 6 years," he tells, "and was given up as a hopeless case. Many times, from sheer weakness, I have fallen where I stood, and had to be helped to my feet.

"Pains racked my entire system, especially my back, which felt like splitting. Needless to say, I could neither eat nor sleep normally. Weak spells and nervousness would leave me trembling all over. I faded away from 201 to 135 lbs., and tried endless treatments and remedies in those 6 years, without result.

"I had begun to despair, and when a friend advised Tanlac I was skeptical. But one month's regular use of this wonderful medicine convinced me that I was on the road to health. I kept on taking Tanlac, and to my delight and surprise it made me a new man in a surprisingly short time. Now I weigh 217 lbs., eat and sleep like a healthy boy, and feel like a different man altogether."

If neglect or overwork are taking toll of your health, try Tanlac. It is nature's own tonic, made from roots, barks and herbs. Your druggist has it. Over 52 million bottles sold.

SAINT and SINNER

When the door opened and two plain clothes detectives entered, Bob Hathaway was standing beside Faith's chair, his hand protectingly on her shoulder.

"Mr. Robert Hathaway?" the taller and heavier of the two men boomed.

"I'm Hathaway. It was I who telephoned police headquarters after I discovered my uncle's body."

"I'm Detective Farrel and this is Detective Boyd," the big man motioned to his companion. "The Chief himself is over at the scene of the crime. He told me to bring you along to the house for questioning, Mr. Hathaway. Who's the young lady?" he added with a keen glance at Faith. "Don't reckon this is the—er—bride, is it?"

"This is Miss Faith Lane, Farrel," Bob answered curtly. "She is a sister of the—of Miss Cherry Lane. There won't be any need for her to go along—"

"Hold your horses, son," Farrel boomed, not unkindly. "The Chief said to bring any members of the family as was at the church. Any others here?"

He was interrupted as Mr. and Mrs. Lane pushed their way into the room.

Faith's heart gave a great throb of relief and gratitude when she saw young Dr. Atkins' face looming above her mother's heaving shoulders.

"Faith! Faith! Where's Cherry? Where's my baby girl? I guess I'm her mother. I guess I've got a right to know. Where's my baby?" Mrs. Lane fought off her husband's soothing hands.

"Now, Mrs. Lane," Dr. Atkins warned, with brisk authority. "You know you mustn't excite yourself. I've given her some of her heart medicine," he explained to Faith. "Fortunately, I was sitting directly behind her when Mr. Ashburn made the announcement of a change of wedding plans. I had brought some of her medicine with me, just in case the excitement of the wedding brought on an attack."

"Oh, thank you, Dr. Atkins. "You have saved her life. My mother can't go with us," she turned to the detectives. "She's a very sick woman. You can ask the doctor here. He'll tell you that it might kill her."

"Go where?" Mrs. Lane screamed. "What are they doing here, Faith? What are they going to do to Cherry —my baby?"

"Mother," Faith tried to smile. "We don't know where Cherry is. Maybe she'll come home, now that the wedding has been—postponed," again her eyes pleaded with the detectives. "Hadn't you better go home with Dad and wait for her? I know she won't want to worry you. She'll come home. We have to go to Mr. Cluny's house. He—he wants to see us. Cherry had been—there —and told him she wasn't going to marry him. He—he wants to see us—" But she could not keep it up. She turned and hid her face on Bob's shoulder and began to cry gaspingly.

"Looka here, Madame," Detective Farrel began abruptly. "You might as well—"

"I'm sorry to interfere," Dr. Atkins pushed forward, frowning directly into the eyes of the angry detective. "But any more excitement may be fatal to my patient, Mrs. Lane. You can see for yourself that she knows nothing whatever of her daughter's disappearance, and I will not permit her to be bullied and harrowed by police questionings."

"Police?" Mrs. Lane screamed. "What have the police got to do with Cherry? Ain't a girl got a right to change her mind and run away if she wants to?"

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 9, 1927

(Copyright, 1927, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Good and evil planetary influences contend to-day, according to astrology, which finds the later hours favorable.

In the morning there may be high nervous tension and inclination to quarrel and it is well to bridle the temper.

There is a sign read as encouraging deceit and even dishonesty while this trule prevails.

It is a sway under which envy and jealousy are supposed to develop. The wise will curb selfish inclinations.

There is a sign of promise for aviators who will benefit from new inventions this year.

Commercial uses for airplanes and balloons will increase rapidly this year, which is to be marked by the introduction of sensational inventions.

This is read as an auspicious day for thinkers. It is a first-rate sway under which to make plans or to consider offers for business preferment.

Jupiter continues to favor trade and the stock markets. New millionaires are to arise and those of longer wealth possession are to fall.

In England the Labor party is to gain great power, it is forctold, and many old traditions are to pass away.

The Prince of Wales is to end his period of irresponsibility and to assume new obligations, it is foretold.

New fashions in dress as well as music are foretold for early autumn when there will be even more desire for pleasure than there is at present.

Religious controversies and serious classes of opinion are indicated for the whole of this year, when much secret propaganda may be expected.

Persons whose birthdate it is may see changes in business or in place of residence.

Children born on this day may be intensely high-strung, proud and inclined to rule. They are usually talented and able to obtain their best ambitions.

GRADMA AT 29

Can you pick out the youngest grandmother in this picture? Perhaps the lady at the bottom, you say? No. That's the great-grandmother. The grandmother is Mrs. Beulah Graham (right), 29, whose daughter, Mrs. Jessie Widner (left above), is a mother at 14. The great-grandparents live in Fresno, Calif., and the mother and grandmother in Oakland.

HOW TO REDUCE VARICOSE VEINS

Rub Gently and Upward Toward the Heart and Blood in Veins Flow That Way.

Many people have become despondent because they have been led to believe that there is no remedy that will help reduce swollen veins and bunches.

If you will get a two-ounce original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) at any first class drug store and apply it night and morning as directed you will quickly notice an improvement which will continue until the veins and bunches are reduced to normal.

Moone's Emerald Oil is a harmless, yet most powerful germicide and two ounces last a very long time. Indeed, so powerful is Emerald Oil that old chronic cases of Piles are often entirely absorbed and anyone who is disappointed with its use can have their money refunded. Bond's Drug Store sells lots of it.

BALLADS OF A HUSBAND.

My Worst Friend.

Who is it takes my wifey's side
In every wordy battle?
Who is it talks and talks and talks
Until her false teeth rattle?

Who is it criticizes me
Much more than any other?
Who is it causes me much pain?
Why, reader, it's her mother!

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

The lower part of this frock is of plaid, green and brown, on a beige foundation and the upper part is of plain beige flannel to match the ground color of the plaid.

The French dressmakers and silk makers seem to be bent on maintaining the fashion for plaids. Perhaps this is just a polite way they have of expressing the French fondness for the Scotch—for no matter how remote a plaid may be from any of the authentic tartans of Scotland it is still to a Frenchman "ecossais."

The milliners are making use of the plaid idea in many ways for spring. There will be hats made of plaid silks, and hats trimmed with plaid ribbon. Plain-colored silk hats are shown with plaid designs effected by rows of colored stitching in plaid design. One of the most unusual ways of using plaid silk is to make it into flowers which are used to trim hats or for buttonhole or shoulder adornment. The Parisian milliner, Reboux, has been showing neat little straw hats for spring trimmed with flat choux made of plaid silk or ribbon. There are many plaid taffeta frocks among the new things for spring, and although it may take some courage to wear a frock of this sort you will at least have the satisfaction of knowing you are in fashion if you do.

Frocks of plaid cloth seem less striking than those of silk. Perhaps this is because the soft exture of the cloth tends to tone down the vivid outline of the plaid. One of the most satisfactory ways of using plaid is to combine it with cloth of a color matching one tone of the plaid, preferably the ground tone. The bodice may be of plaid with a plain skirt, though the usual way is to follow the traditional Scotch method and make the kilt of the plaid with the bodice of a plain tone.

Some of the new plaid silks may be used with excellent effect to provide trimming to dark-colored frocks. Piping, made from bias cuttings of the silk, facings and strappings of plaid, give the desirable touch of color to navy blue or black for spring. At Southern resorts there have been seen, here and there, handbags of gay plaid, providing the only touch of color in an otherwise dark or neutral costume.

To wear with the new dark-colored suits or tailored frocks there are scarfs of wide plaid ribbon, and these are sometimes finished with fringe made from the ravelled ends of the ribbon knotted at regular intervals. When the ribbon is heavy, the fringe is quite effective.

A.—The United Farmers' Co-operative Company of Ontario had in 1926 the best year since the Company was organized in 1920. Total profits for the year, ended September 20, 1926, were $172,000, of which $60,000 will be available for a four per cent. stock dividend. There has been paid out $82,000 in commodity dividends to cream shippers, and $30,000 to shippers to the egg pool.

VALENTINE PARTY GAMES

If you are tired of bridge and hearts for your Valentine party amusement, and at the same time want a "progressive" party, here is one with a lot of variety to it.

The party is planned for boys and girls, but will work out successfully for all girls.

In place of numbers mark each table with a symbol of St. Valentine—cut-out cupid, heart, quiver full of darts, true lovers' knot, roses, violets and forget-me-knots. Then instead of tally cards each guest draws one of the cupids, hearts, and so forth, four of each kind being provided. Two men and two girls will have cupids, and so on through the list. Then the players go to the table marked with their insignia to start the games.

Each table is arranged for a different game.

Jack-Straws.

The cupid table is supplied with the game of Jack-straws. When the straws are dropped in their pile a tiny cupid is placed, standing, on top. The game is played as usual but when cupid is overthrown the player who does it is counted out. The pile is then remade. The first two players who overthrow cupid remain at the table and the other two progress to the next table and have two tiny red hearts pasted to their cupid.

The heart table is supplied with a shallow pan or bowl of fine white sand. The sand must be damp enough to hold tiny hearts cut from stiff red cardboard in an upright position. There is a small hole in each heart. Each player is given a rod with a line and a hook—those used in an old fish-pond game can be used—and invited to fish for the hearts. The two players "catching" the most hearts are given the tiny red hearts on their cards and progress to the next table.

Throwing Hoops.

The table marked with the quiver of darts, or just a golden arrow, is arranged for the old-fashioned game of throwing hoops—with a difference. A gilded arrow is securely fastened to a small gilded block. Each player is given a handful of small red celluloid rings and the two who throw the most rings over the arrow progress and receive their hearts.

At the table adorned with the blue ribbon lovers' knot, each player receives six or seven inches of half-inch blue ribbon. All players are blindfolded. The two who tie their knots first progress. The stiffer the ribbon the more difficult is the feat.

The rose table is supplied with a basket full of rose leaves cut from rose-pink crepe paper. Each petal has a letter printed on it in gilt. Each player gathers a small handful of petals and begins to form the words Saint Valentine. Unused letters may be put back in the basket, the player helping himself to more petals. The players who complete their words first progress.

At the violet table each player is given a pencil and paper and told to make as many different words as possible from the letters in the word "violet." The two who have the most words progress to the next table.

Rhyming.

The forget-me-not table gives the guests an opportunity to express themselves in true Valentine fashion. The "makings", along with paste, for Valentines are given the contestants, but they must compose their own verse. The two persons finishing first progress.

The hostess can ring a bell as the signal for progression, allowing not more than ten minutes for play between signals.

If supper partners are to be chosen it's fun to stretch a curtain across a wide double-doorway, having the bottom of the curtain twelve or fourteen inches from the floor. The girls stand behind the curtain with only their feet and ankles showing. Each pair of feet is numbered. Cut the numbers from a big calendar, paste them on carboard, and stand them in front of the curtain. Then each man chooses the feet he prefers, with their number, and matches his number when the girls appear from back of the curtain.

Prizes can be given to the man and girl who have progressed the oftenest while those who have moved the fewest number of times can be "consoled."

The Petes maintained their hold on second place in the senior group race last night by beating Toronto Canoe Club 3 goals to 1 at Brock St. rink, thus finishing the series with the Paddlers with a record of two wins and a draw.

The victory eliminated Toronto Canoe Club from the running and the battle for second place and the right to meet Varsity Grads in the play offs has narrowed down to the Marlboros and Petes with Friday's game here between the two teams likely to settle the argument.

The close checking of the Paddlers made last night's game a tensely fought affair but the Petes although they had to work hard for the scores they registered always were the better team and at no stage looked at all likely to lose.

Toronto Canoe Club were stronger defensively than on the attack and outside of the rushes of Art Smith, the sturdy defence man, their offensive moves were not particularly dangerous. On the defence, however, they checked vigorously and goals were not easy to get. The close checking, an ice surface that grew sticky as the game went on and the Petes' decision to play a kitty-bar-the-door system in the last period kept the game from approaching the spectacular save in flashes but there was a lot of hockey dished out at that.

The Petes scored the only goal of the first period on a smart play by Ken Kane just as time was up. In fact the timers were hunting for the bell when Kane lifted the rubber into the cage.

Frankie Collins got the solitary counter hung up in the second period on a beautiful shot following a pass from Ranger, and also added the Petes' third marker in the last period. Referee Harry Batstone who was on top of the play awarding the goal when the Toronto goal umpire refused to signal a score. The last tally of the battle fell to Canoe club when Smith scored on a nice shot following a fast breakaway.

In a tight checking affair of this kind there were few opportunities for individual starring, but Baker in goal and Smith on the defence stood out for the losers. Baker, always an effective goalie against the Petes made many clever saves while Smith was particularly prominent by reason of his rushes, one of which ended in his team's only counter while other attacks came close. On the forward line Goldsmith looked about the best of the outfit with Bond doing a lot of useful checking Moellnhauer worked a lot but got nothing out of it.

Manager Wright sent a new line-up into action with Parker back on the defence and Rose starting at left wing. Until he was tripped by Joe Wright early in the second period and hurt his knee Parker was going nicely while Rose of course is at home on the forward line and did fine work there. Kane often called on, was one of the hardest workers on the ice and gave Canoe club plenty to worry about at all times. Collins in spite of an injured hand played smart hockey, getting two nice goals, while Ranger's poke checking in mid ice stopped rush after rush, especially in the last period. Bogardis was always useful. McLeod turned in his usual effective game and Dwyer was consistently good in the nets, handling Canoe club's drives coolly and accurately.

It was fairly even going during the first period although the Petes had the edge in scoring opportunities. Early in the period Parker shoved the rubber into the net but was off side on the play and the goal was not allowed. Soon after this Kane gave Ranger a neat pass but Baker was in the way of the shot and also saved smartly when Collins went in close. The close checking of both teams allowed very few opportunities for the puck carrier to work in on top of the goalies but the Petes were more successful in this respect than the Paddlers whose shots from outside were easily smothered by Dwyer. Wright was chased for holding Ranger, the first penalty of the game and was soon followed by Kane. Nothing outstandingg happened while they were off and as the period drew to a close it looked like a scoreless twenty minutes. Near the close of the session Mollenhauer and Ranger were chased almost together and with the teams playing five men a side Kane stick handled out of the corner and carried the rubber out in front to score a neat goal. The time was up but the marker was registered before the timers could ring the bell to notify Referee Batstone and of course the score was allowed.

There was plenty of action early in the second period. Right off the reel McLeod nearly batted in a rebound after a combination rush. Then Smith uncorked one his corkscrew rushes and worked in on top of Dwyer only to have the bulky goaler block his drive. The Petes came back and gave Baker some busy moments.

"Snap" Parker came through with one of his old-time rushes, stickhandling through the Canoe Club defence, only to have Wright pull his feet from under him as he was about to shoot. Wright saved a goal by his action, and while he drew a penalty, the Petes lost the services of Parker for the rest of the period, as he hurt his knee. Soon after McLeod and Goldsmith were benched together for a jam, and Bogardis nearly scored on a smart play, but Baker made a smart save. He was beaten soon after when Ranger broke away and passed to Collins, who closed in and cleverly lifted the rubber over Baker's shoulder to score a beautiful goal. It was the only goal of the period, the Petes playing most of the session without subs, as Parker was out early in the stanza, and McLeod and Bond collided and both had to retire for repairs, returning shortly before the second rest period.

The last period was the least stirring of the three. The Petes adopted a defence game, satisfied to hold their two-goal lead, and although the Paddlers tried hard to break through, they had little success. Ranger poke-checked the rubber away from Canoeist attackers repeatedly, while Kane checked them behind their own blue line and tangled up many an attack before it got fairly started. Although for the most part the Petes' attacks at this stage were only one or two-man affairs, they were more dangerous than the Paddler raids, and finally Collins put the blue and white three goals up when he carried the puck out in front from a scrimmage near the end of the rink and beat Baker. The Toronto goal-umpire did not raise his arm, but Referee Batstone saw the play and awarded the goal.

Shortly after the Canoe club team averted a shut-out, and their goal came after a Peterboro attack that looked like a sure goal. Ranger got away, pulled the Paddlers' defence to him, and slipped the rubber to Rose, who raced in unchecked on top of Baker and drove one for the corner of the net. The clever Paddler goaler threw himself into the shot, making a great save, and Smith picked up the rubber and set sail for the Petes' territory, completing a nice rush by a high shot that went into the net off Dwyer's arm.

The Petes played safe for the balance of the game, and easily held their two-goal margin until the final bell ended the struggle.

Vapors Check a Cold Overnight

There are many ways to treat a cold but only one DIRECT way—with vapors that can be inhaled.

Vapors penetrate immediately into every corner of the air passages and lungs, soothing and healing with every breath.

Vicks is so remarkably successful in treating cold troubles because it acts like a "vapor lamp in salve form."

When rubbed over throat and chest the body heat releases vapors of Menthol, Camphor, Eucalyptus, Thyme and Turpentine. At the same time Vicks is absorbed through and stimulates the skin like a poultice or plaster.

This double, direct action often checks the worst cold overnight.

GOOD HOCKEY.

Omemee won the district Carew hockey cup by defeating Cambray and Red Rock.

On Wednesday night, the Omemee hockey team, accompanied by about sixty fans, went to Fenelon Falls, where a tournament was being held for the Carew cup. In the first round, Omemee was drawn against Cambray. The game was very fast and productive of good hockey, although the Omemee sextette were forced to play overtime. The final score was 3-2 in favor of Omemee.

Omemee drew a bye in the second round. On Friday night, when Red Rock, the winners of last year's tournament, were drawn against Omemee, a battle royal was assured. Another special train of about one hundred supporters again journeyed to the Fenelon town. The game was very fast and the cheering of the Omemee rooters encouraged the boys and they came home victorious. The final score was 6-4.

The team—Goal, S. Tripp; defence, Wilson and Adams; wings, Morton and Crafton; centre, Clemett; subs., Stephenson and Faulkner.

The cup is now on display in the local drug store window, and everyone is proud of the excellent hockey which the seniors are putting up.

BARS LIQUOR ADS.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—Punch, the famous London weekly, on whose front page for years have appeared advertisements for liquor, announced recently that it will accept no more liquor advertising of any kind.

Seven strikeouts in eight appearances at the plate!

Sounds like the performance of some busher trying to fathom the mysteries of Walter Johnson's pitching.

On the contrary, it was none other than Babe Ruth who contributed the club swinging epic. There was no air left in the ball park after he had finished the day's work.

A crowd of 40,000 who came out to applaud Ruthian home runs contributed bushels of "razzberries" instead as a token of their appreciation of so unusual a performance.

After all Babe Ruth is nothing if not original.

A double-header was scheduled at the Polo Grounds some seven or eight years back with the St. Louis Browns opposing the Yankees.

Urb Shocker, then the pitching ace of the Browns, fanned Ruth in his first four trips to the plate. Knowing that Ruth murdered speed, Shocker tied him into knots with a deceptive spitball and a slow curve.

Babe performed like an acrobat rather than a ball player in his efforts to hit the ball. On his fifth appearance he singled, temporarily relieving the embarrassment.

Carl Weilman, willowy southpaw, who recently died, worked the second game. He had a slow ball as tantalizing as that of Shocker. He took up the situation where Shocker left off.

Ruth struck out most ingloriously on his first three trips to the plate in the second game. This proved too much for even the Babe. As he fanned for the seventh time he rushed back to the Yankee dugout like a wild man, beating his bat against one of the concrete posts.

The players scattered in all directions. The fans roared. The bat finally broke, relieving the tension for everybody, including myself, as I was the umpire.

BRISTLING BATTLES of BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

by Jack McAuliffe

Then came the famous boxing carnival at the Olympic Club in New Orleans—the greatest boxing carnival ever held.

The first night I defended my world's lightweight championship against Bill Myers for a purse of $10,000.

The second night George Dixon and Jack Skelly were matched for a purse of $7500 and the world's championship at stake.

The third night John L. Sullivan and Jim Corbett were matched for a purse of $25,000 and the world's championship at stake.

In that memorable week, beginning Sept. 5, 1892, Skelly and good old John L. were tumbled into a heap and I alone retained my crown and was not knocked out.

I went up to the Maine woods to train.

I knew that Billy Myers was tough and I seriously started in to fit myself. Then I heard something that made me sort of take things easy.

Dick Roche, who was backing me, came up to see me and saw I was about 15 pounds overweight.

"My God, Jack, he says, "you'll never be able to make the weight, and this Myers will kill you if you do."

"Don't worry, Dick," I says, "he's trying to learn how to box—can you imagine that?"

And I had a good laugh and Roche thought I was crazy. The truth is a man who has a natural unorthodox style like Myers kills his best chances by dancing out and trying clumsily to box prettily. I always maintained that Luis Firpo has a more effective natural style slugging and throwing punches in his own effective way than he will ever learn by boxing. That's how he nearly beat the modern Jack Dempsey.

Roche put me on the scales one day before the fight and I was 10 pounds over. He went into a rage.

"I know Myers better than you do," I replied. "If he leads to me tomorrow and tries to box I'll knock him dead and it won't be a long fight. I can take off 10 pounds and still be strong enough to whip him."

Roche was very nervous on the eve of the fight.

NOTE—In the next chapter McAuliffe begins his description of the famous New Orleans carnival that ended in Sullivan's unexpected knockout by Corbett.

—Havelock, Caesar 6.50

10—Lindsay, Coombs 0.25

Playing their first game of the season, Havelock Intermediates held the strong Lindsay team to a 5—5 tie in the first game of their round in the O.H.A. play-offs last night. The game was played in the Lindsay ice box, and was marked by the recovery of the Havelock team after having been down 3—1 at the end of the first period.

The game was marked by heavy checking, both teams using their weight hard but in a clean manner. Even at that Referee Walker issued a great many penalties, Barney Quinn drawing the largest number of sentences.

Individual rushes were most productive of results, as the checking, especially the sweep check of the Lindsay defence, effectively broke up most of the combination attempted.

Wright and Neill were the stars for Havelock. The goal-keeper played a stirling game between the sticks, turning aside shot after shot in spectacular fashion. The left wing man scored two of his team's five counters and was prominent at all times.

The veteran Coombs was the best man on his team. He played an aggressive game on both offence and defence, coming up to the form he showed a few years ago when Peterborough and Lindsay were rivals.

The return game will be played here on Wednesday.

First Period

Right at the beginning of the first period the fun began when Quinn tripped Coombs. Penalized for the offence, Quinn was retired. The play see-sawed for several minutes until finally Davis poked a fast one past Neill, and registered the first goal. Havelock, however, were not deterred, but kept right on trying, Wright being very prominent as he initiated rush after rush into the enemy territory. Davis for Lindsay was going strong at this stage and shot in a couple that looked like sure goals, but was foiled by the ever-alert Neill. Caesar for Havelock got hold of the puck and, working up through the entire Lindsay team, sent in a hot shot from the left corner, missing the goal by inches.

Brennan was always prominent, assisting whenever he had the chance, and finally working up until he got his chance to shoot in a hot one from left wing. Hargrove stopped it and for a time the play was around centre ice. Finally it worked down toward the Havelock goal when Davis scored, giving Neill no chance to see the rubber. Wilford scored the next, picked up the rebound, and snapping the rubber past the Havelock goalie for the third goal of the period.

Killen and Caesar were benched as a result of a mix-up. The play was equal for several moments and then Wright of Havelock finally working in and scored the final goal of the period.

Second Period

The second period opened with both teams showing need of more practice. The pace was slow until McWilliams of Havelock poked a fast one past Hargrove. Coombs, Wilford, and Reeves worked hard and made Neill step. Caesar scored when he took a pass from Hooper after a neat rush by the defence man. Quinn was penalized for tripping Carew on a rush. Reeves also rushed, making Neill work hard to clear. Coombs and Quinn were chased for mixing it. Wright scored a beautiful goal, working his way through the entire Lindsay team on an end to end rush. Carew was benched for tripping. While he was off Killen carried play to the Havelock end, to be foiled by Neill.

Third Period

Havelock was two men short when the period opened. Hargrove played a splendid game in this period, as did Neill. Hooper and Carew drew a penalty for roughing it. McWilliams had to be carried from the ice when he fell against the boards. Killen scored on combination with Coombs. Caesar scored a goal by the try-try again method. He shot once, grabbed the rebound, shot again, was beaten, and on the third try bounced one in off Hargrove's pads for a goal. Less than a minute later, Coombs scored when Neill was lying in the net. With a minute to go Williams was penalized, but no change was made in the score during his absence.

MILLBROOK BOYS WIN HOCKEY GAME

Garden Hill C.S.E.T. and Tuxis Square Battle It Out.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 8.—The hockey game between the C.S.E.T. boys from Garden Hill and the local Tuxis Square, which was twice postponed on account of bad weather, was played on the Cosmos rink on Saturday afternoon resulting in a win for the home team by a score of 7-0. The line-up was:

Garden Hill—Goal, J. Odell; defence, D. Munroe, S. Mercer; centre, O. Woodley; wings, H. Cantrill, L. Dunbar; subs, R. Waddell, E. Scott, L. Barnes.

Millbrook—Goal, B. Freelove; defence, W. Sayles, E. Carson; centre, L. Rowland; wings, A. Todd, W. Morton; sub, K. Skitch.

The visitors were evidently outclassed in speed and combination from the start, though they succeeded in keeping the home team from scoring any additional goals in the final period. The score standing 7-0 at the end of the second period, the home boys allowed the out of town team to use all its players in the last period, with the result already noted.

A return game will be played at Garden Hill in the near future.

The junior team went to Bethany on Friday evening, Mr. B. B. Dawson in charge, with a resulting score of 1-0, in favor of the Bethany boys. Difficulties, because of icy roads, were experienced in reaching the Manvers town, and the size of the rink, with insufficient lighting facilities, were spoken of as hindrances to good play.

The Bethany juniors were expected here on Monday eevning for the return game. The local boys were very hospitably entertained after the game at Bethany on Friday evening.

RINK RATS WIN FROM CANUCKS

Two Goals at End of Third Period Break the Deadlock.

SCORE 4-2.

One of the fastest games yet seen in Midget Hockey took place between Rink Rats and the Canuks at the Sacred Heart rink on Monday evening. It would be a hard thing to pick out stars as every man gave his best. The first period ended with one goal each, and at the end of the second period each team had another. The Rink Rats ran in two at the last stage of the third. There were numerous penalties and it looked like a battle at any part of the game. The teams:

Canucks: R. Creighton, goal; E McGrath and B Campanaro defense; F. Meagher, centre; L Burke and J Roach, wings; H Jones and L Blodgett subs.

Rink Rats: Goal N Calladine; defence, W Starr and J Playford; centre G Cuthbertson; wings J Ellis and D McCullough; subs., G Merritt and E Simpson.

Goals scored: Canucks: F. Meagher, J. Roach; Rink Rats, W. Starr, Merritt, McCullough, Cuthbertson.

Referee, J. Ward.

4TH PETERBORO TROOP.

A new patrol was started at last Thursday night's meeting, raising the total to four, which are respectively, the Owls, Crows, Foxes and the new patrol, the Kangaroos.

A patrol is made up of two or more Scouts, while a troop consists of two or more patrols. Scout Jack Heffernan of the Owls, was made patrol leader of the Kangaroos, and, according to present indications, they will be hopping along at the front of the troop competition, as they led at the end of the last meeting by 1-2 point.

Scout C. Butcher was promoted to patrol leadership of the Crows, when H. Taylor, the former leader, was made acting troop leader.

Some prospective Scouts will be at the next meeting and this will help even up the patrols and so make a keener competition.

The repeated going out of the lights somewhat darkened the troop room at the last meeting, but did not dampen the spirits of the Scouts at all; in fact it somewhat livened them. In this it was aided a lot by some noisy games, one of which was "Indian club." In this game the fellow stand in a small circle with an unlucky scout in the centre. This scout has to stand stiff like a club, with his arms at his side and then fall backwards on any part of the circle. He is then pushed back and forth until a weak link lets him fall through. The scouts then change places and the game goes on.

A period of twenty minutes was given up to instruction work in the patrol corners under the leadership of the patrol leaders. Different parts of scout work are taken up every night, no two patrols doing the same thing. Thus some are learning how to signal, while others are finding out how to revive an apparently drowned man, how to box the compass, what knots to use to tie a man up, etc.

As the fixing up of new patrol corners had taken up quite a bit of time it was found advisable to have the sing-song, which is a regular part of the troop meeting. An imitation camp fire was soon rigged up with an electric light, a bunch of red paper and some wood.

A number of snappy songs were sung, one being, "The bear went over the mountain." Mr. Corbett, the scoutmaster, then gave an interesting talk on 'Courage,' showing the difference between this and bravery.

The 4th unanimously decided to accept the challenge of the 3rd to have a hockey game, the loser to provide a feed. Mr. Taylor, 221 Hunter street, is also giving a dozen oranges and a dozen bananas to the winning troop, so it ought to be a good game. It is to be played on Wednesday at the Collegiate rink from 6 to 7.

The scouts were then dismissed, after their customary ending, with the exception of the patrol leaders who remained to figure out any knotty problems that had come up since the last meeting.

VIOLIN RECITAL WILL BE GIVEN

MISS BEST PIANIST.

As it is some time since a recital of violin music has been given in Peterborough, special interest attaches itself to the fact that Miss Edwina Palmer, with Miss Agnes Best, Pianist, is preparing for one on February 22nd. Miss Palmer has been connected with Peterborough so long, and has always given so generously of her talents, that she needs no recommendation of any kind. It is only interesting to know that for the past two years she has been cultivating a special branch of her art in conjunction with her pianist, Miss Best, in presenting many of the sonatas for violin and piano. They have already played seven or eight of these larger works at their Toronto recitals, and have received many expressions of appreciation and encouragement. To the uninitiated, the term "Sonata" perhaps sounds rather alarming, and the thought of a whole evening devoted to them is more alarming still. But when a sonata is looked upon as a connected group of three or four short movements or pieces written by one composer, it cannot surely be thought more difficult to enjoy than a group written by different composers. For instance, the beautiful D Minor Sonata of Brahms shows us so many more sides of the composer's character than one short piece could do. The first movement is passionate, excitable and mystifying; the second movement shows the tender, romantic Brahms; in the third, he is delightfully whimsical and mischievous, and the fourth casts off all restrain and is an outburst of energy and enthusiasm. Sonata playing calls for some self-sacrifice on the part of the performers. Here they must sink themselves in the music. It is no solo performance with piano accompaniment, but a serious combination of two instruments of differing tone qualities. It is like a delightful interplay of thought, a conversation. It consequently requires a special preparation, and a unanimity of aim and understanding between two players, and for a perfect ensemble, unceasing practice together. The necessary combination is rarely to be found, and so, we seldom hear any of these glorious works for violin and piano.

In honor of the centenary of Beethoven's death in 1827 which the musical world holds in remembrance this year, Miss Palmer and Miss Best will play his F Major Sonata, one youthful in spirit and of great beauty. "Nothing ventured, nothing won," they will also venture a sonata by Delius, a living English composer who has been long neglected, and one which they venture to say has never been given in Canada before thejr performance of it some weeks ago in Toronto. The Brahms Sonata, mentioned above, will complete the programme.

MOVIE THRILLER FAR OUTDONE AT CARLETON PLACE

Girl Leaps Into Icy, Swift-Flowing River To Escape Train.

IS RESCUED.

Youth Working Nearby Saves Her—Train Injures Boy.

OTTAWA, Feb. 8. — A desperate plunge for life from a railway bridge into the icy waters of the Mississippi River, at Carleton Place, followed by a thrilling rescue, was not the plot of a movie, but the actual experience of Miss Annie Pretty of that town late yesterday afternoon. Miss Pretty in company with her sister, Ethel Pretty, aged 12 years, was walking across the C. P. R. railway bridge right in the town, when the C.P.R. passenger train bound from Pembroke to Ottawa, bore down upon them in the gathering dusk before they noted their danger. Ethel managed to run off the bridge to safety, but when the older girl realized her peril it was too late to do anything but plunge off the bridge into the river below. The river at this point is near the rapids which supply power to the Bates and Innes Woollen Mills, and is open water covered only by frazil.

Allan Swayne, an employee of the Woollen mills and a member of the Carleton Place hockey team, from the factory office, saw Annie Pretty floundering in the river. Quickly stripping off most of his clothing, he plunged into the swiftly moving, ice filled waters and succeeded by a gallant effort in bringing the young woman safely to shore.

A few seconds after crossing the bridge the same train that caused this exciting episode struck James Angus, aged 17, Carleton Place, as he was crossing the tracks near the station, and injured him to such an extent that he was brought to the hospital in Ottawa. His condition, however, is not dangerous.

CONCISENESS OF PROGRAMME AS OUTLINED IN SPEECH CRITICIZED BY LEADERS OF THE OPPOSITION

Were Many More Matters of Importance To Ontario People.

AGRICULTURAL AID.

Thought More Explanation Needed As Regards Programme Before Session.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 9 (Canadian Press)—The brevity of the government programme for the session as outlined in the speech from the throne was severely criticized by W. E. N. Sinclair, Liberal leader, and W. E. Raney, Progressive leader, when the debate on the address in reply to the speech was resumed in the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon. There were many matters of importance to the people of the province, such as aid to the farming community in connection with electrical energy at rates within their ability to pay, aid for the marketing of agricultural produce and agricultural development, the St. Lawrence navigation and power project, a blue sky law and the introduction of the townships' school bill which the government had promised some time ago. Both speakers thought that the people of the province were entitled to some explanation as to why matters of the utmost importance, demanding immediate attention, had not been contained in the speech.

The Liberal leader said he doubted if ever before in the history of the Legislature had there been delivered a speech from the throne with as many words and as few ideas as that read at the opening of the Assembly on February 2nd. It was nothing but an "abridged Ontario review." Mr. Sinclair and Mr. Raney agreed that the most important work of the session would be the interpretation of the recent verdict of the people on the temperance question and the expression of that interpretation in a statute. The government had received only a blank cheque from the people and it was for the legislature to fill it out.

Secured Support

Mr. Raney paid his respects to Rev. Canon H. J. Cody, of Toronto, who, he said, had "played the part of Cardinal Wolsey to the Prime Minister's Henry VIII" in the last provincial election, and who was "far and away the most potent name on the broadside of knights and archbishops, bishops, archdeacons, major-generals, doctors, bank managers and lawyers" who lent their names and credentials in support of government control of the sale of liquor. This broadside was a "master stroke of strategy" on the part of the premier and it won the election in rural Ontario. The names of scores of eminent men who had given the premier credentials for government control gathered together with synopses of their sentiments and the whole published as a broadside, multiplied by the millions and put into every house. In fact many copies into almost every one of the half million homes of the province. Expense was obviously no impediment to the prime minister's campaign committee and "honey for government purposes was as free as water."

Mr. Sinclair in congratulating those appointed to new offices in the legislature included the defeated government candidates and declared that they were being "readily taken care of." The Liberals, he continued, had increased their representation in the house from 12 to 21 and he would promise on their behalf that they would not adopt a captious attitude, but would aim to give service to the province and constructive criticism of governmental action. While they had a new legislature they had not a new government. It was the old government

Smoked French Cigarette The Stub Betrayed Him

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—(A.P.)—A cigarette stub helped sway sentiment of former German subjects in Alsace Lorraine to the allies during the World War, in the belief of Lieut.-Col. Bernard Flood, chief of the A.E.F. secret service.

After nine years Col. Flood reveals in the February Elks Magazine that thousands of luke-warm Alsatians in recently captured territory were enraged by a murder that climaxed a series of assaults and robberies. A stub of a French cigarette and an American bayonet were found at the scene. A search was made among 10,000 troops for an American who smoked French cigarettes, usually detested by the doughboys. The guilty man was found and his arrest appeased the Alsatians.

AGED MAN HURT BY AUTOMOBILE

Knocked Down at Intersection and Slightly Injured About Legs.

CAR WAS STOPPING.

Benjamin Stiles was knocked down and injured by an automobile at the corner of Brock and Water Streets about 6 o'clock last night.

The owner of the automobile was driving south on Water Street, and on coming to the intersection he noticed Mr. Stiles who was crossing from the south-east corner to the north-west corner. He blew his horn several times, he said, but Mr. Stiles paid no attention.

Applying his brakes caused the car to swerve, the running board striking Mr. Stiles and knocking him down. Mr. Stiles, who is an aged man, had both legs slightly injured, but no serious consequences are anticipated.

LIQUOR BOARD CHIEF.

D. B. HANNA,

Formerly President and General Manager of the Canadian National Railways, who was named by Premier Ferguson as head of the Ontario Liquor Control Commission.

HANNA TO HEAD CONTROL BOARD SAYS PREMIER

Stuart McClenaghan, Ottawa, and Hon. R. J. Manion, Other Commissioners.

NAMED IN HOUSE.

Premier Says Principle of Legislation Will Be "Thou Shouldst."

TORONTO, Feb. 9 — D. B. Hanna, late president of the Canadian National Railways and at present head of the Western Canada Flour Mills, was revealed last evening in the Ontario Legislature as the "strong man" of the Government Control Liquor Commission. Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, M.P., of Fort William, and Stewart McClenaghan, of Ottawa, were also disclosed as the other two members of the Commission.

The announcement was made by Premier Ferguson towards the close of the address which he was contributing to the debate on the Speech from the Throne, and in reply to the deliverances with which Liberal Leader Sinclair and Progressive Leader Raney had preceded him.

The high character of the Commission was emphasized by the Premier in his announcement of it. The choice of Mr. Hanna as chairman was submitted as one with which the Opposition leaders in the Chamber must be perfectly satisfied. The name of Mr. McClenaghan, elected to the Dominion House in 1925, defeated in 1926, and a proprietor of a former clothing business in Ottawa, was offered as that of a citizen who was well-nown in Eastern Ontario, who would bring business experience to the Board. Hon. Dr. Manion was simply referred to as a young medical man of brilliance who had been induced to give up a valuable practice in Fort William to associate himself with the public service of the Commission. All three officials will remove to Toronto almost immediately. Hon. Dr. Manion, it is stated, will not have to resign his seat in the Federal House, as the appointment is a Provincial one and not a violation of the Independence of Parliament Act.

The announcement came from the Prime Minister after he had spent some time reviewing the criticism which the other Opposition leaders had made of the Government's liquor policy, both during the election and in their speeches of the afternoon. He emphasized that the Government was wedded to the educational principle of "Thou shouldst" rather than to the coercive principle of "Thou shalt" in legislation, and declared that it relied more upon wise administration than upon restrictive enactments to achieve the public welfare. This principle, he stated, would provide the mainspring of the Government control legislation.

"To make this law successful," he declared, "the Government proposes to put it into the hands of a strong man and I am glad to say that in this province there are many strong men who are public spirited enough and unselfish enough that they are prepared to give some time to the public service and to better conditions. I have not had any difficulty, and I could get you half a dozen strong men, but I have got one of the outstanding men of the Dominion of Canada. The chairman of the commission, who I am sure will command your endorsation, will be the late president and general manager of the National Railways, Mr. D. B. Hanna (prolonged applause.) He is a man the very mention of whose name to the people of the province and Domin-

Influenza Epidemic Caused By Sun Spots, Says Russian Who Finds Germ Activity Increased By Their Influence

MOSCOW, Feb. 9 (A.P.).—Sun spots are responsible for the present epidemic of influenza, in the opinion of Professor A. L. Tchijevsky of Moscow University. Professor Tchijevsky is the scientist who, in a paper sent to the recent convention of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Philadelphia, predicted another great war in 1929, due to solar agitation.

He told the correspondent that the electrical influence of the sun upon the earth had increased bacterial activity to the point where whole countries were affected by the disease.

Most of the poisonous bacteria were harmless to man, he said, provided they were not acted upon by the sun. He believes that, by isolating the human organism from solar influence and submitting it to special electrical treatment, a quick and effective cure for influenza will be found. He also ascribes typhoid fever, hydrophobia and the bubonic plague to sun-spot activity.

"Man," he said, "is the slave of the sun and its vast electrical power. Alike in health and sickness, his welfare and behavior are not regulated by Providence or the unstable human will, but by the sun's electro-magnetic force upon the earth, which is one common organizism of which man is only a part.

"My theory that the present spread of influenza throughout the world is due to the sun spots is brilliantly supported by the history of epidemics for the last thousand years.

"For example, the greatest cholera plagues occurred during the periods of the maximum sun-spot activity and declined sharply when that activity reached its minimum. These sun-spot periods occur regularly in cycles of eleven years."

NAMES HEARST AS CAUSING WAR

U. S. Representative Says Publisher Agitating For War With Mexico.

CHINA DIVERSION.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9 (United Press).—By sending naval forces to China the administration is attempting to divert attention from Mexico and Nicaragua, Representative Huddleston, Alabama Democrat, declared in the House yesterday.

He predicted that Mexico's offer to arbitrate would be rejected and named William Randolph Hearst, newspaper publisher, as one of the main agitators for war with Mexico.

"Hearst owns over a million acres of land in Mexico," he said. "It has been Hearst ,the great property owner, the selfish Hearst, and the non-combatant, who has clamored for war."

KING'S VISIT IMPOSSIBLE

London Paper Says Trip To Canada in July Out of Question.

WONDERS AT REQUEST.

LONDON, Feb. 9 (Canadian Press). — "It is to be hoped that Canadians will understand the real impossibility of King George's accepting the invitation to visit the Dominion in July," declares the Weekly Truth to-day. "A month's absence from England at that time of the year is so clearly out of the question that it is a wonder that His Majesty should have been put in the position of having to refuse the invitation."

The name Sing Sing comes from the Sin-Sinck Indians, original inhabitants of the region in which the prison now stands.

REPORTS DIFFER ON REVOLUTION

Lisbon Says Fighting Continues—Madrid Reports Surrender of Rebels.

COMMUNICATION BAD.

LONDON, Feb. 9. — Canadian Press. — A Lisbon despatch to the Star, filed in the Portuguese capital to-day says 'Fighting has been proceeding in Lisbon for the last 40 hours and continues. All cable and wireless stations are in the hands of the government."

Suppression Reported.

LONDON, Feb. 9. Canadian Press—The Madrid correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Company says telegrams from Pontevedra near the Portuguese border, quote travellers from Portugal as expressing the opinion that the Lisbon Government has suppressed the uprising, although a few shots are still being fired in the neighborhood of Oporto. Railway communication have not yet been restored. An official report received here says that the insurgents at Oporto have capitulated to the government forces. Firing continues at Lisbon, however.

No British Casualties.

LONDON, Feb. 9. United Press.)—There had been no British casualties resulting from the revolutionary street fighting in Lisbon up to Midday on Tuesday, private messages received here from Lisbon said.

"The situation is still uncertain," a message said.

"The rebels are still holding important positions and firing is continuing."

Before surrendering the Revolutionaries asked that all sergeants, corporals, and private soldiers involved in the uprising be freed from responsibility for it. The government commander agreed except with reference to sergeants.

Expansion Carried Out Simultaneous With Addition of Latest Equipment.

After several months of preparation, The Examiner has finally established itself in its enlarged premises; after taking over the former store of Trebilcock Brothers, and changing some of the interior arrangements of the plant. In the new addition at 417 George street is now located the Job Printing department, which has adopted as its slogan, "The complete printing plant," and contains the largest and most complete equipment in this section of Ontario. In charge is H. E. Mounstephen, whose office, with that of W. R. Patch, is located in the front section, which also houses the Accounting department, with Roy D. Taylor and E. Humpage in charge. In the rear of this section are the fast job presses, walled off from the front portion, which has been finished in a bright and cheerful color scheme of light buff, green and gold, and furnished in the most up to date fashion in office equipment.

All printing orders can now be given in these offices on the ground floor, and samples of papers, cardboards and printing are on display there.

Following out its motto, "If it will help Peterborough, The Examiner is for it," one of the large front windows in this new section at 417 George street is being offered gratis for the use of any national special campaign advertising in The Examiner. BRITISH FORCES GO TO SHANGHAI FROM HONG KONG

Forces Recently Arrived in China Continue Their Journey.

SURPRISE CAUSED.

News of Departure of Soldiers Unexpected After Premier's Speech.

HONG KONG, Feb. 9 (Canadian Press)—Second battalion of Worcestershire regiment sailed for Shanghai to-day. Second Battalion of Durham Light Infantry, which recently arrived from Calcutta also left for Shanghai.

Surprise in London

LONDON, Feb. 9 (Canadian Press) — News that the British troops which landed in Hong Kong yesterday were already proceeding to Shanghai, site of the greatest international settlement in China, caused considerable public surprise in view of Premier Baldwin's statement on the Chinese situation in the House of Commons yesterday.

It is pointed out, however, that the Premier said the question whether troops would be landed at Shanghai or stationed at some other point within convenient distance would be left to the British representatives on the spot and that the original plans called for the troops to proceed to Shanghai.

Not Question for League

LONDON, Feb. 9 (United Press)—Britain will not submit the Chinese question to the League of Nations, the United Press was authoratively informed to-day, but the government was considering the advisability of keeping the League informed of all developments.

Italian Cruiser Sent

ROME, Feb. 9 (United Press)—The Italian cruiser San Giorgio, the United Press was authoratively informed to-day, will depart for China this month with landing parties aboard.

Members of Premier Mussolini's personal army, the Fascist militia, may have an opportunity for active service in China if it became necessary to land Italian armed parties there. A detachment of militia would be included in the cruiser's passengers.

Mussolini recently assumed direct command of the militia which has as its principal objective the protection of Il Duce and perpetuation of his rule.

Movement National

LONDON, Feb. 9 (Canadian Press). — Former Premier Lloyd George, Liberal leader, taking the floor in the House of Commons debate on the King's Speech from the Throne, paid tribute today to the policy pursued toward China by Sir Austen Chamberlain, the Foreign Secretary. He hoped it would be possible to avoid landing troops in Shanghai, but the Government must act if there was any real peril there. The former Premier asserted that the Chinese movment was not Bolshevist but was essentially Nationist. The equipment of the Chinese factions came not from Russia, but from United States and British merchants in Shanghai.

New Control Bill Believed to Provide Fines For Offenders

Believed at Parliament Buildings That It Will Be Separate Act, Built Upon New Foundations Rather Than Wreckage of O.T.A

WILL BE NO RESTRICTIONS UPON SALE OF NATIVE WINES BY MANUFACTURERS

To Establish Indian List With Names of Habitual Offenders and Persons Who Misuse Their Permit Privileges—Prison Terms For Second Offenders.

TORONTO, Feb. 9.—When the new Government control bill is introduced in the Legislature by Premier Ferguson, it will be a separate act, built upon a new foundation rather than upon the wreckage of the O.T.A., according to well informed opinion at the Parliament Buildings. The O.T.A. will, according to these authorities, be repealed with only one or two of its features, more particularly with respect to physicians' prescriptions for six-ounce bottles, retained and incorporated in the new bill.

The sale of beer, whiskey, brandy, imported wines, etc., will be confined to the stores to be administered by the Administrative Board, but there will be no restrictions placed on the sales of native wines. In fact, such wines will be possible of purchase by the individual bottle instead of as at present by the case. And the manufacturers thereof will be permitted to advertise the sale of their beverages.

Can Deliver Direct

Delivery of liquors will be left to the regulation of the board, but breweries will be permitted to deliver direct to consumers, although the orders for their stock must be placed by the public through the board.

No stores will be permitted in local option districts as such districts were known in 1916, when the O.T.A. replaced the license system. The residents of such districts may, however, vote to repeal local option and the residents of other districts may vote to become "dry" as provided for in the local option law. Such votes may be taken every three years. In such votes a three-fifth plurality will be required. One important change, however, is that voters shall be persons permitted to vote at provincial elections rather than persons privileged to vote only at municipal elections.

For Bootlegging.

Penalties for the suppression of bootlegging will be severe. Anyone selling liquor illegally will be subject to a fine of $100 to $1000 for the first offence, and to six months' imprisonment with or without the option of a fine for the second offence.

It will, however, be within the power of the Board to recommend clemency for first offenders, and such recommendations shall be considered as of the utmost importance by the magistrates. Recommendations will not be possible in the case of habitual offenders, and means will be taken to make the imprisonment in such cases so severe that bootlegging will be a highly unprofitable offence.

Judges Compile List.

An Indian list will, according to some of those who profess to know, be established upon which will be kept the names of habitual offenders and of persons who misused their permit privileges, and the honor of having one's name on the Indian list will carry with it the doubtful honor of being unable to get a permit. However, the compilation of the Indian list will be left to the judges rather than to police officials or others, and so it is presumed a case will have to be proved against an offender before his name is put on the list.

The Board of Administration will consist of a chairman and two colleagues, and the chairman shall be the administrator of the Board.

Permits For Individuals.

Individual permits shall be issued to applicants, and there will be a distinction between the permits issued to residents and those for transients. There will be no restriction as to the quantities of liquor or beer that may be purchased on a permit, and it will be possible for hotel guests or roomers in rooming houses to have liquor in their apartments.

Physicians will be able as at present to prescribe six-ounce bottles for patients to be filled at drug stores, and in certain remote districts, where there are no vendor stores. Doctors will have permits to sell liquor themselves.

Applying to Perfumes.

The same provisions as those contained in the O.T.A. with respect to the sale of perfumes and other alcoholic liquids will apply under the new law.

VESTRY MEETING AT ALL SAINTS'

Very Successful Year Indicated in All Reports Read.

EXTENDING WORK.

The annual vestry meeting of the Parish of All Saints' was held yesterday evening, with the Rector presiding. Very enthusiastic reports were presented by the various organizations of the parish, all of them testifying to the active work being done, and in spite of large contributions towards the reduction of the church debt there was no falling off in other departments.

The churchwardens' account showed total receipts of $14,226.71 and total disbursements of $14,094.85 leaving a balance in hand of $132.00.

The congregation paid $944.23 to the various missionary funds, and in addition a sum of $290.97 was contributed through the various societies for the same purpose.

Noteworthy was an item of $6,000 paid off the mortgage of the church, leaving a balance of $6,300 on this mortgage, which it is hoped will be cleared off by the end of the summer. A special committee is to be appointed to look after this, and the congregation will be asked to continue their efforts till the last dollar has been cleared off.

A letter was read from the Bishop asking the Parish of All Saints to take charge of the district formerly ministered to by the St. Alban's Mission. A committee of the former wardens was appointed to confer on this extension work.

The wardens for the coming year B. Ottewell and T. P. Hooper.

The lay delegates to the Synod are: Messrs. C. Lacheur, T. Pitchford and C. Hamilton.

The Rector's salary was increased by $150, to date from January 1.

FOUR ALDERMEN ARE OUSTED IN WINDSOR CITY

Judge Ross' Decision Installs Runners-up in Last Municipal Election.

TWO HAD RESIGNED.

Follow Charges That Candidates Had Distributed Liquor During Campaign.

WINDSOR, Ont., Feb. 9 (Canadian Press).—Aldermen Edward P. Holden, Garnet A. Edwards, Roy R. Hicks and Albert W. Strong have been disqualified from holding office in Windsor City Council.

Aldermen Frank J. Mitchell and John W. McConnell had already resigned.

Alderman Charles Henri is declared to retain his seat.

Mayor Cecil E. Jackson's election is not affected.

There will be no new election. Instead Clyde W. Curry, C. E. Redeker, Walter F. Brooke, Arthur J. Rogers, George Bennett and Robert Weber will be moved up to take the places of the six vacant seats.

These men were next in order after Arch E. Hooper, who was thirteenth in the election results of December 6, 1926. Mr. Hooper was disqualified from taking office.

This is the decision handed down yesterday afternoon by Judge Duncan C. Ross, of St. Thomas, who presided at the hearing to upset the election. The case was heard in Windsor on January 25-27.

Action to upset the election was first taken by Archibald E. Hooper, who ran thirteenth in tthe 1927 election. He charged that liquor was distributed by various candidates; that ballots were marked after the polls had closed and that taxes had not been paid.

HANNA TO HEAD CONTROL BOARD

ion will be an assurance that a genuine effort will be made to administer efficiently this law free from influence or favor on anyone's part; and it is some sacrifice, I would like the House to understand, for a man who has occupied that position in the business and public affairs of this Dominion, who to-day is overwhelmed with business interests of various kinds, that when he hears of the problem and realizes the need of somebody stepping into the breach is willing to make the great sacrifice necessary, that he may make some worth while contribution to the welfare of this province."

Take 3 Hanna to head dr

"Will Mr. Hanna be permitted to choose the subordinates who will carry out the Government control scheme, outside of any influence of party patronage?" asked Hon. W. E. Raney.

"The chairman," continued the Premier, "will be buttressed by two commissioners of splendid character, outstanding reputation and ability, one of them from the City of Ottawa, a man who has had a long business career; has had some experience in public life and has made some sacrifices—Stewart McClenaghan. (Applause.) The third commissioner, I am very glad to inform the House, is a man whose personal integrity, energy and ability has endeared him to everyone with whom he has come in contact, and who has played a very active part in the public affairs of the Province. He is sacrificing a splendid medical practice, but he is prepared to do it asa public-spirited citizen. Hon. R. J. Manion, of Fort William, is the third commissioner. (Applause).

A Strong Board.

"There has never been a more outstanding and capable commission appointed for any purpose, and it will command to the fullest extent public confidence and good will, because their integrity is unquestioned and their honesty of purpose above suspicion and reproach. They will devote their efforts loyally and patriotically to the public welfare of Ontario.

"I bespeak for the new commission and the legislation sympathy and support on the part of all the members of the Legislature, and constructive suggestion when the time comes for discussion of the bill."

Apart from this announcement of the liquor commission, the Prime Minister's address was general in its character. He was given a vociferous reception upon rising to speak and opened with the usual congratulations to the mover and seconder of the address. He turned then to the Opposition leader's criticisms of the meagerness of the bill-of-fare provided by the throne address, and averred that, while he was willing to concede that it was a light programme, it was full of suggestiveness compared with the speeches which its critics had delivered during the afternoon.

M'COSKEY TRIED FOR SECOND TIME

Effort To Prove He Is an Imbecile, Not Responsible For Act.

KINGSTON, Ont., Feb. 9. Canadian Press. — In an effort to prove that Thomas McCoskey, on trial for the second time in five months for the murder of Guard H. E. Jenkins, of the Portsmouth penitentiary, is an imbecile, and therefore not responsible for his deed, the defence in the case which is being held at the Supreme Court sittings before Judge Lennox yesterday afternoon, placed Prof. G. Humphries of Queen's University in the box, and he stated that after examining McCoskey he found he had the mentality of a child of between seven and eight years. In cross examination by W. H. Williams, however, Prof. Humphries admitted that McCoskey would also have the knowledge gained since he was the age of seven.

McCoskey took the stand in his own defence yesterday afternoon and during the course of examination by Mr. Williams, he stated that he went to church when he was in Montreal. Asked why he went to church, he said it was because "God made me strong and gave me life." He stated that he did not know why he had struck Jenkins with the crowbar but said that the guard had hit him with a door in the morning, and this had made him "mad."

Evidence was given for the prosecution to the effect that previous to being sentenced in Toronto for seven years for theft, McCoskey had been in jail six times for various convictions of theft. Dr. C. B. Farrar, mental specialist, of Toronto, sent by the department of the Attorney-General, stated on examination it was found that McCoskey knew the difference between right and wrong. He said he came to the conclusion that McCoskey was a dangerous man. "I consider all repeaters of crime as dangerous men," said Dr. Farrar. "McCokey admitted six previous crim dating from 1917. He came to this country from Russia in 1912, and says he has a wife and child there."

Evidence for the defence was completed at 5:30 yesterday afternoon, and the court was resumed at seven o'clock, when the addresses of the counsels were heard.

TRUCK LEAPS CURB AND KILLS WOMAN

Driver of Coupe in Detroit Car Accident is Sought.

DETROIT, Feb. 9—An unidentified woman was struck and killed by a truck driven by James Crothers, 18 eyars old, 9685 Prairie avenue, at 10 a.m. yesterday, when the vehicle jumped the curb on Chicago boulevard west, between American and Terry avenues. The woman, who was standing on the curb, could not get out of the way.

Crothers, in a statement made at the prosecuting attorney's office yesterday, said he lost control of his steering apparatus when his left front wheel was hit by a small coupe trying to pass him.

After obtaining the driver's name, Crothers commandeered a passing touring car and took the woman to Receiving Hospital, ordering the other to follow him. The driver of the coupe turned down a side street after following for two blocks, Crothers said. The woman was dead on admittance to the hospital.

The police are seeking the driver of the coupe.

PHEASANTS THRIVE AROUND HIAWATHA

English Ring-Necked Birds Raised By G. Paudash Often Seen.

HIAWATHA, Feb. 9.—The pheasants which were hatched last summer from eggs obtained from the Department of Game and Fisheries of Ontario by Mr. George Paudash, of this village, are often seen.

One of the faults that has been noticed is that people who raised them are too good and liberal with food. They seem to forget that the English ring-necked pheasants are wild birds in their native state.

The male birds are great scrappers and take great delight in vanquishing the roosters in the local hen-yards. It has been stated that male pheasants and hens have mated.

The birds can fly like partridge, and their protective coloring makes them hard to discern, even in the present icy surroundings.

Those who raised the wild fowl last year are anxious to do it again. Many other residents also have expressed their desire to procure a setting or more.

A nominal charge of fifty cents was levied last year per setting. Perhaps now that the car licenses are reduced this fee may also be.

Those wishing to raise pheasants, whether in Otonabee or any other township, should phone Mr. Paudash on Keene central or Capt. Carson, Game Warden, Peterborough, for full particulars.

If these birds thrive and do well in the next few years, as in last year, this will be a great advertisement and drawing card for the country south and east of Peterborough.

OLD MASTERS

My days among the dead are past;
Around me I behold,
Where'er these casual eyes are cast,
The mighty minds of old:
My never-failing friends are they,
With whom I converse day by day.

With them I take delight in weal
And seek relief in woe;
And while I understand and feel
How much to them I owe,
My cheeks have often been bedew'd
With tears of thoughtful gratitude

My thoughts are with the dead; with them
I live in long-past years,
Their virtues, loves, their faults condemn,
Partake their hopes and fears,
And from their lessons seek and find
Instruction with an humble mind.

My hopes are with the dead; anon
My place with them will be,
And I with them shall travel on
Through all Futurity;
Yet leaving here a name, I trust,
That will not perish in the dust.

OTONABEE COUPLE GIVEN SET OF DISHES

Friends Gather To Say Farewell To Mr. and Mrs. W. Northey.

MATHER'S CORNERS, Feb. 9.—On Friday evening more than 50 neighbors and friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Whitfield Northey. It was a real surprise party. This was the means taken of saying farewell to the host and hostess, who are soon to leave for a new neighborhood. At ten minutes to twelve, before the plenteous lunch was served, two chairs were placed in the parlor and Mr. and Mrs. Northey sat down, while Mr. M. E. Hinton read the following address:

"Dear Mr. and Mrs. Northey:

"As you are about to depart from our midst we feel it our pleasant mark of respect and to recognize in some tangible form our appreciation for the kindness you have shown towards us.

"Your life amongst us has been a source of pleasure, and your genial manners have gained for you the confidence and appreciation of a large circle of friends.

"Your loss to the community is felt by all, but lessened by the knowledge that you are not going far beyond our reach, and in order that this expression of our regard and esteem for you may be shown in a more obvious manner, we request your acceptance of this tea set and ask you to value it not as something indispensible but as a reminder of the many happy times that we have mingled together, and of the kindly feelings that the people of this district bear toward you.

"As you enter your new home, it is the sincere and heart-felt desire of all that you may long be spared to enjoy the greatest happiness, being confident that your qualities will carry you far towards the realization of your greatest hopes.

"Signed on behalf of this community—Clara Coward, Edwin Coward."

Though they were both taken by surprise and Mrs. Northey was deeply moved, Mr. Northey thanked their friends in a very capable manner. He requested them to come to their new home whenever possible and assist them in using the beautiful tea set.

Mr. Edwin Coward and Miss Clara Coward presented the purse and dishes.

IL DUCE HALTS ATTACKS ON 'Y'

Militant Fascisti Ordered To Check Their Newspaper Campaign.

ENVOY'S ADVICE.

ROME, February 9.(United Press) Premier Mussolini, acting upon a suggestion by United States Ambassador Henry P. Fletcher, yesterday ordered militant Fascist elements to cease their newspaper campaign against the Young Men's Christian Associaton.

Attacks on the Y.M.C.A. began a fortnght ago after Pope Pius had ordered dissolution of Catholic Boy Scout organizations in certain communities in compliance with the Fascist programme for absorption of the boys of Italy in a Junior Fascist organization. Militant Fascists immediately began clamoring for the suppression of th Y.M.C.A., which was believed to be anti-national in some respects and in any event calculated to detract from the Junior Fascist organization.

Fletcher discussed the matter with Under-Secretary Grandi, who put the matter up to Mussolini. Il Duce immediately ordered the attacks to cease. Fletcher was informed by Y. M.C.A. workers here that the organization was exclusively administered by Italians, although the property was owned by Americans.

FAMOUS LINER TOWED TO PORT

Canadian Ship Taking U. S. Vessel "President Harding" To Halifax.

ALL ITS OIL LOST.

HALIFAX, N.S., Feb. 9.—(Canadian Press.)—The United States liner, President Harding, with 551 passengers, Bremen to New York, was being towed to Halifax early yesterday by the Canadian government steamer, Lady Laurier.

The Canadian ship found the President Harding helpless last night, 50 miles from Halifax. The liner had lost all of its oil because of leaking tanks, and its firemen had been forced to burn the hatches and all available woodwork to keep up steam.

The Laurier passed its hawser to the President Harding. The weather was calm, and the tow was expected to reach Halifax to-day.

CONCISENESS OF PROGRAMME, ETC.

reborn from the position created when the government two years ago took ten seats from the rural districts and added them to the urb an representation.

Criticizes Plan

Mr. Sinclair strongly criticized the projected plan of the minister of education to inaugurate a two year university course in the high schools of the province and warned the government against the step as it would be a great burden of expense to the people which would not be justified in the results obtained. To teach six courses in the high schools, he said, would require the appointment of a professor with a salary of at least $4,000 a year, for each subject, and, with incidentals, the total cost would be about $30,000 annually. This sum he considered rather high when it was realized that in some communities there would not be more than thirty pupils attending the courses.

Touching on the proposed liquor legislation the Liberal leader said he had heard a rumor following a Conservative caucus yesterday that there was a wide divergence of opinion among the government supporters. It was obvious, he added, that the government supporters did not know what the proposed bill would contain and therefore they would not be able to deal intelligently with the legislation in the short time at their disposal. He felt that the bill should have been printed and distributed so that the people would know what to expect.

"That's not done by good governments," said Col. John A. Currie, (Conseravtive, St. Patrick's).

"Do you know what's in the bill?" asked Mr. Sinclair of Mr. Currie.

"I certainly do not," replied Col. Currie, "but I know what I'd like to see in it."

"You surely know," persisted Mr. Sinclair.

"Oh, you're fishing in the wrong pond," commented Premier Ferguson.

The Liberal leader continued by reviewing the government's precedure on its policy as placed before the people during the election campaign and chided the premier for his "vacillating" attitude on the liquor question. He also thought it was "high time" that the name of the Premier's strong man for administration of the new liquor law of the province was made known to the people. To his mind there must be some reasons for the government's meagre legislative programme. Perhaps, he said, the premier had aspirations of becoming leader of the opposition in the federal house and because of that was desirous of handling the full programme before moving to the capital. Yet he had said he was going to hold the premiership for many years to come.

BIG DRUG RING IS UNCOVERED

United States Charge Ten With Narcotic Trade.

MAIL ORDER TRADE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.— (United Press.)—Police and federal agents yesterday claimed to have uncovered one of the largest narcotic distributing gangs in the country with the arrest here of eight men and two women.

Two men were arrested in Washington in the same round-up.

Ralph Oyler, head of the federal narcotic squad in New York, said the gang used this city only as headquarters, distributing their goods in many parts of the country, but selling little here.

They operated under the trade name of Dellas & Rose, distributors of the Water of Life, Oyler said, and distributed by mail, express or messenger, doing a large mail order business.

Oyler said morphine was the main drug sold west of Kansas City, while heroin was more popular in the east and south.

All those arrested were scheduled for arraignment before a United States commissioner.

NEW CONTROL BILL

Officially nothing has been given out at the Legislature with respect to the new Act, and nothing will probably emanate officially until the Premier makes his announcement in the House. But it is known that great care has been taken in drafting the bill, and that among other things careful consideration was given the subject of permitting the sale of beer and wine in clubs and hotels, but at the present time, it is said, no such provisions exist in the Act, tentative ones drawn up having been struck out.

While no definite statement as to when the Premier will make his announcement has been made, it is understood that the printing of the bill will occupy more than a week after it is in final form, and so it is possible that it will not be brought down for about two weeks.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THE LESSER LINCOLN

A million men have spoken praise,
A thousand written rimes,
For so a monument we raise
To those of other times.
But, Lincoln, in the midst of men,
I think you longed for someone then
To speak approval, when mankind
Only some failing seemed to find.

And lesser Lincolns even now
May seek the common good,
With hearts like yours, and yet, somehow,
As much misunderstood.
Some lesser Lincoln now may stand,
A rock amid the shifting sand,
That other ages may commend,
But now that no one dare defend.

We lay on Lincoln's tomb to-day
The laurel wreath of fame,
And yet I know a better way
To honor Lincoln's name—
To seek some lesser Lincoln out
That some men curse and all men doubt,
Wait not or laurel wreath and stone,
But praise some Lincoln of our own.

VALENTINE STORY

By N. L. S., Cavan.

The fire in the grate burned merrily, casting odd shadows around the luxurious library, and brightening and shading the face of a white-haired lady who sat gazing into the flames with thoughtful eyes. It was a beautiful face, that of a woman who had not known many hardships, in the sense of lacking the real necessities of life. Her face, which was smooth and unwrinkled, was surrounded by hair that was as soft and well-cared for as the best hair-dressers in the city could make it.

Awakening from her reverie, Mrs. Hamilton uttered a deep sigh. Looking around she noticed how dark the room had become. She touched a bell, and in a few moments the door opened and a little table was wheeled in by a tidy servant, who turned on a few heavily-shaded lights before uncovering the dainty tea. When she went out the room was again quiet, save for the crackle of the fire and the occasional tinkle of the dishes.

The quietness and loneliness of the room was only emphasized by the fury of the weather without. It was a stormy February evening, and the snow was piling higher and higher against the sills of the little red bungalow.

In the meantime Mary, the servant, had returned to the kitchen.

"Mrs. Hamilton is looking very lonesome tonight, Florry. It makes my heart ache for her, it does, what with this being the night three years ago—and just such a night—that little Jackie died."

"Aye," answered Florry, with the pity of one who had loved and served Mrs. Hamilton for years, "aye, but it's a shame, and Mr. Hamilton being away too. I wonder if he will be able to get home at all tonight? You would think no trains could get through in such weather such as this."

"No, indeed, I don't think they could get through tonight, if it continues to storm as hard as it is now. It seems as though with all her money, Mrs. Hamilton cannot keep her dear ones with her," said Mary thoughtfully. "Just remember when her only son, Jimmie, and his wife were carried off in that first terrible epidemic of 'flu.' With all the specialists that could be hired, they couldn't be saved. Then the very next winter, little Jackie, the grandson that was left her to take care of, was snatched away in an acute attack of membranous croup."

"Aye," said Florry, "Dame Fortune has been lavish to her in her gifts of worldly possessions, but has deprived her of that which is dearer to her than life itself, and because she has lost her dear ones she cannot enjoy the beauty and luxury which surrounds her. But Jackie was a bonnie wee laddie, and her heart was wrapped up in him."

About fifty miles from his home, Mr. Hamilton, a buyer for a large departmental store in the city, was travelling home in an express train, from a long, tiresome business trip. They were in a mountainous part of the country that always drifted badly, and sometimes even mail-trains could not get through. Just now the conductor was deeply worried, not knowing whether they could get to the next station without waiting for help to come from there to clear the track of some of the snow that so impeded progress.

There was another reason for haste in the mind of the conductor. In a seat at one end of the car sat a very thin little woman, and her little son, who seemed about three years old. The woman had, from all appearances, recently been through great trouble and sickness. Her face was deathly pale and her eyes had that hunted look that a sudden blow gives. She seldom answered the little boy who talked incessantly, and tried to keep his mother covered with her ragged coat.

The invalid seemed to droop more and more as the day wore on and by evening, she half-lay in the seat, with her head resting on a pitifully small and tattered travelling bag. The kind-hearted conductor had brought a cup of warm tea from his own pantry in the van, to her but, as he confided to Mr. Hamilton, he did not think the poor woman would live until they reached the station.

It was indeed so. The train came to a very deeply drifted stretch and was compelled to stop. The little boy looked around and was frightened at this unexpected stop. He turned around and tried to wake his mother, but he called her in vain. While she slept her spirit had slipped away.

With tears trickling down his tired, wistful, little face he continued his efforts to wake mama. His plaintive cry focussed the attention of all the passengers on him. Mr. Hamilton, thinking of the conductor's fears which had been voiced to him, quickly took in the situation. He quietly went out and brought in the conductor. They took the little boy and placed him in Mr. Hamilton's seat to look at some bright pictures in a magazine. Then, they returned and wrapped the mother up in a blanket. The conductor found the suitcase was all the luggage the woman had. From letters in it he found where she lived and where she was going. She came from Alberta and was going to a little town in Ontario, where lived her only relative in Canada, an elderly maiden cousin. Her husband had just died after a very long sickness and she wanted to get to Ontario to be able to leave the little boy with someone who would not be an entire stranger.

When he had returned from helping the conductor carry the body to the baggage car, Mr. Hamilton found the little boy playing with the magazine contentedly. He had a great pity for the little orphan, and an idea came to him. He began to talk to him. When questioned the little tot said his name was Billy. He could not talk plainly, and his little plaintive, lisping voice when he asked for "mama?" went right to Mr. Hamilton's heart.

It was not long until an extra heavy snow-plow arrived and about an hour and a half after their stop they were again making their way towards their destination. In the next village was an undertaking parlour, where the conductor sent the body of Billy's mother, to be forwarded on the midnight express to her cousin's home.

Mr. Hamilton wired the cousin that he was taking Billy home with him, and that he would be well cared for, for about a week, when Mr. Hamilton would come and talk business with Miss Rose, which was the cousin's name.

Mr. Hamilton had determined to take Billy home for a Valentine present for his wife. They would keep him to visit for a week, at least, and then—who knows?—they might become so attached to him that they would want to keep him longer.

When he looked at the dark curly head, Mr. Hamilton thought that he would bring a great deal of cheer and happiness to their lonesome little home. What good company he would be for Mrs. Hamilton, when he was away on these numberless business trips!

It was nearly midnight when the train drew into the deserted station that night. The wind had gone down, but it was quite cold. Mrs. Hamilton had sent the chauffeur to meet all the trains that evening, however, and the travellers were soon tucked in a warm car which quickly carried them through the quiet city streets to the modern little bungalow in the suburbs.

There was a light burning in the hall, and when Mr. Hamilton carried Billy, now fast asleep, into the warm library, Mrs. Hamilton rose from her seat before the fire, with a frightened exclamation—

"What ever have you got there, Jack?" she asked.

"Don't be afraid," he said, "it is a poor, little, unfortunate passenger whom I brought home with me. Just look at him. Poor little fellow! Just imagine, Grace, he is an orphan. His mother died on the train tonight. Poor woman, I think it was from grief over the recent death of her husband, and she looked anything but strong. I brought Billy here, home for a little visit anyway. To-morrow is the fourteenth of February, and he will be a little Valentine for you, Grace. I thought he might take the place a little bit of Jackie. If he visits us for a week, we will get acquainted with him, anyway."

"Yes, indeed," answered his wife, in a voice full of pity. Here, give him to me. Ring the bell, Jack. Mary and Florry would keep a nice supper warm for you, although I said I would make you a cup of tea myself, and they could go to bed. Florry will get your supper and Mary will get things for Billy."

All this time she was taking Billy's wraps off. She sent Mary to the little closed-up nursery to get some things that were Jackie's and would just fit this little chap.

Mary and Florry were soon trying to see who could do the most in getting comforts for Billy. They brought out warm clothes and blankets and aired sheets for the little cot and set it up in Mrs. Hamilton's room. Soon Billy was tucked in it, with Florry eagerly offering to sit beside him for a while for fear he would wake up and be afraid. As she sat beside him her heart filled with a great joy as she thought of the new interest being brought into the heart of her beloved mistress.

The next day the nursery was opened up in earnest and the mistress and two servants worked together all day long in the interest of making a room for Billy to have as his own little kingdom.

It was a couple of days later when Mrs. Hamilton was surprised by a caller. She was busy unpacking a box of Jackie's toys when the card was brought up to her: 'Mary V. Rose.' She could not imagine who it was but tucked back her hair which had become slightly mussed in her excitement of getting these things out for Billy—who was becoming dearer to the entire household every day—and descended the stairs. At the foot of the stairs she stopped. Something seemed to clutch at her heart. Mary V. Rose was Billy's maiden cousin. She had come for Billy! What would she do? She went on slowly and entered the little parlour with lagging steps.

A tall, angular woman rose from where she had been sitting on the most uncomfortable straight-backed chair in the room, and came forward. She spoke first, holding out her hand to Mrs. Hamilton—

"Mrs. Hamilton? I am Mary Rose, Billy's cousin, as I suppose you have already guessed. I am sure I must thank you a great deal for taking so much trouble with Billy, and keeping him so long. I have come to take him back with me. I am sure he has caused you a lot of bother. Children always do; they are so naughty, and always so dirty."

"Oh, but Billy has been such a good little boy, and no bother at all—"

"Oh yes, I know, it is your kind heart speaking, madame, but I know children. I have lain awake a great many nights, thinking of how my nice, respectable home was going to be kept in continual turmoil by a boy. If it had of been a girl now, it would have been different—but a boy! Well, I will take him; I told his mother, and said I would do my duty by my kith and kin, but—a boy! I only hope all the servants—servants, mind you that I have had around me all my life—as I was saying, madame, I hope the servants don't resign."

As Mrs. Hamilton heard these words the cold fear left her heart. Billy's cousin didn't want him! Amazed as she was at this unexpected turn, she relaxed into a smile and remembering suddenly her duties of hospitality, she pressed Miss Rose to a seat and rang for a cup of tea.

Happily, she told Miss Rose of how she loved the child and it was the dearest wish of everyone in the house to keep him. She told her how she had lost her own little grandson, and Billy was beginning to fill the big, lonesome place in her heart.

Miss Rose, in her turn, listened to this in amazement. It seemed an incredulous fact to her, that any people when they had come to the age of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton would voluntarily take a child, especially a stranger, into their home.

An hour afterward Miss Rose departed, highly delighted with the way things had happened. It was decided that Billy would stay with Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton.

Mrs. Hamilton, also, returned to the nursery with a lighter heart than she had left it. She caught up Billy and hugged him, and told him he was to live with her always.

That evening, when Mr. Hamilton returned from business there was another general rejoicing; Billy was the hero of the day, and Mrs. Hamilton was heard to say as she sat sorting things out of an old-fashioned chest that evening that Billy was the very nicest "Valentine" she had ever received.

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story.

By Howard R. Garis

BOARD

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"What can we do to have some fun, Daddicums?" asked two of Uncle Wiggily's little rabbit boys one day.

"What sort of fun do you want?" inquired the bunny gentleman.

"A kind that will make us cool, answered Buster.

"And where we can splash in the water," added Custer.

Buster was called that because he broke so many promises about being a good rabbit, and Custer was given his name because he was so fond of clover pie with custard fillings.

"If you want to keep cool and splash in the water," said Uncle Wiggily, "come with me to the old swimming hole," and he led the little bunny boys over the fields and through the woods until soon they heard a gurgling, splashing sound.

"What's that?" whispered Buster, snuggling close up to his father.

"Maybe it's the Bob Cat coughing a sneeze," whispered Custer, as he snuggled up to Buster.

"Nonsense!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "That is the song of the brook as it splashes over stones on its way to the swimming hole. I'll show you," and, leading the little bunnies farther into the woods, Uncle Wiggily showed them a cool, shady place where, at the bottom of a steep bank, was a deep pool of water, silent and still.

"The old swimming hole!" exclaimed Mr. Longears. "But I must make a spring board from which I can jump".

"What's a spring board, Daddicums?" asked Custer.

"It's a long board, stretching with one end out over the water," said Uncle Wiggily. "The other end is fast on shore."

"And do you spring from the board into the water, like a teeter tauter?" asked Buster.

"That's what you do," said Uncle Wiggily. Soon he found a long board that had fallen from a farmer's fence. He thrust this board out over the deep, silent pool of water, and rolled a large stone on the shore end of the plank to hold it down.

"Now I'll try my spring board," said Uncle Wiggily. He hopped out to the end over the water, bounced up and down once or twice, the heavy stone holding the board in place, and then, into the water leaped the rabbit.

"Splash!" he went into the swimming hole, and Custer cried:

"Oh, Daddicums will be drowned!"

"No he won't!" shouted Buster who had seen some of the large animal boys leap in like this. And a moment later Uncle Wiggily's head bobbed up out of the water.

"Now you try my spring board, Buster and Custer!" Mr. Longears called to his little bunnies. Though at first they were afraid to dive in, they soon got over this, and after a while they were splashing around with their daddy as bold as popcorn balls.

But trouble was on the way. The Bob Cat, hearing the merry shouts in the woods, went slinking along until he looked through the bushes and saw Uncle Wiggily having fun with Buster and Custer on the spring board. The Bob Cat sniffed up his nose and snarled softly:

"I'll soon stop their fun! I'll nibble all their ears! Gurr-r-r!"

Uncle Wiggily was out on the end of the spring board with Buster and Custer, going to show them how to make a back flip-flop dive when, all at once, they saw the Bob Cat coming out on the board.

"Ah, ha!" purred the bad chap. "I have you now!" And, truly, it did seem so. Uncle Wiggily and the little bunnies couldn't go back to shore for the Bob Cat was in the way. And if they jumped into the water the Bob Cat might jump after them, and bite them.

"However, there is no help for it!" cried Uncle Wiggily. "Jump into the water with me, boys, and we'll see what happens!"

The three rabbits bounced off the spring board so hard that the rock, which was on the shore end, flew up into the air and when it came down that rock hit the Bob Cat on the head, making him see stars in the daytime.

"Dear me! I must have been bumped by a trolley car!" said the bad chap as he slumped away, and he took his silly little tail with him. He doesn't know, to this day, what hit him, unless he reads this story. But it all happened for the best, and when the spring board was put in place again, with the rock back on one end, the three bunnies splashed until sundown. And if the back door doesn't ring the front door bell to make the electric light think company is coming to tea, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's summer snow.

AERIAL PATROLS.

The Ontario Department of Forest and Mines, which has been relying upon aerial patrols to a considerable extent as a protection against forest fires, has found the results attained so satisfactory that the air force is to be strengthened and equipped with more modern machines.

The fire protection service is given credit for the fact that last year there were 105,000 fewer acres of forest devastated than in 1925, and on behalf of the air patrols it is claimed that they have proven their value not only in detecting fires but also in assisting in fighting them as well.

The aerial fire rangers have frequently been able to reach incipient fires and extinguish them before they reached a dangerous stage.

With the addition of speedier and low-flying machines, capable of carrying the necessary apparatus as well as an adequate crew, Ontario's forest fire patrol will be much better equipped to deal with outbreaks of fire, and as a result much valuable timber may be saved.

The success of the aerial method has been emphatically demonstrated and justifies the steps that are now to be taken by the Government.

THE WELL BABIES' CLINIC.

It should not be necessary at this late date to point out the successful results attained by the Well Babies' Clinic.

What has been accomplished by that organization is so thoroughly appreciated by those who have benefitted from its services or who have come into contact with its work that it is perhaps a waste of time to call the attention of citizens generally to what the Well Babies' Clinic is doing in the interest of Peterborough's babies.

The majority of people are doubtless satisfied that a civic grant to assist the clinic is money well invested.

The organization is really a foundation upon which a healthier citizenship is being built.

It provides a means by which mothers of young children can learn from expert authorities what is best to be done for the health of their little ones.

It ensures in the case of those who take advantage of its services the detection and curing of those defects in children that are perhaps not serious at an early age but develop into grave handicaps afterward.

It affords instruction in proper feeding, and along many other lines that are of great importance.

The Well Babies' Clinic is past the experimental stage; it has justified its existence, and the request for assistance from this city in the form of a grant should be favourably received.

CATERING TO THE TOURISTS.

Ald. J. M. Greene's suggestion of an information booth for tourists to be located on the Provincial highway at the entrance to the city has much to commend it.

Although the Chamber of Commerce has done excellent service in supplying visitors with information and furnishing them with literature, it is doubtless true that many motorists come into Peterborough who are not aware of the fact that such service is available to them.

A booth such as Ald. Greene proposes would be seen by the majority of tourists, and if in charge of an intelligent and courteous attendant would give visitors a most happy introduction to and a most desirable impression of the city.

Assistance of that kind is appreciated.

Tourists remember it when they go home, and they tell their friends about it.

They come back to places where they have been hospitably received, and they bring others with them, the cumulative effect of a policy of this kind being reflected in the large sums of money that are being put into circulation by the ever-increasing number of visitors.

The tourist industry is becoming one of the biggest things in Ontario's history.

Long-sighted municipalities will appreciate the value of catering to such an industry where a small sum invested in good-will, courtesy and hospitality will earn fabulous dividends.

DITCHES A MENACE.

The present design of Provincial and suburban highways may be the last word, the ne plus ultra, in road construction, but the large number of traffic mishaps last fall and this winter suggests that the deep ditches fringing the highways are actually dangerous.

A resolution from the village of Newcastle to the Northumberland and Durham Counties Council, proposing representations to the Ontario Highways Department that the ditches be made shallower, was tabled.

The Counties Council agreed that the department should know how to build roads and required no advice.

And yet the experience in the mud of last autumn and on the icy roads of this winter demonstrated the deep ditches to be automobile traps.

The three or four-foot ditch is a menace. Usually the shoulder is cut sharply from the surface of the highway. The drop at the edge of the road is almost sheer, and few cars that slide over it have a chance to swing back. A shallow, saucer ditch, instead of the present trench form, would certainly lessen the traffic hazard, although it would probably involve an increase in the cost of construction.

Of course, the weather of the last four months has been abnormal, especially in its effect on road conditions, but provisions for the safety of the public should not overlook the exception or extreme circumstances that are still with us.

Winter motor traffic is steadily increasing, and the speed limit moves in the same direction, twin perils that are accentuated by ditches of the present specifications.

In the after-thought of numerous reports and a jolting experience, the Newcastle proposal assumes more merit than it presented to the Northumberland and Durham Councillors. In fact, the prediction might be ventured that eventually the trench ditch will be discarded by road engineers because of its actual danger to automobile traffic.

TO MAKE OR BREAK.

A staff correspondent of The Border Cities Star telegraphed from Toronto yesterday that 33 words in the Speech from the Throne, delivered at the opening of Ontario's 17th Legislative Assembly, held the key to practically all the interest which will attach to the forthcoming session. These 33 words are as follows:

"Legislation will be introduced to recognize and give effect to the expressed desire of the people of the Province for improvement in the method of control and administration of the sale of liquor."

Premier Ferguson has once more sustained his well-known reputation for secretiveness. We are going to have a change in liquor legislation—in accordance "with the expressed desire of the people"—but we shall have to wait a while longer to get even the "high spots."

When Mr. Ferguson and his Government appealed to the electors last fall on a platform of Government control of the sale of liquor—and some other things, of course—they did so after many months of hesitation. Some persons used the words, "trembling on the brink." If they trembled, however, such palpitations were unnecessary, for the Ferguson entry in the Provincial sweepstakes romped home in a hurry, with the other contestants lagging far in the rear. Mr. Ferguson made an effective campaign and the people took him at his word that he proposed to remedy conditions—admittedly bad—by changing the laws and really rendering it easier to secure liquor.

Since December 1, when they returned him to power, the people have naturally been curious to see what Mr. Ferguson would make of his new opportunity. The Premier had promised them a "strong man" to act as head of the proposed Government Control Commission. There has been much speculation and probably a number of straws have been thrown out for the purpose of testing public reaction. So far, however, the name of the "strong man" has not been officially disclosed. Some unkind critics have even come to the conclusion that Mr. Ferguson has not found it so simple to secure the right man, or that, possibly, the man he had in mind has decided to give his attention to something else.

However, there is much more interest in the new liquor law itself than in the composition of the commission that is to administer it, admittedly important as these appointments will be. In this matter, also, there has been a variety of speculation, but Mr. Ferguson has kept his own counsel. On what he must announce to the public within a very short time, however, the Premier will probably stake his political future—that future even including possibility of transfer to the Federal field. If he "makes good" with his new liquor law, Mr. Ferguson is likely to remain in office for many years to come. Assuming, of course, that he wishes to remain. If he makes good, also, his chances for securing the Federal leadership of the Conservative party will be materially enhanced.

There is one thing in connection with revision of the existing liquor regulations that Mr. Ferguson can never afford to forget for a moment. That is, the people expect him to enforce the law. Thousands of persons who are "dry" in sentiment, voted for Ferguson candidates on December 1 on the Premier's assurance that his new proposals constituted a genuine temperance measure. They were impressed with his promises that, given a change in the law and the new authority sought, short work would be made of persons who attempted to flout it. In brief, Mr. Ferguson proposed to put the bootlegger out of business. He has a large assignment, a man's-sized job, but he can do it if he determines to, because public opinion—all "dry" public opinion and most of the "wet" public opinion—will be behind him. It is up to the Premier. The situation can make him or break him.—Border Cities Star.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Feb. 9 (Canadian Press). — Extreme dullness again marked the foreign trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday. The trade in cash grain in the domestic market was also slow, the demand being only for odd cars to meet immediate wants. The undertone was steady.

Prices for all grades of Spring and Winter wheat flour were well maintained under a quiet demand.

The trade in millfeed continued active and firm. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was inactive but steady.

The undertone to the egg market was firm with a moderate trade passing. The receipts were 1,927 cases.

There was little enquiry for potatoes, but values were unchanged. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were offered at $1.75 to $1.80 per bag of 90 pounds, and Quebec White stock at $1.30 to $1.35 per bag of 90 pounds in bulk, ex-track.

The demand for butter continued on the light side, but prices were unchanged. The receipts were 621 packages.

Prices for cheese were again shaded yesterday owing to the indifferent demand from all sources. The receipts were 191 boxes.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, 1927, McClure Syndicate.)

"SALESLADY"

Don't use the word "saleslady." Say "saleswoman" instead.

Of course, no slur is intended upon a woman whose occupation is selling goods. She may be just as much of a lady, in one sense of that word, as any other woman. But when she is engaged in her occupation she is, in proper English, a "saleswoman," not a "saleslady."

The man who follows the same occupation is never referred to as a "salesgentleman," however gentle-manly he may be in demeanor, action, speech and principles. When he is selling he is a "salesman."

"Don't refer to yourself as a 'saleslady,' says a recent writer. "No one talks about cavalry gentleman, or artillery gentleman, or midship gentleman, and if your friend, who has enlisted did so refer to himself you wouldn't think any more of his social position than of the man who was simply a cavalryman or artilleryman or midshipman.

"The fact is that the expression 'saleslady' to a great many persons sounds extremely cheap, and the sooner you cut it from your vocabulary the better."

A Thought For To-day

THE DETERMINING FACTOR

The successful man is he who is well-behaved, always considerate, cheerful, helpful, and—kindly.

The failure is a man that makes a lot of money and lacks these outstanding characteristics.

Past the line of assured comfort, surplus cash is only an added responsibility, a trap to get a man into more trouble.

Success is not unnecessary or surplus cash—it is something that you enjoy, not employ.

Most men are wild to get more money, and when they get more cash than is good for them they go wilder.

It is not the condition of your finances, after you have accumulated all that is necessary for comfort, but the contact with friends that is the determining factor in whether you are a failure or a success.

DIETING FOR BONE TROUBLE

It is easy to understand the place that diet has in the cure of any bone disease. The blood out of which bones must be built holds its life and gets its nourishment entirely from the food we eat. If our foods are deficient in bone building material, there is no way in which the blood can secure these materials from any other source, and bone starvation is the consequence. There will be a gradual breaking down of the bone structure, and such a disease as tuberculosis can readily start in these impoverished bones.

Tuberculosis of the bone is characterized by a wasting away of the muscles above and below the seat of the disease. The joints of the hip, knee, ankle, elbow, and wrist are the ones most commonly affected.

Any inflammation of the bone is characterized by excruciating pain. This is due to the fact that bone structure differs from other tissues of the body, inasmuch as it is so hard and cannot swell when inflammation takes place, the same as other tissues of the body. There are tiny nerve canals running through all parts of the bony structure of the body, and when inflammation exists these nerves are quickly pressed upon by the irritating material. The consequence is extreme pain which is often reflected to other parts of the body. When only the covering of the bone is affected it is called periosteitis. When the bone itself is inflamed, this disease is known as osteitis, while the name for the inflammation of the medullary cavity is myelitis. The cause of all of these troubles is the same, namely, an impoverished blood stream containing impurities, and not sufficiently rich in bone building material. If these causes are recognized, the cure is obviously through a better diet regime.

Misplacement of the bone often gives rise to great discomfort. Many of the bones of the spinal column may get slightly out of position which will cause irritation, where the bones pinch too tightly. Osteopathic, or manipulative treatments will often restore these bones to their normal position, and thus assist in reducing the inflammation. However many times the bone is pushed out of position by an inflammation which comes from a toxic state of the blood, and in that case only a cleansing of the blood stream will bring about a satisfactory cure.

I recently observed a case of a woman who had been to all of the clinics in a large city; osteopathic treatments were taken for over four years, she was put in a plaster-cast, while other doctors tried ifferent kinds of braces. The last doctor she consulted advised her to have an operation on her spine. The pain and soreness seemed to be located entirely in the innominate bones of the right pelvis, which were out of their normal position. After all these physical methods had failed to restore the bones to its original position, the patient was entirely cured in two weeks by going on a strict orange-juice fast. In a few days after starting the fast the spine had lessened, and at the end of two weeks the bone had returned to its normal position, with all the soreness entirely gone.

This case is cited to emphasize the fact that even in bone diseases, where the trouble seems to be mechanical, the patient must not neglect to get the blood in a pure condition free from any irritating toxic material which may have accumulated around the bone.

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

JAPAN

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

The death of the Emperor of Japan called universal attention to that remarkable country.

No country in the world perhaps has made so rapid progress during the last generation as Japan.

Taking into consideration the age of the Japanese Empire, the visit of Commodore Perry to that country, compelling Japan to open intercourse with the other nations was very recent.

Previous to 1889 Japan was an absolute monarchy. It had been for centuries drilled into thinking monarchial ideas. Since 1889 it has had a constitution.

The Emperor is still held to be sacred and inviolable and exercises the whole of the executive powers, but he is supposed to use this power with the advice and consent of the Cabinet Ministers.

Japan has a House of Peers and a House of Representatives.

It is the home of the old-fashioned Shintoism and Buddhism, but yet religion is entirely free and Christians are at liberty to preach their gospel as much as they wish.

English is required in all of the schools.

Although the action of America in regard to land and immigration laws is held by many to be hostile, yet the Japanese are a remarkably self-restrained people. Only a small group of anti-American agitators exist in Tokio and Yokohama, but this group is discouraged by the government and opposed generally by the press.

The United States has been recognized as Japan's best customer, as it takes about 45 per cent of her exports and supplies about 30 per cent of her imports.

It is only in 1852 that Commodore Perry opened that country to commerce and since then the Japanese people have risen with remarkable rapidity to take their stand among civilized nations.

Of course their ideas and training are different from ours, but that is no sign that they are any worse. Japan has made great strides in educating her common people and in extending the franchise.

Only recently the news came that Baron Ryochi Kujo, who is a brother of the Empress, is working as a poorly paid clerk and takes orders from everybody but the office boy in the institution, where he gets only $50 a month, in order, he claims, "to find out how the common people make a living." The Baron likes his job. He is a faithful worker and is always on time. One of the saving graces of the Japanese people is that they are fond of work.

Work and aristocracy hardly go together, as all noble orders since the foundation of the world have been orders of noble loafers.

Work and democracy will be found to progress hand in hand.

Don't Tell the Wife

BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY

SYNOPSIS

Ranny Forbes, rich athlete, and his beautiful wife, Joan, are temperamental mismates. Joan wants a divorce to marry Abner Gratman. Ranny, as part of a secret plan to rewin her, agrees to the divorce. Joan's joy turns to jealous rage when she suspects Ranny's willingness is due to love for Clare, a winsome widow. Ranny goes to South Carolina.

CHAPTER XIX.

Ranny Forbes sat on the mezzanine lounge of the smart Savannah Moss Inn and watched the fashionable folks of Aiken's winter colony on their nightly promenade. Smoking reflectively, he wondered how long it would be until his deep-laid plot lured Joan to Aiken.

His speculations ended abruptly.

"Thanks, old dear, for saving a seat for me!" Joan, bewitchingly beautiful, sat on the love seat beside him. She took the visitation so delightfully matter-of-fact that Ranny found it difficult to be stern.

"Joan," he scolded impatiently, "you are making it most difficult for me to comply with your own stipulated wishes. You want a divorce; yet you block my endeavors to give it to you."

"Don't crab, Ranny. I am just loath to be cast aside for that blonde."

"Cast aside! Why, we're casting each other aside—so that you can marry the man of your heart, Abner Gratman."

"But it bothers me to think that the moment I suggested a divorce you raced off gleefully—with her!"

di"Wasn't it you who proposed this vorce? Aren't you in love with Abner?"

"Yes, but there's a big fly in my soup."

"How's that, Joan?"

"Well, you aren't sorry enough about leaving me."

"I am, too! Dine with me in my suite, and I'll prove it to you. We'll have a bully farewell banquet."

"Like a couple of jolly bachelors?"

"Righto! A divorce dinner. But say, how about Abner? Where is he? And what will he think of this consorting of husband and wife?"

"Oh, Abner! To tell the truth, he followed me down from Maine. I had a dinner engagement with him."

"Keep it, then," indifferently.

"No," hastily, "I'll have plenty of time to dine with him most of the rest of the days of my life."

"Supposing he gets angry. He'll give you a beastly raking over. You know—little roosters crow loudest."

"Hmmm!" with defiant dignity.

"By the way," Ranny asked suddenly, "how did you register? You know, Joan, no judge in the country will give us a decree if we go on—err—cohabiting, as the lawyers say."

"I took a suite for myself under an assumed name. Of course, the manager, knowing us both, expressed surprise over that."

"I reckon he's used to irrational things from us idle rich."

Presently the estranged husband and wife, strangely friendly, rose and threaded their way across the mezzanine, the cynosure of all eyes, for news travels fast in high society, and it was already gossiped from Beacon Street to Palm Beach that the Forbeses had agreed to disagree.

Later, when they were ensconced in the private parlor of Ranny's luxurious suite, idling while a golden-toothed darkey waiter spread a table, Joan prodded;

"Now tell me the truth about Clare. Are you going to marry her?"

But Ranny just smiled vacantly, and, growing sentimental, leaned over and stroked Joan's hand. He thrilled at the touch of her fine, soft skin as he had on the first instant of their honeymoon.

"Just like old times, Joan, eh?"

Before Joan had a chance to reply the darkey advanced with a calling card. Ranny, looking at it, whispered excitedly:

"Abner! I'll bet he's missed you and expects me to tell him where you are."

"Oh, why can't he let us have our divorce dinner in peace?"

"I'll never be able to get rid of him if he knows you're here, and three would be a crowd at our divorce dinner. Hide behind that screen, eh, what?"

When Joan was safely out of sight, the darkey ushered in Abner, who, flushed and unsteady, was evidently in his cups, for he greeted thickly:

"Hello, Forbes. Going to dine tete-a-tete, eh? With Clare, I suppose, you sly dog."

"What do you want, Gratman?" asked Ranny evenly.

"Say, old chap, where the devil is Joan. She left some silly excuse with her maid about visiting a sick friend in Augusta. Gosh, that's miles away, and the weather's beastly!"

"You wouldn't let a little thing like bad weather chill your love?"

"No-o-o—but the story smells like humbug to me. Say, did she ever give you that sick friend story?"

"Do you mistrust her?"

"Not exactly—but she's pretty artful. I've found that out. I've seen her twist you around her little finger."

"What will she do to YOU?"

"Oh, those tricks won't go with me! Not by a darn sight! I'll manage her and her million a year in the way they should be managed."

"IS THAT SO?"

Both men turned—Abner startled; Ranny amused. Joan, her eyes twin bonfires, had stepped from behind the screen, unable to restrain her temper any longer. Ranny, listening to the storm that followed, enjoyed it hugely.

Abner listened in fear and trembling, his every effort to apologize and explain forced back into his throat by the torrent of her indignant oratory.

"Insect!" Joan wound up, "get out of my sight, and never offend it again. I may not stay married to Ranny but I'll never marry you—you despicable little fortune hunter!"

Abner managed to put in; "Oh, I say, Joan dearest, I was only fooling, you know—just a bit of good natured spoofing. I knew all the time you were there."

He tried to take hold of Joan's hands—caressingly.

Ranny calmly interposed his two hundred pounds of hard polo bulk.

"Any objection, Joan, if I throw your boy friend downstairs?"

"None whatever!"

Ranny took savage hold of Abner. The pent-up rage of bitter months flowed free in his veins tonight.

"Gratman," he said, "I once vowed that when this moment came I'd give you the worst thrashing any man ever got, but you aren't worth a gentlemanly licking!"

He picked Abner up bodily, carried him into the hall, and actually threw him down the broad staircase into the crowded mezzanine, then cooly walked back—and sat down with Joan to begin their strange celebration.

"Now, about this divorce—"

A banging at the door cut Ranny short. It was the house detective; Abner, white with rage, was at his elbow—discreetly behind it.

"That's them!" Abner cried petulantly: "As a respectable guest of this hotel I protest against men entertaining unchaperoned women in their rooms!"

Ranny and Joan did not know whether to be amused or aghast at the petty absurdity of the man. But the detective, with fifty dollars of Abner's money in his pocket, was aggressive:

"What are you trying—" he began.

Ranny hotly strode upon him. "Be careful, Mister! This lady is my wife!"

Abner clucked like a mad hen: "If she's his wife why has she registered under another name?"

At this juncture the manager arrived, out of breath: "What's the meaning of this, Hawk?"

The detective explained.

"Clear out of here, you fool! This is Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Forbes!"

Abner and the detective made themselves scarce without ado.

Joan smiled at the apologetic manager: "Have my baggage sent in. You see, we've changed our minds about getting a divorce here!"

She smiled archly at the overjoyed Ranny.

"Divorce!" cried the manager. "Here? Why South Carolina is the only State where no divorces are granted!"

He withdrew, chuckling.

Ranny and Joan stared at one another awkwardly: "I knew it all the time!" both boasted—simultaneously.

"You did not!" both contradicted—simultaneously.

The Forbeses were at it again!

Only this time the argument was punctuated by kisses!

Being greatly changed—New way discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

OLD-TIME "sanitary pads" are rapidly disappearing, because of a new way called KOTEX, that 8 in 10 better class women now employ.

Kotex discards as easily as tissue. Thus no laundry, no embarrassment of disposal.

Being 5 times as absorbent as ordinary cotton "pads," it permits lightest gowns and frocks without slightest fear. Dance, motor, go about for hours without a moment's doubt. And it deodorizes; thus ending all fear of offense.

Obtain at any store without embarrassment simply by saying "KOTEX." Try today and you'll never again risk the uncertainty of old ways.

Box of 12 costs only a few cents. Be sure you get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

THRILLS PACKED IN COLLEEN'S LATEST

Piquant Little First National Star Has Colorful Story in "Twinkletoes."

A story with a hunchy plot and a picturesque background, touched with pathos and comedy, supplies Colleen Moore with her latest First National vehicle, "Twinkletoes," which is to head the entertainment bill of the Capitol Theatre tomorrow.

Kenneth Harlan, Gladys Brockwell, Warner Oland, Tully Marshall, Julanne Johnston, Lucian Littlefield and John Philip Kolb support the charming little star in "Twinkletoes," in which Colleen, because the story calls for a blonde heroine, appears in golden curls!

She's more appealing than ever in the role and the blonde hair. The story is one of Thomas Burke's best, with a background of the famous London Limehouse district lending a wonderful variety of colorful characters and settings of quaint, picturesque charm.

The fast developing plot plunges Colleen into all sorts of dangers and thrills in rapid succession.

She is a dancer in a Limehouse theatre, the manager of which is a thorough villain. She's in love with a Limehouse pugilist and incurs the jealously of a dangerous woman, and her father is at outs with the law.

But wholesome comedy and a happy ending make "Twinkletoes" a screen play that should appeal to picture-goers of all ages; it's real entertainment from the first glimpse of the Limehouse street to the last sight of Colleen in her golden curls. Charles Brabin directed. John McCormick managed the production for First National.

AT THE REGENT

MIRTH, THRILLS, ADVENTURE IN "WINGS OF THE STORM."

New Fox Films Production Directed by J. G. Blystone Features Thunder, Dog Sensation of the Screen—"Big Bill' Russell in Important Role."

Motion picture fans who like their entertainment liberally spiced with hilarity and mirth, with thrills and adventure, will find Fox Films version of "Wings of the Storm," very much to their liking, according to advance reports.

The production which features Thunder, the marvellous new police dog star will be screened at the Regent Theatre, beginning to-morrow. According to Manager Davern, who recently previewed the picture, J. G. Blystone, the director, has woven a colorful tapestry with scenes as vivid and intriguing as anything seen here in months.

Exteriors were filmed in the picturesque region of the Pacific North west centreing about Mount Rainier, declared to be one of the finest peaks in the world, from the standpoint of physical beauty alone. Interiors were filmed at Fox Hills Studio, near Hollywood, the new "location studio" operated in connection with William Fox West Coast Studios in Hollywood.

Virginia Brown Faire, who won immortal fame as the fairy, Tinker Bell in the picturized version of "Peter Pan," appears in the leading feminine role, that of Anita Baker, millionaire sportswoman, young and beautiful. Reed Howes impersonates the young forest ranger who befriends Thunder and William Russell does some heavy villaining.

These three popular players are the central figures in the human drama that runs parallel with the dog's activities.

HOW NOT TO SKID

By Israel Klein, Science Editor, NEA Service.

When an automobile skids the driver might almost as well throw up his hands.

An outside force is at work which is more or less uncontrolable for the moment. The brakes more often are a hindrance rather than an aid, although they may be used sparingly to an advantage sometimes.

The most practical course is to "kid the skidding along"—direct the front wheels in the direction of the skid and let her go, taking the foot off the accelerator, but leaving the car in gear.

If the back of the car suddenly swerves to the left, turn the front wheels to the left and try to head the back off. The same action is applicable to the right.

* * *

Prevention of any skid is most advisable. And skids, no matter what the conditions, can be prevented.

Take snow conditions, and the worst of them in traffic, when deep ruts of snow and ice have formed. It's hard getting out of these, without sliding all over the street. But it can be done.

The way to do it is to slow down almost to a dead stop, get into low, engage the clutch and pull out gently rather than with a jerk.

If the front wheels can't climb the rut and, instead, let the car slide along, there's better chance of getting out by reversing and turning the front wheels just enough to guide the back out. The rear wheels, held firmly in one direction, can't be jigged back and forth by the ruts.

* * *

The dangerous skid is the one happening while the car is going down hill. That's dangerous because it's most likely to happen.

Then, usually, the thoughtless driver coasts down hill, gathers momentum and applies his brakes with force. It's exactly opposite to what should be done when the hill is wet and slippery.

The hill should be taken in low gear to keep the car under steady control. The brakes should be applied evenly and steadily. They should be snubbed, or applied and released intermittenly, so as not to burn out the brake lining, or give the wheels any cause to turn off their course.

* * *

An accident that happens on many a hill is a skid that throws the rear right wheel of the car into the curb. That means a broken wheel and possibly a broken rear axle.

To avoid this, either hug the curb closely, so that in case of a skid the rear won't travel far enough to strike the curb with the force required for such a break.

Or keep at a safe distance from the curb and drive down hill carefully.

* * *

Don't put too much reliance on chains. Chains are good to pull you out of mud and snow ruts.

But slippery streets are just as dangerous for chained, as for unchained tires. In fact, while the chain links might grip well in some cases, in others they might work as ice skates, helping to slide the car into destruction.

He must win that confidence by integrity and sound business practice.

And, by the same token, the bank must win the confidence of its customers.

Lemonade Bed-time Drink Of Germany's President

BERLIN, Feb. 9 (Associated Press). — Every night before President von Hindenburg retires, he drinks a glass of lemonade.

For this purpose he uses a large tumbler of cut glass presented him by the author and novelist, Richard Skowronnek. A servant squeezes the juice of one lemon into it, after which the President takes personal charge. He adds the sugar and then begins to stir, often observing, "Stirring is the main thing."

During the war, at general army headquarters, the field marshal's preparation of his bedtime drink was always regarded as a sort of religious ceremony by those surrounding

CLUB BAG GIVEN MILLBROOK GIRL

Miss Helen Larmer Is Going To Enter Training as Nurse.

MILLBROOK NEWS.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 9.—A number of the school mates, and other friends, of Miss Helen Larmer gathered at her home on Thursday evening to spend a social time together before her departure for Hamilton where she will take up a course of training for a professional nurse.

Midway in the evening's enjoyment, Miss Helen was asked to take a seat in the midst of the group and, on behalf of those present, was presented with a handsome, solid leather club-bag with her initials in gold letters. Dickson Hutchison offered the gift, and Miss Florence Larmer read the following address:

To Miss Helen Larmer,
Millbrook

Dear schoolmate, and friend:

It is with great pleasure that we come together tonight to congratluate you on your new position in life.

For a few years we have had many happy times together especially at the old Millbrook Continuation chool. Those years we shall never forget. When things went wrong, there was always your cheery smile, and somehow we felt better right away.

And not only here will your bright spirit work spells, for no patient could long be depressed with one like you to help, cheer, or comfort, and we know you will giv your best.

Changes will come during the years, but we hope you will always remember with pleasure your old acquaintances in Millbrook. And may God prosper you, and make you contented with your lot.

Will you accept this gift as a small token of affection and the high esteem of your friends.

Signed on behalf of your schoolmates and firends—Dickson Hutchison, Florence Fallis, Florence Larmer.

The gift came as a genuine surprise to the recipient, and in her reply she expressed her gratitude and appreciation in a few brief, but well chosen words

Music, cards, and dancing, with the service of dainty refreshments filled out the evening very pleasantly before final good nights were spoken, the guests reiterating sincere wishes for a large measure of success to attend their young hostess in her new sphere of labor.

Miss Helen left on Monday afternoon for Hamilton to begin her course of training in her chosen profession.

Messrs. R. I. Fallis and James H. Paul were in Toronto recently as delegates from the local Agricultural Society to the annual convention of the Ontario Fairs and Exhibitions Association

Mr. L. H. Winslow was in Toronto last week attending the annual convention of the Ontario Ploughmen's Association. Mr. Winslow has been on the board of directors for the past four years, and this year was elected as second vice-president of the association. The convention was one of the best in the history of the organization. The international ploughing match goes to York county next fall, near Richmond Hill. This is the county where the international event practically originated.

Messrs. David Fowler and Maurice Gray are in Toronto at present taking a six weeks' course in military training at Stanley Barracks. Mr. Fowler is taking a lieutenant's course, and Mr. Gray that of a non-commissioned officer. Miss Kathleen Fowler is taking her brother's place at Fowler and Pendrie's store during his absence.

Mrs. W. W. Gillott, who has been visiting her son Mr. Wilford Gillott at Oshawa for the past two weeks, has returned here and is again with her sister-in-law, Miss Eva F. Gillott, who is in very poor healh. Miss Trembeth, of Port Britain, was with Miss Gillott during Mrs. Gillott's absence.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Wentworth Gray will be glad to learn that both are recovering from their recent severe attack of illness.

Mr. Weston Fallis has been confined to the house for the past week on account of illness.

Miss Nellie Finnimore's many friends will regret to learn that she is indisposed from a severe attack of rheumatism.

How to— Avoid Colds

When a child is "always catching cold," or "always catching" anything, it's a sign that the body's powers of resistance have been broken down. It is pitiful to see children who should be well and happy, playing and romping, "laid up" with colds and similar complaints.

Give them Virol. It builds up and strengthens the body. It enriches the blood, giving it resisting power to combat successfully the attacks of disease germs.

Build up your children by giving them Virol. They'll like it—and they will thrive on it.

OBITUARY.

JOHN PIRIE.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 9. — Citizens of Campbellford were shocked to hear of the sudden death of the late John Pirie on Tuesday morning. JOINT MEETING HELD AT CAVAN

W.M.S. and L. A. of United Church Met on Thursday.

ROUTINE BUSINESS.

CAVAN, Feb. 9.—On Thursday afternoon a joint meeting of the Women's Missionary Society and Ladies' Aid of Cavan United Church was held at the home of Mrs. Archie Kennedy.

There were twenty ladies present. In the absence of the President, the Vice-President, Mrs. R. Matchett, presided.

The usual devotional and business routine of the Ladies' Aid was held first.

It was decided to try a plan suggested for social meetings, and also to raise funds, to take the form of pot-luck teas or dinners.

Mrs. Matchett offered to be hostess for the first one. The names of all the lady members of the church were placed in a hat, out of which she drew twelve names. These twelve ladies were invited to go to the home of Mrs. Matchett on a date to be set by her, each taking her plate, cup, spoon, knife and fork; also one contribution to the menu of the tea or dinner, sufficient for twelve persons. The hostess in her invitation has the privilege of naming the day and saying whether for dinner or tea. These twelve ladies are not supposed to tell each other what they purpose bringing, so that the meal will be typical of the name, pot-luck. Each will pay for her meal, just in the same way, no fee being set. The names of the ladies drawn for the first one were: Mrs. D. J. Hunter, Mrs. Albert Elliott, Mrs. Albert Tinney, Mrs. Melville Carr, Mrs. Milton Carr, Mrs. David White, Mrs. Lloyd Sutton, Mrs. W. Pudsy, Mrs. I. Woods, Mrs. N. True, Mrs. J. Douglas and Miss Annie Tinney.

The missionary part of the programme opened by singing a few verses of "Take Time to be Holy."

It was decided to have a lady missionary to speak in Cavan church on the first Sunday in March at the evening service. The same lady will speak in Millbrook church on that morning.

Mrs. Snyder read a very interesting article describing the routine of one day in the life of an African woman. It showed what a menial position the African woman occupies in her home and the life of drudgery which she leads.

Mrs. Albert Tinney read a paper on India. Mrs. Totten and Mrs. F. Staples each read an article on Africa.

The roll call of the W.M.S. was responded to by missionary items of interest, clipped from any paper.

After the pastor, the Rev. J. O. Totten, had dismissed the meeting, the Lunch Committee assisted the hostess to serve lunch.

Mrs. Matchett invited the society to meet at her home in March.

Hold Concert.

On Friday an "olde tyme party" was held in Cavan Community Hall under the auspices of the Cavan Women's Institute. There was a good attendance, and every person seemed to enjoy the social time.

Many of the ladies and girls wore old-time costumes. Long skirts, frills and high collars were much in evidence, bonnets and hats which were fashionable in days gone by.

Before the evening was over it was very evident that the ladies would not care to return to the fashions of the past, much preferring the short skirts, comfortable collars and waists, and snug-fitting hats requiring no hat-pins.

The first item on the programme was some old popular airs, sung by the Institute in costume. Mr. Richard Matchett sang a song in costume, "I'm Not Dead Yet." Miss Eileen Hunter sang a couple of solos, which were much enjoyed. Miss Hunter and her brother, Vernon, sang duets also, Miss M. Fisher, Millbrook, presiding at the piano. Mrs. F. M. Staples gave a recitation on pioneer days, "Whistling in Heaven." Miss Hazel McMahon gave two well-rendered recitations. Miss A. McMahon played piano solos. Miss Muriel Matchett and her father sang a humorous duett, which occasioned much merriment. Messrs. F. Staples, R. Sutton, V. Hunter and Mrs. Kennedy sang quartettes.

Mrs. R. Howden occupied the chair in a very efficient manner. Mrs. Syer, Mrs. Howden, Mrs. Paul and Mrs. Milligan were the Reception Committee, all wearing old-time costumes.

After the programme, while supper was being prepared in the basement, some old-time games were played, while others danced. Two old-time violinists supplied part of the music, Messrs. Bradburn and Smith, Messrs. Russell and Bristow relieving at times.

A good supper was served. Then dancing was resumed until one o'clock, when the singing of "God Save the King" brought the evening's programme to a close.

A pleasing feature of the evening was the fact that whole families were included in the invitations, and the children had just as an enjoyable time as their elders.

CAMPBELLFORD COUNCIL SHOWS SURPLUS OF $1,251.99 LAST YEAR

Total Receipts $193,564.48 and Expenditures Were $192,312.49.

SEYMOUR'S SESSION.

(Special Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 9. — A surplus of $1,251.99 is shown in the Town Council's financial statement for 1926. As it came from the auditors, C. A. Wilson and C. W. Maguire, it sets out the details of income and outlay with total receipts of $193,564.48 and expenditures $192,312.49.

An interesting item in the receipts is a grant of $12,000 from the Light and Power Commission. This simply means that Campbellford's municipally-owned power plant had accumulated such a large reserve that the Commissioners could afford to transfer to the Council's treasury the sum of $12,000, which was a total of $18,000 in two years, and still have to their credit approximately $25,000.

Township Session.

Seymour Township Council's session on Monday burned the night oil until 11.30 p.m., devoting hours to the consideration of purchasing road machinery for the year's work. Action was deferred until the March meeting.

Duncan Montgomery, who has been engaged in the McIntosh store for six years, has taken over the milk business conducted by Victor Hay, and began his deliveries yesterday.

Mr. H. T. Scott, drugless practitioner, reports that his patient, Mr. Gordon Mahoney, of Seymour, who has been ill with influenza and sciatica, is steadily improving.

APOLOGY GIVEN FRED M'ARTHUR AND $500 NOTE

W. A. Moore, of Colborne, Retracts Slanderous Election Statement.

SUIT IS SETTLED.

Ex-Mayor of Cobourg Demanded That His Reputation Be Cleared.

(Special Correspondence).

COBOURG, Feb. 9. — W. A. Moore, grocer, of Colborne, has made a public apology for his statement during the last Provincial election that ex-Mayor Fred J. McArthur of Cobourg, who was the Conservative candidate in Northumberland County, had been dragged out of a ditch dead drunk. Mr. Moore now acknowledges that there was not the slightest foundation for the slander he repeated, although he did not originate it, and his retraction will be published in the Cobourg, Brighton and Colborne papers on Thursday and in The Peterboro Examiner to-day.

It is understood that the settlement of the $5,000 suit, which Mr. McArthur instituted the day after the elections, includes not only the apology but also Mr. Moore's note for $500.

Mr. McArthur has emphasized from the outset that his chief purpose in the action, which will be withdrawn at the Spring Assizes, was to clear his reputation of any possible strain of political mud that was flung at him in the election campaign. He said that his good name as a citizen and funeral director demanded the apology, which he has accepted as follows:

Apology.

The undersigned, W. A. Moore, desiring to remedy as far as possible a wrong done by him in making accusations of a defamatory nature, during the heat of the Provincial election, concerning Frederick J. McArthur of Cobourg, undertaker, hereby tenders to him this apology and retraction.

I then knew little of Mr. McArthur, but have since learned sufficient about him and his habits to be able to say, as the fact is, that there was not the slightest foundation for the words I used of and concerning him, and my only regret is that this apology is a belated one. I fully realize that a story such as I, giving credence to, circulated but did not originate would naturally affect Mr. McArthur in his business as a funeral director, though being immersed in the paramount issue of the election that did not occur to me at that time.

Desiring to make amends to Mr. McArthur and such reparation as I can, I cheerfully tender to him this apology, realizing as I do that his business, necessitating intimate association with family circles, might be prejudicially affected if the people of this county thought that he was at any time or in any way addicted to liquor in the slightest degree.

(Signed) W. A. Moore.

BONES IN FIRE WERE WOMAN'S

Crown Positive of That Fact in West Enquiry.

SILENCES GOSSIP.

(Special Correspondence).

COBOURG, Feb. 9.—The charred bones found in the ashes of the home of Stuart West after the fire of March 9th last were those of a young woman. This fact has been definitely determined by the Provincial authorities, Crown Attorney W. F. Kerr, K.C., informed The Examiner yesterday. Otherwise, he declined to discuss any possible new features of the inquest to be held at Warkworth on Wednesday, February 16th. It would be contrary to practice, Mr. Kerr said, to announce beforehand the testimony the Crown expected to adduce at the new enquiry. A few witnesses who had not been called at the former inquest nearly a year ago were included in the score or more who would be questioned.

The positive identification of the remains, that were raked from the ashes of the West house, as those of a woman of about 25 years, may silence some of the persistent rumors which The Examiner heard here even yesterday. This gossip purported that Mrs. West was alive, that she was not in her home with her son the night of the fire, and that eventually she would return. Persons who retailed this story could not offer any reason why the young wife should disappear, if she were alive. She was born in Belgium in 1901, and was twenty-five years old at the time of the fire.

RECREATION CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS

Havelock C. P. R. Society Hears Reports of Successful Year.

HAVELOCK, Feb. 8.—The February meeting of the Havelock C.P.R. Recreation Club was held on Tuesday evening, with the president, Mr. H. W. Roche, in the chair and eighteen members present. Mr. C. Jamieson, the treasurer, presented a financial statement for the past year. On motion by Messrs. W. Hitchins and J. Howe, the financial statement was ordered filed and a vote of thanks tendered the treasurer for the able manner in which the financial affairs of the club had been handled throughout the year. There were two accounts stil outstanding and Messrs. L. Hagerman and J. H. Moore were appointed a committee to adjust them.

Mr. Roche reviewed the activities of and the progress made by the club since its inception one year ago and at the conclusion asked for nominations for officers for the coming term.

Mr. P. Pincombe was nominated for President by Messrs. J. H. Moore and A. Armstrong. There being no other nominations for president, Mr. Pincombe was declared elected. In taking the chair Mr. Pincombe thanked the members for the honor bestowed upon him and hoped he would be able to direct the affairs of the club in the same manner as they had been conducted in the past. He paid tribute to Mr. Roche, the retiring president, for the able and efficient manner in which the business of the club had been carried out, and the progress made by it, under his direction. While Mr. Roche was stepping on to the office of Immediate Past President, with its less arduous duties, the club would still benefit by his counsel.

For 1st Vice President there were nominated: R. Crawford, by H. W. Roche and J. Howe, and H. Gordon, by A. Armstrong and W. Hartry. Mr. Gordon was elected.

For Treasurer — C. Jamieson was nominated by J. Hooper and J. Howe, and W. Hartry, by H. W. Roche and A. Armstrong. Mr. Jamieson, on being nominated, thanked the members and stated that he did not care to assume the responsibilities of this office for the coming year. Mr. Hartry was then nominated and, there being no other nominations, he was declared elected.

For Secretary, J. H. Moore was nominated by J. Hooper and J. Howe. Mr. Moore also stated that he would like to reliquish the office, but no other nominations being made, Mr. Moore was declared elected.

Mr. Pincombe's elevation to the president's chair left the mechanical department with no representative on the executive and, on motion by C. Jamieson and J. Evans, Mr. W. Bullied was appointed a Vice-President representing this department.

On motion by J. Howe and J. Evans, all other officers were re-appointed to the positions held by them last year.

The president then brought up the matter of the club purchasing sweaters and stockings for the hockey team. Quite a discussion took place as regards the purchasing of this or any other equipment. It was the opinion of the members present that the club should purchase equipment as their financial position would permit, and on motion by J. Howe and C. Jamieson the sweaters and stocking were ordered purchased for the hockey team. Messrs. J. Evans, J. Hooper and A. Armstrong were appointed a property committee to look after any such equipment purchased. Mr. Howe spoke in connection with Mr. Gordon furnishing a box or cupboard for the safe-keeping of any such equipment, and Mr. Gordon promised to look after it. The standing committees were then elected for the coming term:

THIS CANADA OF OURS

AFTER THE WAR OF 1812.

Q.—What was the growth of Canada after the war of 1812?

A.—Canada gradually recovered from the effects of the war of 1812. Settlers from England, Ireland and Scotland began to flock to Canada. The soil was fertile; the people were industrious; religious liberty was assured; schools and colleges were started; steamboats were introduced and canals made; banks were founded, and commerce and manufactures increased. Upper Canada grew faster than Lower Canada. In 1804, Upper Canada's share of the revenue, which was derived from the customs, excise and sale of lands and licenses, was increased to one-fifth. In 1822, the Canada Trade Act made a new division of the revenue, and awarded £30,000, as back dues, to Upper Canada.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1927

(Copyright, 1927, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

This is one of the days that is extraordinary because of its many evil aspects, according to astrology.

It is well to delay in all sorts of initiative and to confine efforts to strictly necessary business under this sway, the seers admonish.

Business men may be anxious over international complications that threaten trade, but assurance is given that this country is to prosper enormously.

Labor is likely to be restive and discontinued under this direction of the stars. Strikes and lockouts, however, are things of the past, the seers declare, except in isolated instances.

This is rather a dubious time to buy or to sell real estate, but there is to be great activity everywhere in the spring.

Women should defer public matters of importance and should be very cautious about all their business affairs while this configuration prevails.

Irritability and unreasonableness may be apparent in an unusual degree to-day and it is well to cultivate a happy point of view.

The stationary position of Mercury is likely to bring many political matters to a head and to cause sensational events in Europe.

Scandals in municipal government probably will be uncovered in more than one American city in this year of 1927.

Women are to be severely criticized for their lack of influence in political matters and to be held responsible for many public ills, it is foretold.

This is not a lucky day for love affairs and yet there will be great temptation toward romantic adventures.

Weddings under this direction of the stars appear to be attended by the ill omen of much quarreling and even divorce.

Persons whose birthdate it is have a promising augury for real estate speculation, but they may be easily cheated.

Children born on this day probably will be unselfish and generous. They may have a tendency to carry other people's burdens.

It isn't surprising that the girl who sits all day bent over her typewriter, should form the bad habit of keeping her head too much in one position thus "tightening" the muscles of her neck and shoulders from lack of exercise.

But it is rather surprising that a well-pocketed matron who has nothing to do but ride about in her limousine should develop an unbeautiful dowager's hump, which is just another manifestation of the lack of exercise.

Try to Find One

In these nervous and hectic times, it is difficult to find a woman who carries her head beautifully, and who has the graceful swan-like neck that is the result of perfect muscle co-ordination. So it is well to limber up and relax often.

One of the simplest exercise is just to work out the stiffness by heavy massage at the point where the head joins the spine. Place both of your hands at the base of your brain and work upward as if you were trying to lift your head off your spine, using firm rotary strokes. Then work downward pressing your finger tips heavily into the neck muscles. Those muscles on the shoulder, too, need to be caressed and stimulated.

Stops Headaches

Often a headache that is merely from overstrain may be "worked out" by this method, and certain mental kinks and worries can also be ironed out.

I advise every woman who comes under the "sedentary worker" classification to make this ebauty rite a daily obligation.

A simple exercise is to drop your head on your shoulder, then, as relaxed as possible, describe a circle with your head, slowly turning first to the right and to the left.

Keeping the neck and shoulders relaxed is one of the most important exercises if you wish to keep a youthful appearance.

Preliminary "Necking Act"

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

The drive to the Cluny mansion was a nightmare for Faith, for the two detectives had sternly enforced their own idea of a suitable seating arrangement. Faith was guarded on the back seat by the silent Boyle, and Farrel rode beside Bob, who spoke only to reply to a question of the detective. Faith sat huddled in a corner of the seat, her face a white mask of misery and fear.

"Better come clean right off with the Chief," Boyle said calmly, as he looked at her curiously. "Won't help matters none to stall around."

"I don't know anything to tell him," Faith said dully, but her hands tightened on her handbag, where Cherry's farewell note lay tightly folded.

As the car picked a slow way through the jam of traffic before the church, Faith saw the Rev. Mr. Ashburn, divested of his black robe and white surplice, appear on the steps and raise his hands as if to deliver a benediction. He was evidently trying to aid the police in dispersing the crowd that milled about the snow-covered church lawn.

The Cluny mansion, less than half a mile from the fashionable St. Peter's Episcopal Church, was set in lonely magnificence in the center of a long city block. A tall, thick ever-green hedge enclosed the plot of ground on all four sides. Snow-laden fir and cedar trees dotted the high-terraced lawn. A long greenhouse crouched near the hedge on the right, supplying the mansion with an endless variety of hothouse flowers.

The house itself was a lordy, gothic affair of cream-colored brick. A dozen delicately beautiful turrets pierced the thick gloom of the November night. Light poured from a score of front windows on all three floors. Shades had been yanked up ruthlessly, and Faith saw burly men, some in uniform, some in plain clothes, passing constantly across those squares of light. Flashlights, in the hands of other police officers, twinkled here and there above the snow carpet of the lawn.

The old man who had lived in lonely splendor and who had died alone, unless his murderer had waited to see that his work was well done, was, ironically, permitted no peace in his death. He was playing the silent, though central role, in just such a drama as he had so many times described with realistic and horrible details before a trial jury.

As these thoughts passed hazily through Faith's panic-stricken brain, a sob of pity for the old man whom she had come to respect and like swelled in her throat. Cherry had liked him, too, even though she had found that she couldn't marry him. He had been so good to Cherry—and now—they thought Cherry had killed him. Cherry! Tiny, impulsive, storm - and - sunshine Cherry, who could not stay angry more than a minute to save her life! Cherry, who, for all her selfishness and artful scheming, had never done a really wicked thing in her life!

When they entered the long, wide main hall of the beautiful old house, through the high-arched Gothic doorway, Faith saw at once that the Cluny clan had assembled. At the foot of the broad, curving staircase stood Alexander Cluny, old Mr. Cluny's only son, a prominent corporation lawyer, and beside him was his own son, young Ralph Cluny, the second, recently made an assistant district attorney.

"I had an usher get them out of the church before I saw you," Bob whispered to Faith. "I surely hope Alex's wife isn't here. She's addicted to hysterics."

"I'm glad Mrs. Allbright and Muriel are in Switzerland," Faith answered in a whisper, as the Chief of Police came shouldering his way through the small crowd in the hall.

Preventing Influenza

(By Dr. Frank McCoy, Diet Specialist and Author of "The Fast Way to Health")

If you do not follow the advice in my last article, but finally develop influenza, your chances for a cure are very good if you strictly follow the simple instructions which I am about to give you. At this season of the year, if you feel the slightest backache in the lower back, you should take your temperature. If the temperature is found to be above normal, go home at once, if you are working, and do not try to finish the day's work. Take an enema as soon as possible, using two quarts of warm water. If the results are not good at first, repeat the enema until successful.

Next, take a hot tub bath, lying in the water for about twenty minutes, with the water as hot as can be borne. Dry quickly afterwards and get in between woolen blankets. Put on a woolen sweater or coat and do not wear any cotton, linen, or silk under-clothing; no clothing except that made of wool should be allowed to touch your body. Put plenty of covers over you and a hot water bottle at your feet; It is advisable to secure some one to help you as you will soon begin to sweat and must not uncover. The woolen bed clothes should be pinned down, or well tucked in so that no cold air will be drawn under the covers, if you turn over. At the start of this sweating treatment, drink a glass of hot water and repeat the full glass of hot water every thirty minutes, as long as awake. You will soon begin to sweat and will continue to do so until the fever has disappeared. It is sometimes necessary to keep up the sweating for three or four days before the fever will be entirely eliminated.

A daily enema should be taken, using a bedpan, if necessary, so as not to stop sweating. If the fever remains high and you do not sweat, the nurse must give you sponge baths every hour, until you again start sweating.

It seems needless to say that no food of any kind should be given. The water may be flavored with lemon or orange juice, if desired. Do not, under any circumstances, get up and cool off before the fever has entirely disappeared for at least twenty-four hours.

When your temperature is normal, you may start eating any kind of food in proper combinations. However, you will not be very hungry for a few days, so should keep the quantity of food very small.

Calisthenic exercises should be taken the second day as soon as the fever is gone, and short walks taken each day, gradually increasing the distance day il You will be very weak after the fever and will be able to build up to normal strength through such exercises. This after-treatment to develop vitality is very important. If you wish to avoid such bad after-effects as tuberculosis, kidney and liver disorders. During the fever, the hacking cough will persist but you will not raise much mucus until after the fever has disappeared; then you will be surprised that the mucus seems to increase for a week or two. It may not diminish, but become progressively worse, if you do not diet properly and take the exercises which I have recommended for you.

These are just plain, common-sense instructions, which have worked without failure in thousands of cases. Use this advice and pass it on to your friends.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

This jacket frock in compose effect makes use of white and nattier blue crepella.

Following the general principle that it is always better to use an English word than a French one when the English word expresses the meaning just as well, we ought to speak of these new two-material frocks and wraps as composite, and not "compose," which in this connection we, of course, took from the French. Still everyone who talks of clothes knows what is meant by the compose effect. The word is as well established in the patter of dressmakers as "ensemble" or "lingerie."

There is nothing whatever new in the compose idea. Since men and women first began to wear clothes of fabric it has been usual enough to wear two sorts of fabric in the same costume. But sometimes they wore it as a matter of necessity—and now it is done as a matter of fashionable choice. Once the frock made of a little of this and a little of that was always suspected of being made over, or perhaps made of remnants.

There is an almost endless variety to the manner in which different fabrics may be combined for there seem to be no definitely prescribed combinations. Thus taffeta silk may be used with organdie, or gingham with pongee.

One of the most popular combinations of fabric for the spring is crepe satin and georgette, or crepella and georgette. Sometimes the compose effect is achieved by using the same material in two different colors. Sometimes two materials of the same shade exactly are used together—one dull in finish and the other glossy.

Compose evening frocks are considered one of the decided fashion developments of the late winter and the most usual type of these is the gown of black and white—the bodice usually of white and the skirt of black. This is apparently not to be shelved for the spring but women will go on wearing this arrangement of black and white—only in lighter materials than the velvets and satins chosen for winter.

This really is an excellent season for the woman who needs to make over frocks or who wants to make use of short lengths. A one or two-tiered pleated skirt may be of one material with perhaps enough left for a jabot frill or collar and cuff facings. It is even possible to make use of three materials, providing, of course, that they form an effective color harmony together

BEE KEEPERS IN CONFERENCE

County Association Hold Annual Gathering at Lakefield.

GOOD ADDRESSES.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 9.—The annual meeting of the Peterborough County Bee-keepers' Association was held on Friday afternoon in the Council Chamber in connection with the short course on agriculture now going on. Mr. Jarvis apiarist of the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, was present, and gave an address which was most interesting both to the bee-keepers and also to the students of the class.

There was a good attendance, in spite of terrible condition of the roads, which made traffic a very precarious matter. Many of the bee-keepers having come long distances to the conference. Mr. Shields of Peterborough was appointed chairman of the meeting and he gave a brief address on some of the problems which faced the bee-keeper. One of the greatest problems is the marketing of the honey, for there is great competition in the honey markets of the world. Until the last couple of years, Ontario had a splendid market in the Western provinces, but now these provinces have gone into bee-keeping extensively and supply their own market. As an instance, Manitoba, three years ago produced 300,000 pounds of honey, while last year with a better crop than Ontario, they produced nearly four million pounds, and this in a province of about 600,000 population. In Lethbridge, Alberta, one man produced six car loads of honey last year. The average consumption of honey in Ontario is a pound and a half per person a year. The consumption has not kept pace with the production, which is against the economic laws, so the producer should exert himself to develop the home market. There is a tremendous foreign market, which, however, fluctuates. The European buyer is shrewd; the English strike upset the market greatly. Ontario honey is the finest in the world but it has strong rivals in California's orange blossom honey and white sage honey, and also in the product of New Zealand. California honey is sold in England at 9¼ cents a pound.

Honey, a Food

To develop the home market the first step is to educate the bee-keeper, so that he will talk honey up, for talk is the cheapest method of advertising. Honey is not a luxury but a food, and the question is not that of over-production but under-consumption. Honey is a heat producer, and contains two natural sugars, grape and fruit. It contains also iron for the blood and calcium and phosphorous for the bones, and oil and vitamines. The honey producers will have to emulate the raisin growers of California, whose business was cut in two by the passing of the Volstead Act, and who by intensive advertising have popularized raisins as an article of food. Honey is easily digested because of being a natural food. Cane sugar refined is an artificial food. Honey besides its food value, has taken the place of sugar in the large biscuit factories and also in several sanitariums is used as a medicine with remarkably successful results, especially in heart and pneumonia cases. The bee-keeper should stress the food and medicinal value of honey.

Mr. Jarvis was the next speaker, and he began by saying that the bee-keepers of Ontario were in two classes: those who are in the business as a means of livelihood, and those who made a hobby of it. At present it is a dificult problem to make money out of bees.

A colony of bees has from 40,000 to 100,000 workers, one queen, and a dozen to several hundred drones. The queen is not the ruler of the hive according to popular belief, but is merely a very efficient egg machine, and the workers carry on the main activities of the hive. The queen is capable of laying from 1,500 to 2,000 eggs a day—about twice its own weight in eggs, and the workers see that she does it. They feed her and form a ring around her to see that she stays "on the job." The worker bees do all the work, but have considerly more freedom than the queen. The young workers are first given the work of nurses for still younger bees and as they grow stronger they do the housework in the hive, building the comb, changing the honey in the hive and keeping the hive clean. When fully developed, they go out gathering honey as wild bees. The work of the comb is wonderful under a system which appears most casual, but which has astonishing results.

The drone or male is hatched from the infertile egg and is in the peculiar position of having a grandfather but no father. The drone does not work and cannot even feed itself. When they are through with the drones in the fall, they stop feeling them, and when they become weakened they throw them out to die of starvation.

Apparently the queen can fertilize eggs at will; one of the wonders of nature is the hatching of the male from infertile eggs.

The way the bees generate heat in the winter is like a story from a fairy book, but is quite true. There is no time when they lie dormant, and while they require a little care, not a great deal is needed. Mr. Jarvis gave a short talk on making the production of comb honey more profitable, and recommends strongly the new oblong frames with the thin foundation.

Foul Brood Danger

The Bee-keepers' Association realizes that its most serious problem is the American foul brood. Seven counties, of which this is one, are in a clean-up area, and no bees are allowed to be brought into the quarantine area. Now the bee-keepers and inspectors are satisfied with the results, as in seven counties the disease is practically annihilated. There is no difficulty now in the final eradication of the disease, if reasonable care is exercised. While the disease affects the bees its does not effect the honey for human consumption, as there is no harmful effect from eating the honey. Several questions have been asked on this point, and it has been proved beyond all question of doubt that the honey is perfectly safe for human consumption.

Honey dew is the product of the plant aphis and is gathered by the bees when the floral flow has stopped. Mr. Jarvis produced a sample which was passed around.

Mr. Jarvis urged the continuance of the Beekeepers' Association, and also that an effort be made to get new members.

Mr. Shields took the chair for the election of officers, and urged also that all bee-keepers should join it. The government assists the bee-keepers in many ways and membership in the local association automatically makes one a member of the Ontario Bee-keepers Association with a yearly premium of a queen bee.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were read by the secretary-treasurer, Mr. J. Grierson, who is very keen on the subject, after which these officers were elected:

President, Allan T. Brown of Peterborough; 1st Vice President, Ernest Waldon of Lakefield; 2nd Vice President, W. O. Ball of Scott's Corners; secretary - treasurer, J. Grierson, Peterborough. Committee—W. J. Telford, Bridgenorth; Harold Dunford, Lakefield; William Thompson, Indian River; R. B. Dickson, Otonabee; A. B. Greenbank, Norwood; Ernest Telford, Peterborough.

Following the meeting two reels of moving pictures of the Ontario Government production were shown illustrating some of the points of this most remarkable and interesting work.

TANKARD OFFERED FOR CANADA TITLE

For Competition Among the Best Curlers of Provinces.

QUEBEC, Feb. 9 (Canadian Press).—With a view to encouraging inter-provincial curling matches and also to afford an opportunity for the best curlers in Canada to meet in competition, an offer has been made to donate a "Tankard" as a perpetual Dominion trophy, to be known as the "Macdonald Brier Tankard," the rink winning this trophy to receive gold medals. Rinks attaining second place will be given silver and bronze medals.

The proposal is a development of the Macdonald Brier Trophy which was a feature of the Winnipeg Bonspiels of 1925 and 1926.

The whole proposal will even assume an international character as well as a national, as it will be quite possible for, say, Detroit to win the Ontario Tankard, Duluth to win in Winnipeg, and a New York club to qualify at the Quebec Curlers' Bonspiel.

Railroad Shares Lose In Reaction This Afternoon

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.— (Canadian Press.)—Speculation in railroad shares receives a decided shock this noon, when wide open breaks took place in a number of real favorites.

The re-action was started by bear traders who acted on the theory that speculation in many of the low priced rails had been carried to excess. Trading was in tremendous volume.

Wheeling and Lake Erie common broke from 105 to 66 3-4, West Maryland common dropped 14 1-2 to 25, Chicago Great Western common and preferred, each collapsed about seven points and a dozen others dropped two to five points below their earlier highs.

Occasional Firm Spots On Weak Mining Market

TORONTO, Feb. 9 (Canadian Press).—Occasional firm spots were conspicuous in the generally easy tone of the market on the Standard Mining Exchange this morning, when stocks had a tendency to lose ground in heavy trading. McIntyre, gaining 25 at 26.50, and Barry Hollinger were the two bright features Barry gained 2 3-4 at 69. Amulet lost five at 152, while its companion, Area, eased only one point at 56. Castle Trethewey lost six cents at 111, and Consolidated West Dome eased 1-2 at 15. Laval Quebec was a half point lower at 38 1-2.

Change In Control Rumored In Massey Harris Company

TORONTO, Feb. 9 (Canadian Press).—Coupled with the rapid advance in the price of shares of the Massey Harris Company on the Toronto Stock Exchange today was the report that negotiations are in progress with a view to a change in the control of the firm. It is stated that offers have been made on behalf of an American syndicate, but up to the present confirmatory advice has not been obtained.

All other issues receded into the background when Massey Harris continued its upward sweep on the Toronto Stock Exchange today on a turnover, in the first session, of nearly six thousand shares. The stock climbed another eight points to 85, and although it sagged later, recovered to 84 7-8 at the noon close. Other issues were generally firm, especially Brazilian, which advanced 3-4 at 117 1-2. Industrial Alcohol at 24 5-8 and Seagram at 22 1-2 were both firmer, while International Nickel improved to 40 5-8 but Hiram Walker eased a quarter at 37 1-4.

Wheat Prices Drop When Weather Improves

CHICAGO, Feb. 9 (Canadian Press).—With temperatures not as low as predicted in the domestic Winter crop territory, wheat underwent an early set-back today. The bears were also encouraged by the fact that the Liverpool market proved unresponsive to yesterday's late advance here. Opening at 1-8 to 1-2 cent of, Chicago wheat subsequently showed a moderate further decline. Corn, oats, and provisions were easy, corn starting at 3-8 cent lower to 1-8 cent advance, and later holding near to the initial range.

Closing prices were: Wheat, May 141 1-2, July 135 1-8. Corn, May 81, July 84 5-8. Oats, May 47 1-8, July 47 1-2.

Act Of Kindness Ends In Fall Of Wise Men

Frequenters of Peterborough's Hall of Wisdom, responding to an appeal for assistance from one of their number, J. G. Graham, who had undertaken to fell three willow trees situated on the river bank near the goose pond, received a rude shock yesterday.

A couple who refused to work, claiming that their advice was more valuable, insisted that a rope be placed around one of the trees in order that the remainder of the members could haul the tree in the required direction once it was ready. Getting set for the heave that was to accomplish the feat took a few minutes. On receiving the command they pulled with might and main, with the result that the rope suddenly broke, pitching them one on top of the other.

No casualties resulted, and with the exception of a few scratches none of the participants was any the worse of the accident.

PREMIER THINKS APPOINTMENTS MOST SUITABLE

Believes Public Will Approve Choice of Control Board Members.

SALARIES NOT FIXED.

Question Will Be Taken Up With Appointees in Near Future.

TORONTO, Feb. 9 (Canadian Press). — Premier George Howard Ferguson stated to-day that he was sure that the appointments of D. B. Hanna, as chairman, and of Stewart McClenaghan and Hon. R. J. Manion as commissioners to the board to administer the Government's new liquor control legislation would meet with the undivided opinion of the public at large.

"The appointments were made on the basis of public service. They were offered and accepted in that light," the Premier said, when questioned regarding the salaries to be paid the Commission. "You cannot expect men of their calibre to give up their large industrial and commercial interests at a sacrifice, and that will have to be met. However, the question of remuneration is one that will have to be dealt with and I intend to take it up with the members of the Commission in the near future."

Outplayed and outskated the Peterborough Juniors lost the first game of the play-offs to Brockville Juniors last night by eight goals to one.

The score by no means shows the closeness of the play but the better team won and the Petes wish them much success in their future games.

Manager LeBarr after consulting the players last night decided that the seven goal lead was too much to overcome in a return game and as there are two senior and one intermediate O.H.A. game at Brock street this week from a financial standpoint also it was decided to default the remaining game which was scheduled for Brock street ice on Thursday night.

Brockville has a smooth team of fast skaters and good puck carriers with the back checking which told on the night's play.

The local wings were unable to hold their men and although they gave their best it was not quite enough to keep up with the fast Brockville team.

Jones, who played centre for Peterboro, was the most effective man on the forward line and he held his man well in check. Lebarr on defense also was one of the outstanding players on the Peterborough team. Mein in goal played a splendid game and made some wonderful saves. The ones that beat him were on close in shots and very hard to get but if not for his fine showing the score might have been much larger.

Brockville has a well balanced team and are strong in every position. Their goalie played a wonderful game and many times the Petes had the defense beaten but the goalie always stood in the path for a sure goal.

The ice after the first period became very sticky and combination was practically impossible but any that was shown was exhibited on the side of the winners who made many two man rushes.

The first period saw no penalties handed out by Referee Devlin but in the second and third the game had a tendency to grow a little rough and on the night's play each team drew four penalties, one of Brockville's being because they had seven men on the ice.

The players on both teams bunched a great deal, and perhaps the locals were the worst offenders. Brockville has a fast outfit, who are able both to skate and stick-handle, and in the back-checking they showed far more punch than the Petes.

On the night's play they well deserved the win, and with the same line-up they should go far in the Junior O.H.A. series.

Garanad on right wing is a splendid player, and he was the outstanding player. The Brockville players beat the defence men many times by their clever stick-handling, and they showed ability in carrying the puck around the back of the net.

The Game.

The first period opened with very fast hockey and a little combination shown on both sides. During this period the play was clean, as no penalties were handed out. After the face-off Brockville carried the puck right into Peterborough territory, and in one minute of play Percy McInrue had bulged the net for the first goal for Brockville. McInrue completely baffled the defence by his stick-handling, and he beat Mein by a close-in one. After seven minutes of play Welsh took a splendid pass from Dexter for Brockville's second goal, and in two more minutes Garanad gave a fine exhibition of stick-handling for the third and final goal of the period.

The second period showed the play more evenly balanced, but Brockville still retained the edge. After four minutes of play Garanad came across with his second goal of the evening when he sent one into the corner of the net. In nine minutes of play he came through with a second goal for that period. Four penalties were handed out, two to each team. Levia for Brockville drew the first penalty of the game, and not many minutes later Jones was sent to the bench, with Garanad following. As the period closed Allin was serving his time. In this period there was much hard checking and fast skating, and the Petes played their best game of the night during this twenty-minute frame. The Petes in this period had many shots as Ted LeBarr went through time after time.

The final period saw very rough play, with hard body-checking by both teams. In this frame Garanad was responsible for two more of Brockville's goals, and Walsh scored the third one. LeBarr scored the only tally for Peterboro in a scrimmage in front of the Brockville net. The Petes played a four-man forward and kept the game well in Brockville territory, but they seemed unable to score.

Kinneally and Callidine both drew penalties, as did McInrue. In this period LeBarr gave some fine exhibitions of individual hockey, but he was heavily body-checked by the Brockville players, and only came through with one tally.

MILL LOSE TO CLERKS

Defeated By Score of 5-2 in Campbellford Town Hockey League.

MIDGETS TIED.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 9—The luckless Mill lost another game in the Town Hockey League at Coverts Arena last night when the fast travelling Clerks beat them 5 to 2.

As a whole the Clerks' play was listless. The big three up front only showed flashes of their real form after taking an early lead in the first period.

The Mill probably had more chances to score in the second and third period than the Clerks, but Fox was on his best behavior and the Mill gang could not sink the rubber behind him.

It was a good game for the spectators with end-to-end play featuring, and the many good saves of the goal keepers brought the crowd to their feet many times.

The Mill had Heptonstall in the nets in place of Tommy Stewart and the midget gaye a good account of himself in his debut in senior company.

Ayrhart Lambert and Brown were the best of the Mill and Wood McArthur and Fox starred for the Clerks.

The midget game between the Elks and Bear Cats went overtime without reaching a decision, each side netting the rubber four times.

The youngsters continue to show improvement everytime out.

Lambert was the best boy out there and would have been a bigger help to his team has he passed the puck on occasions.

Doug Runions starred for the Bear Cats and increased his lead for Midget scoring honors by bulging the twine three times.

Bear Cats—Goal, Bush; right defence, Free; left defence, Maybee; centre, D. Runions; right wing, Henson; left wing, McPherson; sub, Peake.

Referee—T. Stewart.

OTTAWA BEGINS NEW ICE DRIVE

Senators Now Have Ten-Point Margin of Safety.

CANADIENS PICK UP.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—The drive of the Ottawa Senators, momentarily checked by a recent slump, is on again in the National Hockey League. The league-leading Senators shook the jinx that had dogged their trail for the past two weeks by downing the Chicago Black Hawks, 2 to 1, Saturday night.

Althought the Canadiens were able to pick up two points on the Senators in the week's campaign in the international section of the league, the pace-makers, apparently on the winning road again, have little to fear with a 10 point margin of safety. The New York Rangers, despite their win and loss of the past week, managed to maintain the eight-point lead over the second place Boston Bruins in the American section.

Pittsburgh's march from cellar to third place in the American group, temporarily halted by the Rangers' 2 to 1 victory, brings the Pirates against New York teams with two opportunities for revenge this week. Ottawa has an engagement at Chicago Wednesday and Toronto Saturday.

The Boston Bruins, engaged in the tight battle to hold second place against Pittsburgh, play Montreal Friday. Canadiens invade Chicago Friday and Detroit Saturday. The Toronto St. Patricks have one match with the Rangers Thursday. The Chicago Black Hawks visit the Americans at Madison Square Garden in the only Sunday game.

COBB HOLDS OFF MACK IS ANXIOUS

Says That He Will Not Sign For Several Days.

GOES TO NEW YORK.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 9.—Several American League base ball clubs, including the Philadelphia Athletics and St. Louis Browns, have made "tempting" offers to Ty Cobb, but he has not yet decided where to go.

Connie Mack, manager of the Athletics, and Dan Howley, manager of the Browns, are so eager to obtain Cobb that they made a trip to the latter's home in Augusta, Ga. for that purpose. Apparently the journey was fruitless, for Cobb intimated that he would make no decision until he had considered other offers.

Cobb was in New York yesterday, presumably to look over the ground there. He, Mack and Howley came north together, occupying the same drawing room and arriving here Monday. Howley went to New York with Cobb and both are expected back here for the Philadelphia sports writers' dinner.

"I may have something to tell when I come back to Philadelphia," Cobb said. "I have received tempting offers from Connie Mack and Dan Howley, as well as other major league managers. I told Mack and Howley that I would take several days to make up my mind."

Mack said today he did not want to speculate on his chances of getting Cobb.

"I thought I had Tris Speaker and lost him, and I am not going to make any guesses in the present case," he added. I made Ty an offer and his reply was that he would not take any definite steps for several days. I can only hope for the best. I will say that Ty is in fine spirits and rare physical condition and determined to play base ball this season."

LINE-UP FOR DOG RACING CLASSIC.

St. Goddard wins the annual dog racing classic of the north, the dog derby at Le Pas, Manitoba. The famous dog sled derby covers a distance of 120 miles, run in three heats of forty miles each. It was won for the second time in succession by Emile St. Goddard in 11 hours, 27 minutes and 151-2 seconds. Earl Brydges was second and Leo St. Goddard, younger brother of Emile, came in third. The photograph shows the dogs lined up for the start of the race when the temperature was 42 degree below zero.

BRISTLING BATTLES of BARE FIST DAYS

(MY LIFE STORY)

By Jack McAuliffe

When John L. Sullivan was training for his bout with Jim Corbett his handlers worked on the theory they must develop John L's speed, so they made him run for hours through heavy beach sand with lead weights in his shoes.

They just ruined him, that's all, taking the steam out of his legs.

When the fight started it was apparent Sullivan was just a ghost of himself. Round after round he kept plugging across the ring, chasing the fast Corbett all over the place. Corbett did nothing but gallop and gallop and gallop until we all grew tired of the thing, and John L's face was red and puffing from trying to get at Corbett and catch up with him.

His mistake in training began to show and he became leg weary. Corbett seized his chance and started after him.

In the seventh round I was fanning John L. with a towel and the towel struck his legs. He looked down and grinned weakly at me.

"Theyre gone, Jack, both of 'em are gone."

As the rounds went on Sullivan became weaker and weaker. He really ran himself out and in the 21st he collapsed. He was knocked out. He was so exhausted he couldn't get up. When he came back to his corner he was in full possession of his faculties.

Pulling himself up on the ropes he started across the ring to shake hands with Corbett. I stepped in front of him. "No you don't, John", I says, "Don't humiliate yourself. Corbett refused to shake hands with you before the fight."

The grand old fellow looked at me with tears in his eyes and then made his famous statement that he'd been beaten fairly and cleanly and that he was glad an American won.

The purse was winner take all. John L was broke. So was I. I had bet every cent I had on him. The crowds had deserted him. Those who used to swarm around him whenever he went to fight as a champion now avoided him, in the streets, in the hotel lobbies, in the eating places.

He was alone and broken-hearted. That night he gave me some good advice.

"Let booze alone," John said "You cant' fight and drink, Jack. Everybody gets HIS sometime. Do what I'm a-telling you now and retire with the glory of a world's championship and avoid the disgrace of a knockout."

I made up my mind that night, sitting alone there with John L. in his room. I quit fighting and retired.

I gave my belt to Lavigne.

THE END.

MADOC WINS WHITTY TROPHY

Captures Trent Valley High School League Title Again.

BEATS STIRLING.

MADOC, Feb. 9.—The deciding game of the Trent Valley High School League was played here on Monday night between Stirling and Madoc, resulting in a score of 3-1 in favor of Madoc. Both teams had previously won four games and lost one.

The play opened rather slowly, and for a time it was centred around Madoc goal. Ashley and Whytock made good rushes for Madoc, and succeeded in carrying the play to Stirling goal. The period seemed about to close without a score, when Whytock, with a lone rush, found the net and scored one for Madoc.

About five minutes after the second period opened Rupert scored again for Madoc. The play was faster and many close shots were sent in by both sides. The goalies were kept busy, and though Whytock and Nickle made some good shots, neither side scored again. The second period closed 2-0 in favor of Madoc.

In the third period Ashley again found the net and increased Madoc's score. The visitors worked hard to equalize, and in a scrimmage around Madoc goal succeeded in slipping one past Madoc's alert goalie, Campbell Wallbrige, who excelled his usual good game. Stirling did some good work, but neither side scored again, and the game ended at 3 to 1 for Madoc. Two or three penalties were meted out to both homesters and visitors, but the game was good, clean hockey. Kenneth Nicol of Madoc refereed in a satisfactory manner.

At the close of the game, Charles Whytock, Chairman of the High School Board, presented the Whitby Memorial Cup to the Madoc team. This cup, which was donated by Messrs Leury and Eggleton of Stirling and Hough of Madoc, in memory of L. V. Whitty, a former Stirling player, who was killed in action overseas, is now being held by the home team for the second year, and hearty congratulations are due to the boys who have worked so hard to again win the prize. Madoc boys have lost only one game this season, when they were defeated 3 to 2 by Marmora.

Next Friday night the boys will play their first game in the inter-scholastic league against Deseronto.

The line up was as follows:

Madoc.—Goal, C. Wallbridge; defence, C. Phillips and A. Ashley; centre, D. Whytock; wings, T. Nickle, A. Ruport, sub, R. Dafoe.

Stirling.—Goal, D. Morton; defence, B. Haggerty, A. Meiklejohn; centre, C. McGee; wings, D. Marshall C. Cooke; subs Tullock and Hollin.

SOCIAL EVENING.

Held Under Auspices of the Catholic Women's League at Downeyville.

DOWNEYVILLE, Feb. 8. — A very interesting social evening was held here in the hall on Friday evening under the auspices of the Catholic Women's League, when over 300 people were present.

The main part of the evening's programme was a debate "Resolved, that the business girl makes a better wife than the girl who remains at home following a domestic career," was well presented, in a humorous and interesting manner.

The parts were taken by the four teachers, Miss Mary Cavanagh of the High School and Miss Anna Murray of S. S. No. 4, both of whom upheld the affirmative, while Miss Ruby Perdue of S. S. No. 6, and Miss Viola Herlihy, S. S. No. 15, upheld the negative side.

Rev. Father Galvin acted as chairman in his usual capable manner.

The judges were Rev. Father McAuley and Mrs. Frank Cavanagh of Ennismore. Mr. Austin Scully, of Toronto, Mrs. Albert Carroll, and Miss Marguerite Clancy. It was a hard decision to arrive at, but finally it was announced by Rev. Father McAuley in favor of the negative, who won by three points.

The reverend gentleman spoke highly of the eloquence of the debaters, and also to the wonderful work of the women of the past, most of whom were girls who followed the domestic career.

Miss Mary Winn gave a vocal solo and the Duffy siters gave a Highland dance in costume, both of which were enoyed by all.

A dainty lunch was then served by the ladies after which the remainder of the evening was followed by dancing and social chat, with music furnished by Brown's orchestra of Lindsay. We al hope to have the pleasure of hearing another debate in the rear future.

SECOND PLACE WILL BE PRIZE IN FRIDAY TILT

Winner of Marlboro-Petes Clash Will Be in the Play-off.

DUKES ARE STRONG.

Carl Voss and Yank Boyd Give Fresh Punch to Frank Selke's Team.

With the right to meet Varsity Grads in the play-off for group honours at stake on Friday night when the Marlboros and Petes clash at Brock street rink the game should easily be the most exciting battle of the year.

The two teams have met twice before this season the Dukes winning in Toronto 1 to 0 while the Petes were victorious on local ice 5 to 4 so in the matter of goals scored the two are even on the season. Marlboros have now their strongest line-up of the season in action, the addition of Yank Boyd, last year with Toronto Canoe Club Juniors and Carl Voss of the champion Kingston team of last season giving them the services of two of the best players developed in Junior ranks in 1925-26 campaign. With the sensational Joe Primeau at centre flanked by the hard working Johnny MacPherson and the shifty Heintzman the Dukes have a fine attacking division while Underwood and Crompton form a strong defence in front of Joe Stark.

The Petes too are stronger than at any time this season, the return to form of Snap Parker being a big help to the team.

With everything hinging on the result the game should be a sensational struggle.

A capacity crowd will see the fight for second place wound up.

THEY CRAVED ACTION

FITCHBURG, Mass., February 9.—The Whalom Park Women's Club had a whist party scheduled for Thursday, Jan. 23. But a special meeting was called and it was voted to call off the whist and listen in on the championship fight.

GOOD PRIZES.

Tickets for the hockey week at the Regent Theatre can be secured at the Examiner Office now.

The Petes' chances of getting into the Senior play-offs are now very good and as a large expense is attached to these games the management of the Regent Theatre has kindly given the club a certain percentage of the amount realized upon the sale of tickets.

MILLBROOK OUT OF BOTH SERIES

Local District Winners Eliminated in Curling at Toronto.

CLOSE GAMES.

TORONTO, Feb. 9. — Toronto Victorias, Kingston and Lakeview Clubs remain in the running for the Governor-General's Trophy after the first day's play at High Park, Granite and Victoria Clubs yesterday. Toronto eliminated Agincourt in the afternoon at the Granite Club, while Lakeview defeated Hamilton Victorias at High Park Club. Kingston drew a bye. Good curling was witnessed in both the first and second round games. The semi-final and final will be played this morning and afternoon at the High Park Club.

Lakeview defeated Hamilton Vics in the second round by a margin of 34 shots. Garlick of Lakeview was beaten by Smith of Hamilton by 6 shots, but the veteran Bill Scott won a 15-shot victory over Schrader of Hamilton to give Lakeview the victory. At Granite Club in the afternoon both Toronto skips won to score a 14-shot victory. McCuaig, however, only defeated Spencer by 2 shots in a keenly contested game featured by excellent curling.

The preliminary and first round games in the morning were for the most part decisive victories. Toronto Vics, however, were lucky to survive the round; defeating Millbrook by but 2 shots.

In the Mail and Empire Trophy, the secondary competition yesterday afternoon, Bala eliminated Millbrook, while Guelph won a 1-shot victory from Barrie. Play in this competition will continue this morning at the Victoria Club.

OBITUARY.

SAMUEL BRYSON.

The death occurred last night of Samuel Bryson at the family residence, lot 29, concession 1 Dummer. He was 77 years of age and had lived in the township for the greater part of his life, being known as a most successful farmer. He was a staunch Presbyterian, and was a member of the Orange order.

He leaves to mourn his loss his sorrowing wife, one brother, Walter, of Muskoka, and one sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Reid, of Toronto.

Mr. Bryson was born in Toronto. He was a son of the late Robert Bryson, who came to Canada from Dublin, Ireland, in 1831, and settled in Peterborough, where he remained for a short time prior to removing to Toronto where he engaged working at his trade of shoemaker, staying there for four years. He returned to the Township of Dummer, and located in the village of Warsaw —where he continued to work at his trade up to the time of his death in 1860. He was a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin but preferred a trade to a profession.

Samuel the eldest son, whose death occurred last night, was born in Toronto in 1840, and in 1871 purchased 300 acres of land in Dummer, on which property he has resided ever since.

A remarkable feature about his life was that he has lived in the same house for 56 years, and during that time never missed having his Christmas dinner in his own home.

In 1872, he married Mrs. Amelia E. Harvey of Dummer, who predeceased him in 1907. In 1900 he married Miss Hanah Stone, who now survives him.

The funeral will take place from the family residence on Friday, at 1:30 p.m., to the Warsaw cemetery. The Rev. Mr. Herrington will officiate.

LOCAL WOMAN FATALLY HURT

Mrs. C. Windover Struck By Truck on Detroit Street.

AFTER COLLISION.

While walking on a Detroit street Mrs. Chester Windover, formerly of Lakehurst, was struck and fatally injured by a truck driven by James Crothers. A collision with a small coupe had forced the heavier vehicle on to the sidewalk at Chicago Boulevard, near Terry Avenue. Crothers hailed the driver of a passing touring car and took Mrs. Windover to Providence Hospital, but she died ten minutes after entering.

A pathetic feature of the accident is that her husband, Chester Windover, formerly of Peterborough, was forced by a chronic illness to leave his work last November. Since then he has been an invalid. Three little children also survive: Mildred, 5; Gladys, 4; and Helen, 2.

The Detroit police are seeking the driver of the coupe which struck Crother's truck. Crothers said he obtained his name and license number, and believed he was following him to the hospital.

The funeral will take place tomorrow from the residence of F. R. Sanderson, a brotheri-n-law, at 549 Albert Street, at 2 o'clock. Interment will be made in Lakefield Cemetery.

CLASS POSTPONED.

Owing to the Rev. J. D. Paterson being called out of town there will be no meeting of his Bible study class to-night.

BANQUET HELD AT ST. ANDREW'S

Mothers and Daughters of Congregation Guests of C.G.L.T.

INTERESTING SOCIAL.

An interesting event which took place recently in the Sunday School building of St. Andrew's Church was the "Mother and Daughter" banquet held under the auspices of the three groups, the Junior, Intermediate and Primary sections, of the Canadian Girls in Training of the church. About ninety people were present and enjoyed the hospitality of the girls, the supper being served at tables daintily arranged in the C.G.I.T. colors of blue and white, with blue candles in silver holders, surrounded by tiny Canadian flags, and yellow daffodils in black satin glass vases.

Miss Eva Cameron acted as toastmistress, and the various toasts were responded to in the names of the mothers present by Mrs. B. L. Barns. Among those proposing toasts were Mary Westbye, Dorothy Henry, who recited "My Madonna", Barbara Foster, reciting 'A Legend of Mother Love" and little Doris Tremaine reciting "My Sweetheart" Isabel Weddell sang "The Mothers of Our Land" and Helen Heffernan recited "The Quest." The girls united in the singing of "My Mother."

After the supper was finished, a demonstration of the programme of a regular C.G.I.T. meeting was given for the benefit of the mothers in the Ladies' Parlor, the programme being provided by the girls. Miss Helen Ross taking the intellectual portion, Miss Eleanor Stacey the religious, Miss Margaret Devell the social, and Miss Beulah Huffman the physical side. Miss Arleigh McKone gave a description of a trip taken last summer to Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Cape Breton.

The activity of the evening programme consisted of a picture gallery guessing contest, the mothers bringing baby pictures of their daughters and youthful pictures of themselves, a prize being awarded to those guessing the largest number of pictures correctly!

VOCAL RECITAL

There was a capacity audience in the hall of the Conservatory of Music last evening for a joint song recital given by two pupils of Mrs. Dorothy Allan Park, Miss Daisy Murray, soprano soloist of George Street United Church, and Miss Emma Meiklejohn, mezzo-contralto, of Campbellford. A great deal of interest was manifested in the delightful programme rendered by the two young ladies, both of whom received several pretty bouquets of flowers. Their teacher, Mrs. Park, and the accompanist, Miss Agnes Logan, who played with her well-known ease and proficiency, also received floral tributes.

Miss Murray and Miss Meiklejohn, with their contrasting types of voice, make an interesting duo. They sing with ease and assurance, with the clarity of enunciation and interpretative power which marks the work of Mrs. Park's pupils, and their programme was wide in range, and entertaining from beginning to end.

Miss Daisy Murray, whose promising voice has been an object of interest in vocal circles since her first appearance here, some years ago, possesses a degree of force and power that makes her singing tireless and unstrained at all times. Her pure, ringing tones have an echoing sweetness that gives the listener the impression of a viol undertone. Her capacity for sustained melody of powerful volume was demonstrated in two bright opening numbers, the "Morning Hymn" by Henschel, and "Let the Bright Seraphim" from the "Samson" of Handel.

Contrasting in type were the trio of dainty songs, in Grieg's "To a Water-Lily," Carl Busch's "Under the Greenwood Tree," and Sjogren's "The Seraglio's Garden," and the dramatic, forceful emphasis of the operatic aria from "Aida," "Ritorna Vincitor," sung in English.

Again was this outstanding dramatic quality, and the singer's command of tone nuances, demonstrated wonderfully in the Italian number, "Suicidio!" from "La Gioconda," and there was enthusiastic applause for the beautifully-sung following number, "The Blind Plowman," and the final solo number by Miss Murray, Del Riego's lovely song "Deeper my Love."

Miss Emma Meiklejohn of Campbellford has a mezzo-contralto voice of melodious charm, with a rich, mellow quality and sweetness of timbre. It was at its best, possibly, in the reverent rendition of Bach's "Into thy Hands," and two German songs. Carl Bohm's "Stille wie die Nacht" and Schumann's "Widmung," sung with an evident careful attention to the foreign language and its interpretation. Dvorak's "Inflammatus" was also sung, Greig's "Autumn Song," a graceful number, two compositions by Brahms, the "Sapphic Ode" and "The Blacksmith," a love song by Roger Quilter, in "Love's Philosophy," Edward Elgar's minor-noted "Twilight" and a beautiful final number, entitled "Stars."

As a contrasting bit to the classical quality of the programme, the two singers gave, by request, the ringing song of the fisher girls, "The Keel Row," with its stirring measures and full-voiced vigorous treatment. This was met by a burst of applause, which demonstrated, at the end of the programme, the continued interest of the audience.

ADDITION MADE TO LOCAL STORE

Miss A. T. Williams Has Extended "Character Clothes Shoppe."

Miss Alice T. Williams has recently made an interesting addition to her former premises, doubling her former space, in the "Character Clothes Shoppe" located above the Bank of Toronto premises. Miss Williams has taken over the rooms formerly occupied by the Imperial Life Insurance Company, and a charming vista of cool creams and blue is afforded the visitor to this distinctive Clothes Shoppe.

The color scheme is artistic in the extreme, the finishing of the walls and furniture and the decorations being carried out in the three colors of black, old blue, and beige. In the corner showroom, there are beige window hangings, with old blue over-drapes, blue wall candles, and black reed furniture, while heavy beige curtains drape the wardrobes in the stockroom. Casement doors make the main entrance and the entrance to the two fitting rooms and the workroom. In the reception room, the same lovely tints of deep cream and old blue are reflected in the old ivory of the reed furniture, the odd painted wooden chairs with their black outlining, and the soft cushions. Soft light and blue grey rugs, ferns and magazines, add their note to a very decorative effect, and the colored etchings and reprints on the walls, with a couple of lovely Romneys and Gainsborough's famous "Blue Boy," give the final interesting touch to a very attractive ensemble.

COOLIDGE URGES EXTENSION OF NAVAL TREATY

Would Apply 5-5-3 Ratio To All Classes of War Vessels.

MESSAGE TO POWERS.

Ratios For France and Italy To Be Settled at Conference, He Proposes.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10 (Canadian Press).—President Coolidge has suggested to the powers that they empower their delegates to the Geneva Preparatory Commission for Disarmament "to negotiate and conclude at an early date an agreement further limiting naval armament."

The suggestion was announced to the world to-day by President Coolidge in a special message to Congress.

The proposal is that an agreement be made supplementing the naval limitation treaty of Washington "and covering classes of vessels not covered by that treaty."

The text of the note to the powers was included in the message to Congress. It said in part:

"Although hesitating at this time to put forward rigid proposals as regards ratios of naval strength to be maintained by the different powers, the American Government, for its part, is disposed to accept, in regard to classes of vessels not covered by the Washington treaty, an extension of the five-five-three ratio as regards the United States, Great Britain, and Japan and to leave to discussion at Geneva the ratios of France and Italy, taking into full account their special conditions and requirements in regard to the types of vessels in question."

"Despite the hope of the United States to complete the work of the Washington treaty and extend the limiting treaties to cover cruisers, destroyers and submarines, the message continued: "Far-reaching building programmes have been laid down by certain powers and there has appeared in our own country, as well as abroad, a sentiment urging naval construction on the ground that such action is taking place elsewhere."

No British Comment.

LONDON, Feb. 10 (Canadian Press).—President Coolidge's suggestion that delegates to the preparatory disarmament commission be empowered to negotiate an agreement for the further limitation of naval armaments was delivered to the British Foreign Office to-day by United States Ambassador Alanson Houghton. Officials declined to comment before studying the documents.

New books and pamphlets arriving at the British Museum library amount to 40,000 a year. The library has to preserve copies of all books printed in the United Kingdom.

DIED TO-DAY.

Hon. J. K. FLEMING, M.P., LL.D.
Member of the Federal House for Carleton-Victoria, and former Premier of New Brunswick, who died today.

J. K. FLEMING PASSES AWAY

Federal Member For Carleton, Victoria, Dies After Long Illness.

FORMER PREMIER.

WOODSTOCK, N.B., Feb. 10 (Canadian Press).—Hon. J. K. Fleming, M.P. for Carleton-Victoria and former Premier of New Brunswick, died this afternoon after an illness of several weeks.

Successively a schoolmaster, a travelling salesman, a general storekeeper, and a lumber operator, all within his native province, give James Kidd Fleming the background of knowledge and experience that fitted him to take his place among the legislators of New Brunswick for a period of fourteen years and for three years to be Premier with the overwhelming endorsation of the electors.

Born on April 27, 1868, in the Parish of Richmond, Carleton County, New Brunswick, son of Thomas and Sarah (Kerr) Fleming, the future Premier passed through the common schools and graduated from the Provincial Normal College, after which he became a teacher in the Public Schools. This occupation held his interest several years when he gave it up to become a travelling salesman for a firm of wholesale grocers in St. John. In that capacity he travelled over the province, taking full advantage of the full opportunities offered him to study the potentialities of New Brunswick. He saw the possibilities of the lumber business but, without experience, hesitated to enter it hastily. Instead he opened up a grocery and farm produce business in Woodstock, in partnership with his brother, Thomas. In 1895 he dissolved this partnership and removed to Peel where he opened a general store and began his first tentative adventures in the lumber business as a side-line.

Meeting with instant encouragement Mr. Fleming shortly moved to Hartland, where he operated a saw mill. His lumber operations grew steadily from that time on, until he finally developed the extensive industry which gave rise and prosperity to the Village of Juniper.

BIG SISTERHOOD NEEDS SUPPLIES

Room in City Buildings Almost Empty Following Heavy Demand.

CLOTHING WANTED.

The Big Sisters are sending out an "S.O.S." call for more supplies. Their room in the City Buildings is depleted of most of its supplies, after several big days when demands were numerous. And the empty room is confronted by many more wants, which should be met at once, if possible. There is urgent need of boys' and girls' clothing, of school age, and of infants' wear, because several small new citizens of the city have very little in the way of apparel at the present moment, and the weather is not propitious for such scanty attire.

If the good people of the city would ransack clothes' closets and sundry corners for anything at all in the way of children's clothing, from the skin out, and the toes up, so that the room may not be empty when calls are made by those who are in need, the Big Sisters would be grateful.

FREIGHT RATES INVESTIGATION CAUSES FURORE

Counsel For C.P.R. Crosses Swords With Opponent From B. C.

OCEAN TONNAGE.

Says C.P.R. Only Too Glad To Increase Traffic To Coast.

OTTAWA, Feb. 10 (Canadian Press).—Proceedings warmed up at yesterday afternoon's session of the freight rates' investigation when Counsel Flintoff of the C.P.R. crossed swords when Counsel "Gerry" McGeer for the province of British Columbia.

Mr. McGeer has persistently and consistently maintained throughout the investigation that the policy of the railway had not been to the best interests of the Pacific province, that the facilities given by the railway had not kept pace with the growing volume of westbound traffic, particularly of grain, and that discriminating rates were in force—rates which were not justified by the cost of operation and maintenance as shown by the company's own figures. The effect of this, argued the learned counsel, was to retard the development of Vancouver which he contended was in line with the alleged policy of the railway to prevent business going to the Panama Canal.

Immediately Mr. Flintoff was on his feet in somewhat angry retort—"I wish to submit to the Board, that what my learned friend is asserting is the most arrant nonsense. Does he pretend to believe and to ask your Honors to believe that with the millions which this company has invested in Vancouver my clients are pursuing a policy so suicidal in its tendency and in its inevitable result. We will be only too glad to encourage every possible increase in the Western traffic to the coast."

"The fact is," continued the counsel, "that our line has never had all the business it could handle in the Westbound grain traffice for the sufficient reason that we cannot get adequate ocean tonnage to keep the port cleared, and that was the rea-

Man Yawns So Hard He Dislocates Jaw

DETROIT, Feb. 10. — A young man walked into the emergency room of the Receiving Hospital Tuesday night and stood waiting for some minutes until a nurse stepped forward and asked him what he wanted.

Instead of replying, the man presented a note which read: "I'm not sick. I came here for treatment for my jaw. I yawned a while ago and dislocated it."

The injured jaw was treated. "Thank you," said the man.

He gave his name as Robert Craig, 22 years old, and his address as 43 High Street East.

DEATH SENTENCE IMPOSED AGAIN

McCoskey To Hang April 21 For Killing Prison Guard.

SUPREME COURT.

KINGSTON, Feb. 10 (Canadian Press).—Convict Thomas McCoskey was sentenced to be hanged on April 21, by Judge Lennox in the Supreme Court here today, for the murder of Guard M. E. Jenkins of Portsmouth Penitentiary on August 28 last. This was the second time McCoskey received the death sentence, the previous trial being thrown out by the Appellate Court and a new trial ordered.

Judge Lennox also imposed a sentence of eighteen months on Albert Vanorder, found guilty yesterday of a serious offence, and ordered that he also receive four lashes on three occasions during his imprisonment. Vanorder had previously been given six years in County Court on another charge. But a new trial was ordered by the Attorney General's department on the ground that the trial judge had no jurisdiction to try the case.

APPROACH TO PATRONAGE RANEY FEARS

Bill To Amend Mining Act of Ontario Arouses His Objection.

BAD PRECEDENT.

Thinks It Would Be Better For Minister To Name Judge.

TORONTO, Feb. 10 (Canadian Press).—No representations whatever have been made by representatives of the hotelkeepers of the Province to the Ontario Government regarding the sale of beer in hotels since the Provincial election of December 1, Premier Howard Ferguson stated in the Ontario Legislature yesterday afternoon in reply to a question by J. W. Widdifield (Progressive, Ontario North).

The business of the Legislature was particularly brief, being confined chiefly to answers to questions by members and the passage of a bill to amend the Wolf Bounty Act of 1924 and a bill to amend the Mining Act of Ontario through committee of the House.

W. E. Raney, Progressive leader, took objection to a section in the latter bill which provided that in case of illness or absence of the judge of the Mining Court, the Minister may appoint some person to act in the place of the judge, or may himself discharge the duties of the judge, and the person appointed or the Minister, shall in that case have and may exercise all the power of the judge except those which he derives exclusively from his appointment.

Mr. Raney thought that this was establishing a bad precedent and might open a new approach to patronage. He was of the opinion that it would be better for the Minister to name a judge.

Hon. Charles McCrea, Minister of Mines, said he believed the proposal would work out satisfactorily. The sole purpose of the section was to avoid unnecessary delay, and if the interim appointment were confined to a district judge the request for his services might conflict with his judicial engagements.

Soviet Firms Withdraw Accounts From Britain

LONDON, Feb. 10—It is believed that all soviet associations established in Great Britain to develop trade with Russia have withdrawn their funds from British banks and sent them to the United States, Holland and Germany, owing to the fear of impending British measures of a strong character against the union of soviet republics.

The sum is reported to be £1,500,000.

No confirmation of this report can be obtained at the present, but the Manchester Guardian gives prominence to it to-day.

Translation of Inscriptions May Throw Light on Origin of Armenians.

ANCIENT CIVILIZATION.

ERVIN, Soviet Armenia, Feb. 10. Canadian Press. — Chiseled on the mountainside along the shores of Lake Sevan in Southern Armenia, have been found many hitherto unknown hieroglyphic inscriptions ante-dating the birth of Christ by several thousand years.

They are believed to mark a civilization in Armenia contemporaneous with that which existed in Egypt, Persia, Assyria and Babylon.

It is believed that their decipherment may throw new light on the real origin of the Armenian race, which up to the present has been more or less obscure.

British Forces Continue Advance Despite Protests

Both Peking and Nationalist Governments Claim That the Announced Purpose of Protection of British Lives In Unnecessary.

NO AGREEMENT WILL BE SIGNED IF ARMED FORCES ARE LANDED

Chen and O'Malley Resume Relations Broken Off Several Days Ago Indicating Prospect of Peaceful Settlement.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 10 (Canadian Press) — British troops and British warships continued their progress yesterday toward Shanghai for the announced purpose of protecting British lives. They proceeded despite the protests of both the Peking and Nationalist governments that such protection was unnecessary and the further declaration by the Nationalist government that it would sign no agreement with Great Britain preliminary to a treaty if armed forces were landed at Shanghai.

Two regiments of British troops from Gloucestershire and Durham departed from Hong Kong toward Shanghai, continuing their voyage from England. They will form part of the force of more than 16,000 soldiers and numerous warships that Great Britain has ordered assembled at or near Shanghai as a result of Chinese hostility.

From Hankow, however, came news of developments more favorable to peaceable settlement of the British - Chinese controversy. Eugene Chen, Nationalist foreign minister, it was said, resumed conversations Monday with Owen O'Malley, British charge d' Affaires, which were broken off several days ago when Chen refused to sign an agreement until assurances were given that British armed men would not be landed in Shanghai.

This agreement would have provided for the future administration of the British concessions at Hankow and Kiukiang, which the Nationalist government took over after mobs of coolies fired by radical speeches had forced British resident to evacuate their districts and large numbers of them to go to Shanghai and elsewhere for safety.

In resuming their conversations Chen and O'Malley discussed the effect upon the agreement of the landing of British troops in Shanghai.

Although there have been strong intimations that part of the British force would be deflected to Hong Kong or other ports unless the situation at Shanghai becomes acute no word officially has come of such intention.

Little news has percolated from Chekiang Province, where the National forces are engaged in combat with the troops of Marshal Sun Chuan-Fang.

Proceed to Shanghai

LONDON, Feb. 10—British warships are already on their way to Shanghai—this despite the fact that the Cantonese foreign minister, Eugene Chen, had offered strenuous objections to continuing negotiations with the British charge, Owen O'Malley, at Hankow, if the British Government's announced policy of despatching troops to Shanghai was carried out.

Premier Baldwin in the House of Commons Tuesday gave assurances that the British ships would not proceed to Shanghai unless an emergency arose, or unless the British representatives there advised their presence. Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer, in the house yesterday explained that the movement of the British troops from Hong Kong to Shanghai was in accordance with the advice of the Government's representatives in China. The responsibility of the troops, if they are landed, will be limited to the protection of the lives of British Nationals.

Thus the British public has received new evidence of the rapidity with which the complex Chinese situation changes, with this movement of the advance guard of the defence force. Whether the troops have been hurried north because of new threats to British interests remains obscure. The foreign office professed ignorance of any sensational developments in Shanghai.

Parliament continued its discussion of the problem. The Earl of Balfour, speaking in the House of Lords, exhaustively surveyed Chinese affairs since the Washington conference and contended that the British policy was in full accord with the letter and spirit of the covenant of the League of Nations.

In the Commons, in addition to explaining the reason for despatching warships to Shanghai, Mr. Churchill made a sharp reply to the government's critics by emphasizing the Bolshevi influence in China.

Ford Car and Tabloid Given As Crime Causes

NEW YORK, Feb. 10. — The tabloid newspaper and the Ford automobile are blamed for the increase of crime among the youths by Geo. W. Alger, who was appointed special commissioner by Governor Alfred Smith to investigate the prison system. Speaking at a luncheon of the Women's City Club yesterday, he said modern youth is incited to crime by pictures and stories of criminal bravado in the little newspapers, and as a result the average age of criminals has been steadily decreasing.

The Ford automobile, he contend, made the "quick get-away" possible for youths anxious to enter on a career of crime, with the result that robery has increased 100 per cent. during the last year.

HUNDREDS REPORTED KILLED IN BATTLE FOR CHINANDEGA

Rebels Who Held City Are Said To Be Fleeing.

MINISTER RECALLED.

Washington Disapproves of American Airmen Serving With Foreigners.

MANAGUA, Nic., Feb. 10.—(United Press.)— After a terrific battle in which hundreds were reported killed or wounded, Conservative government forces again controlled Chinandega yesterday.

The rebels who had held the city were reported by the American aviators Mason and Brooks, who flew over the scene of the carnage, to be fleeing towards the mountains, with government cavalry in close pursuit. One report here said the dead on both sides might reach as high as 150 each and the total of wounded 500.

Chinandega fell Sunday afternoon when the Conservatives stormed the city.

Watch Guatemala.

Meanwhile, disturbing reports reached the capital of the Diaz Conservative government. Jose Esteban, Conservative minister to Nicaragua, left here precipitately yesterday and it was reported Guatemala either would declare war or sever relations.

A rumor from the frontier of Honduras said a revolution may break out there momentarily.

News received here to-day of the latest battle in Chinandega showed that it was the most sanguinary struggle of the revolution. Dead littered the streets of the half-burned city. It was difficult to identify the dead owing to the mutilated condition of the bodies. It was known many important citizens killed, however, including Ricardo Lopez Callejas, minister of the Diaz government in Chinandega. His house was burned.

PORTUGUESE EMBASSY ISSUES STATEMENT ON INSURRECTION

Claim Lisbon Outbreak Was Dealt With By Loyal Troops.

BREAKS SILENCE.

Declare Uprising Was Organized By Politicians Involved in Former Revolt.

LONDON, Feb. 10 (Canadian Press).—Official silence on the situation in Portugal was broken yesterday by the Portuguese Embassy, which issued a statement representing that the Oporto insurrection had been put down and that the Lisbon outbreak was being dealt with by loyal troops. No direct independent news from Lisbon, however, reached London all day, while Madrid reported that it also was without definite news.

Declaring that the uprising at Oporto had been organized by politicians who were involved in the revolt of May, 1926, the Embassy communique declared loyal troops suppressed the Oporto revolt on Monday.

With regard to the Lisbon outbreak, the Embassy asserts that it is confined to a few sailors, three companies of Republican guards and a few civilians. The naval arsenal is in the hands of the insurgents, but is under attack by Government troops. Otherwise, it is declared, the country is quiet.

Spain has sent troops to watch the frontiers in co-operation with the Portuguese Government and is also sending some naval craft to Portuguese waters.

News despatches from Spanish sources report that about 60 were killed and several hundred wounded in the fighting at Oporto. A rumor from Madrid reached here by way of Paris that the Portuguese President, General Carmona, was under arrest, but this is not confirmed. General Carmona, it is known, took part in the engagements at Oporto, but he may have returned to Lisbon.

Soviet Returns To Chaliapin Part Of His Seized Estate

MOSCOW, Feb. 10 (Associated Press)—Departing from its principle of nationalization, the Soviet government has restored to Feodor Chaliapin, noted singer, part of his 800-acre estate in the Province of Yaroslavl, expecting that he will return to Russia soon.

The estate, confiscated after the revolution, will be occupied for the present by Chaliapin's wife and family, who are living in a flat in Moscow. Members of the family said they expected Chaliapin to play the leading role in the opera "Boris Godunoff" next October on the occasion of the tenth anniversary of the revolution.

Chaliapin is now in the United States. He is scheduled to sing in New York this week.

CAMPBELLFORD INVITES MINISTER M'ARTHUR PROFFERS HIS HELP

Plans Expanding For Meeting With Minister of Highways.

THE FIRST STEPS.

Generally Felt That Peterborough Should Support Hastings-Campbellford Route.

(Special Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 10. — "I'll be glad to do everything in my power to help Campbellford get the Peterborough-Belleville highway," said Fred J. McArthur of Cobourg to The Examiner yesterday, in reference to his letter which was read at Monday night's Council meeting here volunteering his assistance in whatever representations are made to the Minister of Highways.

Mr. McArthur was preparing to leave for Toronto to consult his lawyer about his suit for $25,000 damages against Dr. W. G. Robertson of Colborne, the second action that grew out of the provincial campaign in which Dr. Robertson was elected.

Mr. McArthur's letter stated a fact which connoted tacitly, and perhaps unintentionally, a mild and indirect criticism of the riding's decision at the polls on December 1st last. He pointed out Marmora's claim for the highway will have the powerful backing of Hon. J. R. Cooke who, it is realized, will have a strong influence, while Campbellford and Hastings are not represented in the Government.

However, Mr. McArthur observed that this condition called for all the greater effort, and offered to co-operate as fully as possible in demonstrating to the Hon. Mr. Henry the natural advantages of the local course. On Councillor Stone's motion, seconded by Reeve Bygott the Clerk was instructed to convey to Mr. McArthur the thanks of the Council for interesting himself in the claim of the Northumberland towns.

Seeking Friends

On the suggestion that membership in the Good Roads Association might prove an asset in the campaign for the Highway, the Council decided to forward the fee of $15 on the motion of Councillor O'Sullivan, seconded by Deputy-Reeve Davidson. And finally the Minister is being formally invited to visit Campbellford at the town's expense to go over the alternative routes between Peterborough and Belleville.

Meanwhile Stirling's expressed preference for the local course has brought a little encouragement from the Hastings County section, and when men discuss the project here they ask whether the City of Peterborough will take an active part in the developing controversy. It is generally felt here that Peterborough should support the Hastings—Campbellford route, because it is more direct and shorter to Belleville. The north-western city's aid would be appreciated as also would be the help of W. H. Bradburn, M.P.P., as an ally and advocate of Peterborough's wishes.

Getting Under Way

Many citizens are keen for the highway, and it is expected that Reeve Bygott and Deputy-Reeve Davidson who have been entrusted with details of local arrangements will prepare an impressive appeal to the Minister. They are assured of the help of Warden Elliott and the Counties Council: Mr. McArthur has also already been to Toronto with the Counties' deputation; Hastings will likely fall in line, and Walter Fowlds as President of the Trent Waterways Development Association may be able to contribute additional weight to the petition.

The fanning of enthusiasm for the highway is well under way, and it is hoped Hon. Mr. Henry will be convinced by the claims which will be presented to him.

CAMPBELFORD'S REEVE.

MAJOR J. M. BYGOTT,
C. N. R. agent at Campbellford, and former member of the Board of Education who was elected Reeve in the January contest with C. W. Palliser. Reeve Bygott is particularly interested in the representations to be made to the Hon. G. S. Henry, Minister of Highways, for the routing of the proposed Peterboro-Belleville highway through Hastings and Campbellford, instead of by way of Marmora. Major Bygott is the commanding officer of the Campbellford Company of the Northumberland regiment, and was mentioned in despatches in his overseas service.

AGRICULTURAL CLASS SUCCESS

Many Young People Taking Advantage of Course at Lakefield.

LAKEFIELD NEWS.

LAKEFIELD, Feb. 10.—The agricultural classes under the direction of Mr. F. C. McCrea, of Norwood, are very successful. The boys' class is held in the Council Chamber and numbers nine or ten, and there is a prospect of a larger number this week. The girls' classes number nearly forty, and are held in the school room of Knox Church.

Card Party and Dance.

The Holy Name Society of St. Paul's Church held a very successful card party and dance in the Hotel Lakefield on Friday evening. The attendance was large and a neat sum was added to the treasury as a result. Those who were present had the pleasure of a delightful evening's entertainment. Cards were played by those who prefer a quiet game to the more strenuous activities of the dancing floor. Excellent music and a splendid floor kept the lovers of the art of Terpsichore engaged till early morning. Supper was served about 11.30 by a committee of ladies, who assisted the Men's Committee to make the evening the success it assuredly was.

News Briefs.

In spite of the bad walking on Thursday night last, there was a good attendance at the card party held under the auspices of the A.Y.P.A. Prizes were won by Mrs. J. Charlton and Mr. C. F. Webster, and the consolation prizes by Mrs. C. F. Webster and Mr. M. C. Hampton.

Mrs. M. F. Sanderson has sold her farm to Mr. John Murphy, of Lakefield, and Mrs. Sanderson and Miss Margaret Sanderson have removed their home to the corner of Nelson and Caroline streets.

A large number of hockey fans attended the Peterborough-Lakefield junior game on Tuesday night at Brock street rink.

The boys of Katchawanoonkaw Square, Tuxis group, took charge of the services in the Regent Street Church on Sunday evening last. This is the second annual service taken by the boys in this manner.

The ice harvest is in full swing, and Messrs. W. J. Webster and sons are engaged with their men in gathering it in. Ice houses are being filled rapidly.

Birthday Celebration.

Mrs. Peter Baptie celebrated her eighty-fifth birthday on Wednesday, Feb. 2, and while no birthday party was held, owing to recent bereavement, Mrs. Baptie received many callers in the afternoon and evening, friends who rejoiced to see her in such good health, and who extended good wishes for further birthdays. It was a family party which gathered at Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Sutton's home to spend the day together. Mrs. Baptie's four daughters were gathered there—Mrs. Sillens, of Hamilton; Mrs. Bowen and Mrs. Stephenson, of Toronto, and Mrs. Sutton, of Lakefield. Mrs. Baptie's sister, Mrs. James Baptie, and her nieces, Mrs. J. J. Turner and Mrs. James Vincent, of Peterborough, and her granddaughter, Miss Isabel Sutton, who is attending Normal School in Toronto, gathered with the family to honor the happy event.

Mrs. Baptie was surrounded by beautiful flowers from friends who by this means expressed their regard. Old friends and new friends called to add their quota to the greetings and loving wishes.

Golden Wedding.

In connection with the golden wedding of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Moore the following address was presented by the Session of United (Presbyterian) Church, which they have attended since their marriage, being faithful and devoted members:

"Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Moore.

"Dear Sir and Madam,—I am requested by the Session of our church to present to you congratulations on this, the fiftieth anniversary of your marriage.

"We trust that you will long be spared to each other, to your family, to our church where you have long been faithful members, and to the community where for so many years you have shared in efforts for common good.

"We pray that the passing years, though they take from you youth and vigor, will find increasing enrichment in all these things that belong to the kingdom of our Master.

"Signed, T. M. Wesley, Moderator of Session, United (Presbyterian) Church. Lakefield, Ontario, January 24, 1927."

This address was inadvertantly omitted from the previously published account of the golden wedding celebration.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THE MOUNTAIN ASH

I see you on a city lawn,
Where thousands pass and never see.
Blood-red your berries in the dawn,
And green your leaves as green can be.
Nor all the city's revelry
Nor all the city's want and sin
Can change the purpose of a tree
Given a spot to blossom in.

And we, who scheme, and lose, and win,
The mountain lads, ambition-led,
Become as noisy as the din,
Hard as the pavements that we tread;
The ash's berries still are red,
Its leaves are just as green as then,
But thick the city's dust is spread
Today upon transplanted men.

A Daniel in the lions' den,
One childhood friend the wanderer has.
Old days, old loves, come back again,
A mountain mother, mountain lass,
When I behold you, green as grass,
With something sweet my bosom thrills.
Each day the thoughtless thousands pass,
But I have seen you on my hills.

OLD MASTERS

One more unfortunate
Weary of breath,
Rashly importunate,
Gone to her death!
Take her up tenderly,
Lift her with care:
Fashioned so slenderly,
Young, and so fair!

Touch her not scornfully,
Think of her mournfully,
Gently and humanly:
Not of the stains of her—
All that remains of her
Now is pure womanly,

Alas! for the rarity
Of Christian charity
Under the sun!
Oh! it was pitiful!
Near a whole city full,
Home she had none!

Texas Legislature Expels Two Members Who Were Accused Of Accepting Bribes

AUSTIN, Texas, Feb. 10.—Representatives F. A. Dale of Bonham and H. R. Moore of Cooper were expelled from the Legislature yesterday by the almost unanimous vote of the House.

The men were arrested a few day ago by Captains Frank Hamer and Tom Hickman of the State Rangers on the charge of accepting a bribe from W. W. Chamberlin of Houston, legislative representative of the State Optometrist Association. With the connivance of Speaker R. L. Bobbit of the House, Ranger officers and others, a trap was laid for Dale and Moore. A bundle of $1,000 in marked bills was passed into the hands of Dale, who was arrested immediately thereafter. Moore's arrest quickly followed.

According to the testimony, Dale and Moore had promised to kill a bill introduced by Moore, taxing optometrists, which was pending before the House Committee on Revenue and Taxation.

Testimony was taken by a separate committee of the Legislature, which recommended that Dale and Moore be expelled.

Argument on the committee's report to the House lasted two days. The vote for Dale's expulsion was 133 to 4 nays, and on Moore's expulsion 119 to 15 nays.

It is the first time a member of the Texas Legislature was ever charged with, or expelled for, accepting a bribe. The Grand Jury, which is now in session, is investigating the bribery charges against the two men.

The onus of proof of inefficiency, said the Commissioner, rested on counsel and it was only wasting time to advance theories against the expert testimony before the Board.

Caucasus Wolves Bombed From Airplane, Hungry Packs Invade Towns, Killing Peasants

GENEVA, Feb. 10 (AP)—Wolves in the Caucasus have become so numerous that the military authorities there sent an airplane to the infested districts, where poison gas bombs were dropped on packs, killing 200 of the invaders, say reports received by the League of Nations.

Wolves are becoming a menace to the lives of peasants in remote regions of Russia, Poland and some other countries of East Central Europe, the reports say. Ferocious from hunger, these beasts, which have multiplied surprisingly, are reported as frequently making attacks on villages, and in some cases have killed and devoured helpless peasants.

Austria reports that one farmer kept twelve wolves at bay with an axe, wounding them all with powerful swinging blows, and that he was finally rescued by villagers, who saved his life by quick bandaging of bleeding arms and legs.

In the district of Vilna, Poland, packs of wolves, maddened by cold and hunger, descended on the town of Ostrovsk and boldly attacked the inhabitants who, during several hours, were obliged to put up an organized defence with rifle and shotgun before the savage enemy retired. Poland is reported to have moblized several regiments to carry on an offensive against wolves.

From Russia comes even more terrifying stories. In the rural region wolves by hundreds attack villages and even boldly enter the smaller cities in broad daylight. At Verchofourye five peasants were slain by the beasts before the packs were driven off.

At Orenburg three packs entered the town from different points, throwing the population into a panic and forcing all to barricade themselves in their houses, from which they launched a steady fire finally killing all the wolves, which tenaciously refused to abandon their attack.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10 (By the United Press).—Henry Ford's personality and genius comprised a $25,000,000 asset to his company in 1913, Paul Clay, expert on security valuations and investments, estimatde yesterday.

In an interview, Clay, who is vice-president of Moody's Investment Service, said Ford's value had materially decreased in recent years.

Ford's depreciation as an intangible asset is due to his spreading out in other lines instead of concentrating on automobile work, Moody believes. Prosperity, too, has injured the Ford Company instead of helping it, according to the economist. He pointed out that people could now afford to purchase more expensive automobiles—and did buy them.

"The Ford Motor Co. today is worth about $950,000,000," Clay estimated. "I would put that valuation $250,000,000 higher if it were not for the fact that in recent years the company has been overloaded with physical property, or what economists call tangibles.

Offers Diagnosis

"It is all wrong to think that low priced car competition is what ailed the Ford company last year. The real cause is that the company has gone into too many things.

"You can apply genius of management to one business, but when one management goes into railways, steel plants, glass factories, mines, cement plants, paper mills and others, the operation genius gets lost in the mix-up.

"Absolute proof is not available, but I believe the company would be better off if Ford had stuck to his own business. Doubtless these properties are all right, but certainly they will never earn the return that a same investment in good old Ford Model T would bring in."

Clay said he believed Ford now turned out 2,000,000 cars and trucks annually. He placed the profit on each car and truck at about $60, giving the Ford company an annual earning of about $120,000,000.

"Now supposing Ford owns about 50 per cent of the value represented by his company and has accumulated some outside investments, his indicated wealth could be somewhere around $600,000,000," Clay said.

No Need to Worry

When asked about Norval Hawkins' estimate that Ford was worth from $1,500,000,000 to $2,000,000,000 Clay said his own estimate was very conservative, but that it must be taken into consideration Hawkins is a promoter and was formerly sales manager for Ford.

"Ford need not worry about last years decline in sales," Clay continued. "It was not low priced car competition but rather that every other medium-priced car cut into the sale of Fords.

"People earned so much they could buy better cars and they did it. Less prosperity might even mean bigger sales of Fords.

"But it is the other companies and not Ford who need to do the worrying. Ford is a genius, and you can be sure he can come back.

"No one can ever compete with his low cost of production and he has plenty of profit margin to make any such changes as needed to meet the public taste and requirements."

Clay, who is a witness in the Government's $36,000,000 tax assessment case against Senator James Couzens, and others who sold Ford the minority stock in his company in 1919, has just completed a thorough study of the Ford company since it was organized in 1903. Clay spent 15 months going over the history and records of the company.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASSES PLAY

Boys From Petherick's Corners Lose To Hoard's at Hockey.

SCORE 3-1.

PETHERICK'S CORNERS, Feb. 10.—The boys of Mr. Fred Barnum's Sunday school class visited Hoards on Saturday evening and played a very interesting game of hockey with the boys of Mr. Frank Heagle's class.

The boys from the north suffered from lack of practice and had never before played together so that combination play was out of the question. The Hoards' boys showed more finish but were very weak around the nets on several occasions. They had more experience and weight than their opponents and ran up a 2 to 0 score in the first frame. Each scored in the second period while the final 15 minutes was scoreless, the final tally being 3 to 1. The Petherick's boys think the score should have been closer as at least one of the goals scored went behind the post to hit the net as the frame was not anchored in the ice.

Phelan and Oddie were the best for Hoards with Parks and Rannie forming a strong defence. Ted Owens and Roy Barnum looked best for the Pethericks team while Grant Kerr and Roy Southworth showed promise of better play in the future. Alf Simpson, in goal, was practicallly unbeatable, and only the hardest kind of luck made the score as large as it was. A good crowd from this district attended the game and everyone enjoyed the evening's fun in spite of the cold.

The teams:

Petherick's—Goal, Alf Simpson; defence, Ted Owens and Roy Barnum; centre, Don Watson; wings, M. McKenzie and Doug. Ingram; subs, G. Petherick, Roy Southworth, Grant Kerr.

Hoards—Goal, Art Baker; defence, Oscar Rannie and Reg. Parks; centre, Ian Whelan; wings, Albert Jones and Max Remington; sub, Ken Oddie.

Referee—Rev. Charles Daniel.

ARTISTS' LOVE

By F. H. B. Bailieboro.

Paul Coleman was the only son of George Coleman, a merchant in the village of Willowdale. Paul was a sturdy, good-natured chap of eighteen summers and commonly known to the villagers as shiftless Paul, inheriting this title from his careless, shiftless way of living.

His father, although a village storekeeper, had accumulated a considerable fortune, partly through his ability as a business man and partly by both he and his wife living carefully and taking care not to squander their hard-earned dollars.

So their only child, Paul, grew up with an ambition also, but, unlike his parents, his ambition was to dodge all the work possible. Work and Paul never did agree, and he loved best of all to idle away his time reading books or sketching faces with his paints, as well as other idle amusements that suited his fancy. Being an only child his parents had always been too partial with him and did not like to force him to go to work.

He had, however, attended a Collegiate Institute in a neighboring town for four years, very much against his will, and although he made no success of his studies he did, however, spend a great deal of time in painting the faces of the various teachers and scholars. He could watch a face for a few moments and then keep it in mind while he took his paint brush, and with wonderful skill and dexterity outline in a brief space of time a wonderful resemblance.

One day, after Paul had been out of school for a couple of years, doing practically nothing, he was driving his father in his car on a business trip to a neighboring town, when he chanced to see a very beautiful young lady getting out of a luxurious sedan in front of a fashionable departmental store. It chanced that she was the daughter of the owner of the store, and Paul watched her closely as she came towards his car, which was parked ahead of the sedan, never taking his eyes off that perfect face until the girl had disappeared within the store. The appearance of this beautiful face had at last awakened something within the heart and mind of idle Paul. There was something about that face he could not forget. Upon reaching home he at once set to work to paint this face that had so awakened his interests he worked hard and carefully at his picture, and when it was completed even Paul realized that it was something past the ordinary.

After that Paul was never contented, that wonderful face was always in his mind. Not long after this he made known his intentions to his parents, that he was going to enter the studio of some artist to learn to paint faces more perfectly. His father, overjoyed by his son's ambition, placed him with one of the best masters obtainable, and ere long he became a famous artist.

The picture of this beautiful face had been an inspiration to him throughout his schooling, had been a help to him to go on and reach the top of the ladder.

After Paul had become famous by his art, he sought and won the girl whose beauty had been his inspiration and guide, and it was thus that Paul Coleman through the great beauty of a girl's face became one of the most famous artists of his day.

W. I. MEETING

February Meeting Held on Wednesday at Mount Pleasant.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Feb. 10.—The Mount Pleasant branch of East Durham's Women's Institute held its February meeting at the home of the President, Mrs. Ira Lowe, on Wednesday, Feb. 2. The weather was favorable and a good attendance of members and visiting ladies were present.

The meeting opened with the singing of the Institute Ode, followed by repeating the Lord's Prayer in unison.

In the absence of the Secretary, Mrs. Garnet Shields, and the Assistant Secretary, Mrs. Norman Fee, was appointed Secretary for the meeting. The usual routine of business followed. It was decided to hold a joint meeting in the summer, usually in May, when the summer delegates from the department will address the meeting. There will also be some other speakers from the department who will speak in the interests of the gentlemen. The meeting will be held in the evening in place of the afternoon as is the usual custom.

It was also decided to remember the sick and shut-ins in our community with funds or flowers.

A request from Bonar Presbyterian Church, Toronto, was read, and on motion it was decided to send any discarded clothing which would be of need to children or any garment which could be made over. Anyone wishing to help in this worthy cause are asked to leave their bundles at Mrs. C. Morden's home by Tuesday, 8th February, where they will be packed and sent to Toronto.

After the business part of the meeting an interesting programme followed. Mrs. C. Morden and Mrs. Joshua Eggleston were responsible.

A debate, "Resolved, that the slovenly good-natured housewife is more to be preferred than the tidy crank," under the leadership of Mrs. Morden, was given and proved to be a real entertainment for the members. Each in their turn used convincing arguments. Upholding the affirmative were Mrs. Norman Fee, Mrs. George Jamieson, Mrs. Richard Graham and Mrs. James Sisson (who was unable to be present, but sent her paper). Negative: Mrs. M. Jones, Mrs. Henry Lowes, Mrs. John Handley and Mrs. Ira Lowe. The judges: Mrs. Alex. Tully, Mrs. Joshua Eggleston and Miss Finley, after careful consideration announced the negative side as the winners.

Two papers were prepared by Mrs. Morden and Mrs. Eggleston, but owing to the late hour, they thought it advisable to leave them over till the March meeting.

A collection was taken, and the meeting brought to a close with God Save the King, after which the hostess, assisted by the Lunch Committee, Mrs. Norman Fee and Mrs. Melville Jones, served refreshments.

Those present were: Mrs. Stephen Paragreen, Miss Dorothy Paragreen, Mrs. Richard Graham, Mrs. George Jamieson, Mrs. W. E. Finley and daughter, Zella, Mrs. Melville Jones, Mrs. Henry Lowes, Mrs Rosenburg, Mrs. Harry Bland and Aileen, Mrs. C. Morden, Mrs. Alex. Tully, Mrs. John Handley, Miss Lena Finley, Mrs. Norman Fee and Murray, and Mrs. Robert Ruth.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. John Handley, March 2, with Mrs. Chester Best and Mrs. Henry Lowes responsible for the programme, and Mrs. Thos. Graham and Mrs. Bland as Lunch Committee.

This year, for the first time in seven seasons, Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Cardinal failed to win the National League batting championship

AUSTRALIAN PARLIAMENT HOUSE

Australia's new capital. Canberra, the new capital, so named by Lady Denman, has been sufficiently advanced in construction for occupation, and the seat of government the Australian Commonwealth is being removed from Melbourne to the new city, the parliament buildings being shown ABOVE in a view taken last april. Inset is a portrait o. Hon. Mrs. Ronald Greville, who left for Australia at the same time as the Duke and Duchess of York. She is a close friend of the royal family, and was the guest of Prime Minister Stanley Bruce just before he left for home. Rumors that one of the royal princes may be appointed governor-general are associated with Hon. Mr. Greville's visit this time.

"THAT'S A BEAUTY"

By W. J. C., Marmora.

When the American tourist lands a ten-pound maskinonge at Crowe Lake, the ejaculation invariably is "That's a beauty." When the local dog fancier inspects the bull-dog which carries off first at the Peterborough Dog Show, he turns to his neighbor and excitedly remarks, "That's a beauty." When the up-to-date city girl condescends to tour the Provinces for the while, the observant villager halts in his daily round to exclaim, "My, that's a beauty." When the humble tradesman goes a rung higher in the ladder of prosperity, somebody will unrestrainedly say, as they see the elegant new car that has replaced the time-worn Ford, "Well, that's a beauty."

From the foregoing remarks, it is to be gathered that all kinds of animate and inanimate creation around us, in the eyes of someone or other, partake of the beautiful. Stranger still is the fact that what looks beautiful to one pair of eyes may appear to be distinctly unsightly to another. The word, "beautiful," travels a long way in our English vocabulary. It is used to indicate enlargement. The fatted calf is ready for the market when it has reached a beautiful size.

The word denotes perfection as, for instance, when someone is accused of having told a beautiful lie. But as to the beautiful goal in hockey, which every team gets in the course of the season (unless reporters are mistaken), it is hard to tell as to whether perfection or prettiness is implied thereby.

In the songs of this continent we have been directed in thought to the beauties of Kentucky and Tennessee, and one writer went so far as to say that "Everything is peaches down in Georgia." Maybe it is all that without any exaggeration whatever; but turn the focus onto your own Ontario with its natural glories and human geniuses and sternest critics are bound to agree with you as you say of her, "She's a beauty."

Laxatives bring on laxative habit said most physicians

WE asked leading doctors everywhere why they recommended the Nujol type of treatment to their patients. They gave us 16 reasons, the chief one being: "Because it is non-habit forming."

One doctor said the big trouble with ordinary laxatives is you have to keep on using them. They are violent in their action, straining vital organs, forcing the intestines to act abnormally. Eventually the bowels refuse to act without them.

Doctors Advise Nujol

Nine doctors out of every ten told us they were advising the Nujol type of treatment for their patients in place of laxatives—and for these reasons: 1. Nujol is not habit-forming; 2. A more natural method; 3. A lubricant is better than a laxative; 4. Does not gripe; 5. Is not irritating; and 6. Nujol gives lasting relief.

Unlike Laxatives

Laxatives and cathartics act by irritating the intestinal tract. They cause the bowels to frantically expel the contents of the intestines and thus rid the system of the drugs that pills and potions contain.

Nujol acts entirely differently. It contains no drugs, no medicine. Its action is mechanical. It merely softens the dried waste matter in the intestines and lubricates the passage so that the muscles of the bowels can expel the waste matter regularly, naturally and thoroughly.

Nature-given Remedy

Nujol appeals to the medical man because it is a simple, scientific and safe remedy for constipation, no matter how severe the case may be. It is gentle in its action and pleasant to take. Children love it.

Get a bottle of Nujol from your druggist today. Doctors advise it for constipation, whether chronic or temporary. Avoid substitutes.

FISHING PROBLEMS.

Exception to the views of Morris Ackerman and of The Examiner in regard to motor-boat fishing are taken by a well-known local sportsman, who is keenly interested in the question of fish and game preservation.

He points out that so long as the regulations in regard to the extent of the catch are observed it makes little difference whether the maskinonge are caught from a motor-boat or a canoe, and in his opinion the best contribution toward preserving the fishery reserves would be to cut down the limit, allowing fishermen to catch but one 'lunge per day.

If anglers confined their operations to such a limit there would be no objection to power-boat fishing.

The danger is, however, that even the present limit is not lived up to when the fish happen to be biting, and the use of a launch by fishermen who pay no attention to the regulations undoubtedly plays a part in depleting the available supply.

The sportsman in question agrees that the situation in regard to the 'lunge is serious, prophesying that unless there is a betterment in conditions this fine fish will soon be regarded as a curiosity in local waters.

AIMING AT THE BOOTLEGGER.

It is intimated that the new Government Control Act will be more severe in the penalties it will provide for bootlegging than was the Ontario Temperance Act.

Those who supported the Government in the recent campaign because they felt that a system of Government control would prove a more satisfactory method of dealing with the liquor evil would be very much disappointed if the new Act did not indicate a determination to check illegal sales.

Mr. Ferguson will find public opinion behind him in making his safeguards against abuses of the Government control system as strong as possible.

With legal facilities provided for those who want to purchase liquor there will be scant sympathy in any quarter for the illegal salesman.

The bootlegger should be faced by penalties severe enough to make him decide that the game is not worth the candle.

With a strong commission to administer the Act, public sentiment strongly pressing for adequate enforcement and rigid regulations aimed at driving the bootlegger out of business, there is some justification for looking forward to beneficial results from the new system.

TIME TO MAKE A NOISE.

The protest uttered in the House of Commons by E. A. Peck, member for West Peterborough, against a statement from Hon. Chas. Dunning, Minister of Railways and Canals, that the government does not intend to complete the Trent Canal, should be backed up by the visit to Ottawa of an impressive delegation from all parts of the district through which the waterway passes.

Hon. Mr. Dunning declared that the maximum revenue that could be obtained from the canal was already being secured, and that there was no intention of finishing the work.

Apparently the Minister of Railways is not as well informed nor as enthusiastic about the Trent Canal as he is about the Hudson Bay Railway, or he would know that the completion of the waterway—which could be done at a cost small in comparison to what has already been expended—would mean a much greater tourist traffic throughout the Trent system and a consequent benefit to a large section of Ontario.

The municipalities along the canal have been falling down on the jobs other parts of Canada have clamoured so loudly and so persistently that the powers that be have had to listen to them, while the Trent Waterway, a football for many decades and requiring but a comparatively small sum to complete it, has been neglected.

It is time to make a noise at Ottawa.

A STRONG COMMISSION.

The Ontario Government in the commission it has appointed to administer the Government control legislation shortly to be introduced has commenced its task in a manner that will inspire confidence on the part of the public.

Since Premier Ferguson first announced his intention of securing a "strong man" to head the commission he has been made the subject of a good deal of comment, usually unfavourable.

The announcement, however, that the director of the new liquor policy will be D. B. Hanna, formerly President and General Manager of the Canadian National Railways, has enabled the Prime Minister to turn the tables upon his critics.

Mr. Hanna's reputation throughout Canada as an executive of the greatest ability will be sufficient to convince the people of Ontario that the administration of its liquor regulations is in good hands.

He has shown good judgment and determination during his long and successful career in railway work, and in his connection with other large companies, and there is no doubt that he will tackle the responsible duties to which he has been assigned as he has the other big jobs with which he has been connected.

Associated with him as members of the commission are two other appointees whose names have been received with confidence.

Of the ability, integrity and zeal for service of Hon. Dr. Manion, of Fort William, Postmaster-General in the Meighen Cabinet and one of the ablest members of the present Opposition at Ottawa, there is not the slightest doubt.

The third member, Stewart McClenaghan, former member for Ottawa in the Federal House, is one of Ottawa's best known citizens, who brings business ability and previous experience as Chairman of the Ontario License Board under the Whitney Government as strong assets in the deliberations of the new commission.

Mr. Ferguson has made a good start.

The Hanna-Manion-McClenaghan commission in so far as ability, reputation, integrity and previous good service goes defies successful criticism.

AN EARLY BUDGET.

With the resumption of the Federal parliamentary session this week, the thoughts of business men the country over naturally turn to the 1927 Budget. For a number of reasons it is generally hoped that the Minister of Finance will be able to bring down his report and recommendations—which is what the Budget amounts to—very early in the session, this month if at all possible.

It has already been intimated from Ottawa that the Government hopes to make the session brief. There are not many contentious matters to come up, with the exception of the Budget and the Maritime Rights question revolving around the report and recommendations of the Duncan Commission. And unless the Budget proposes drastic fiscal changes—something entirely unlooked for—it is not likely that the debate which follows its introduction will be long-winded.

The months of December and January usually, see a slack time in industry. Stock is taken and production is small. With the first of February, however, the tendency is to move ahead more rapidly. An early Budget would facilitate this progress, particularly among branches of industry whose operations are vitally concerned with the tariff and changes in the same. It is really difficult for industrial heads to plan their requirements and lay out work for the year until they know definitely what Ottawa is thinking about and what Ottawa is likely to do. This is particularly true, of course, when the Government in power happens to be one that made important tariff changes a year ago.

* * * *

It has also been announced—indeed, it was promised in the last election campaign—that 1927 would see further reductions in the income tax. This is highly important from a business standpoint and may have a material effect on expansion plans. There have been rumors, also, of proposed changes in other forms of taxation and business men are naturally anxious to know what they are. All these things, while of interest to the individual, are doubly interesting, not to say vital, to large concerns. The importance, then, of introducing the Budget at the earliest possible opportunity, will be readily seen.

The Minister of Finance, Hon. James A. Robb, is an astute business man and recognizes, no doubt, the strength of the early Budget contention. For this reason we may confidently expect that he will bring down his statement of the country's position and his recommendations for the year, at the first opportunity. If it is to contain substantial changes, all well and good. The main point is to let business of all kinds know, as soon as possible, what these changes are, so that plans and provision may be arranged accordingly. Such a course will make for commercial and industrial stability the country over.

* * * *

The official report of the Dominion's trade situation, published on Saturday, makes excellent reading. It is in line with the general optimism one finds throughout the country and the predictions heard on every hand for greater-than-ever development during the present year, especially in view of the prospect of materially reduced taxation. Saturday's report states that the physical volume of both imports and exports in 1926 was greater than that for any other year in our history, a gradual improvement in practically every phase of the nation's business activities having been shown. Particularly interesting is the statement that, since 1921, our export trade has expanded more rapidly than our imports, with the result that we have had a steadily increasing favorable trade balance over a considerable period. During the past 12 months, however, exports have practically made no gains, while imports, due to the Dominion's increased buying power, have increased over $118,000,000, thus reducing by that amount the favorable trade balance from $393,000,000 in 1925 to $275,000,000 in 1926. This change of situation has been gradually developing during the past few months. An examination of the import figures shows that about one-third of the increase was directly due to increased imports of raw and semi-manufactured products, for use in Canadian manufacturing industries.

One of the factors that adds so largely to our import total is fuel. It is estimated that Canada spends more than 100 millions a year for American coal. The seriousness of this situation has begun to appeal to the Canadian people and many demands are heard for the development of a Canadian fuel policy that will keep a large share of this outlay at home—through the greater use of Alberta and Maritime coals in Quebec and Ontario. This campaign of agitation has not achieved much to date, but the country is hopeful that it will make progress this year, particularly in view of the fact that the Premiers of Ontario and Alberta are actively interesting themselves in the scheme.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Mr. Ferguson has started his Government control policy well. The commission he has appointed will command public confidence.

It looks as if a deputation to tell Hon. Mr. Dunning something about the Trent Canal is necessary.

Mr. Raney's contribution to the debate in the Legislature seems to have been largely in the nature of a lament that not enough prominent citizens supported the policy he endorsed.

Canada's revenues continue to climb, and the prediction is now made that at the end of the present fiscal year the country will be $35,000,000 better off than a year ago. There is a real chance for a worthwhile tax slash.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Feb. 10 (Canadian Press).—The foreign demand for Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was again of an indifferent character and business was dull.

In sympathy with the weakness in corn futures in the Chicago market yesterday, local prices for cash corn on spot here were reduced one cent per bushel. Car lots of No. 3 yellow were quoted at 90c, No. 4 yellow at 88c, sample yellow corn at 86c, and cool sweet corn at 83c per bushel, ex-store. The market for Canadian Western oats was also easier and prices declined 1-2c per bushel.

The trade in Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour continued dull but prices were steady.

A fair business was done in all lines of millfeed and the undertone was firm. The market standard grades of rolled oats was quiet and prices ruled steady.

Prices for all grade of eggs were well maintained under a good demand. The receipts were 412 cases.

The tone of the Potato market was steady, but the volume of business was small. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.75 to $1.80 per bag of 90 pounds, and Quebec White stock at $1.30 to $1.35 per bag of 90 pounds in bulk, ex-track.

The feature of the butter trade was the weaker feeling that developed in the market and prices scored a decline of 1-2c to 1c per pound. This was attributed to the fact that fresh made New Zealand finest creamery butter was offered to arrive later in the month at 40c to 40 1-2c per pound delivered and combined with this was the pressure of several thousand packages of returned Western creamery butter from England on the market for sale which all tended to curtail the demand. The receipts were 57 packages.

The cheese trade continued inactive and the undertone was easier, but prices showed no further change. The receipts were 89 boxes.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Feb. 10 (Canadian Press).—Prospects of a presidential veto of the McNary-Haugen agricultural bill did a good deal to bring about heavy selling of wheat yesterday. Wheat closed weak, 1 1-2 to 1 3-4c net lower; corn 1-2 and 5-8 to 1 and 1 1-8c off; oats 7-8 to 1 and 1-8c down, and provisions varying

A Thought For To-day

OVER-ANXIETY

Over-anxiety often does more harm than good.

People who are always striving the hardest often make less headway than those who work without so much anxiety.

The hardest physical workers, as a rule, remain the hardest workers.

The over-anxious student seldom is so successful.

The men who make the most money or gain the most prominence in professional life work a little less than think a lot more. They do not get excited. They keep cool and keep working.

A LESSON ON PRUNES

The jokesmiths used to be very liberal with their stories about the lowly prune. This was, however, in the days when its cheapness was its best recommendation, and consequently the boarding-house landlady placed great dependence upon this fruit for an easily prepared and reasonably priced dessert.

The persistence of the ridicule that has pursued the prune, is in part a relic of the time when the common prune was a cheap, poor fruit imported in barrels from Central Europe, and the Balkans, and in part due to the wide ignorance concerning its proper preparation.

Until as recently as 1890 almost the entire supply was imported from Europe. The principal sources being France, Spain, Central Europe, and the Balkans, but today the general market is fully supplied by California, and the other Pacific States, and a great many millions of pounds of the California product are annually exported to every part of the world. The best customers being Canada, England, Northern Europe, Germany, and France.

The California industry started in the Santa Clara Valley, where it was found that the prune grows so well because of the hot dry summer, which brings out its full flavor and sugar quality. The French type of prune is the one produced mostly in the Santa Clara Valley, while further North in Oregon and Washington other varieties of the Italian fruit are grown. An average French prune tree will yield from 150 to as high as 1000 pounds a year.

The drying process requires a considerable degree of skill, the aim being to develop the sugar of the prune without changing its flavor or detracting from its fruity character. By one method of drying, the prunes are placed in ovens, and dried in a short time, but the usual California method is to dry the prunes in the sun. Before being placed in the sun to dry, the prunes are first immersed in a mild lye solution and then treated to a cleansing bath of scalding water. The use of sulphur in curing prunes has almost been entirely discontinued, owing to the drastic pure food laws, which discourage the use of sulphur or sulphur fumes in preparing fruit for the market.

The fruit should be cooked very slowly, and never boiled. It is a good plan to let the prunes soak over-night for at least twelve hours. They should then be cooked very slowly on a low fire for from ten to twenty minutes. No sugar should be added as a well-grown prune is really about fifty per cent sugar.

Many people make the mistake of eating too many prunes in a day. A good practice is to use only about five prunes daily, for if more are used fermentation is liable to result from the excess of sugar which the system cannot use.

Prunes contain a slightly laxative property which will be found effective in overcoming constipation. If a few senna leaves are added to the water in which the prunes are soaked, and cooked, the laxative effect will be more pronounced.

CONGRATULATES CHURCH.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—The congregation of Park Street Baptist Church can be congratulated on their plan of calling their minister. The committee of supply nobly gave the congregation the right and privilege of choosing their pastor. The newly called pastor cannot help but feel at home when he finds that he has been asked unanimously by old and young to fill their pulpit, and the congregation will feel encouraged to make sacrifices to meet the needs of the church. I am referring to this instance to encourage a bigger, broader and more democratic officialism in our church work. Thanking you, I remain, yours, etc.,

W. R. Merrill.

ENCOURAGES FAIRBAIRN.

Peterboro, Ont., Feb. 1, 1927.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

In looking over the pages of our local Evening Examiner and to the items of page 4, namely, the voice of the people, I felt I must endeavor to encourage our venerable Bro. A. Fairbairn of Lakefield, who has taken up the subject which was mentioned in his letter to be read by city and community, which I think was well worthy to be mentioned. It is only too true. This has been the sad case of all ages who have dared with carnel minds to remove the ancient land marks which our fathers have set. When man put his hand on the ark of the covenant, God moved with indignation only as He declared He would. I am quite persuaded that our brother above mentioned is not the only one who is grieved. John Knox, who dared to take his stand in the situation of his home land, who cried, give me Scotland or I die, had he not prevailed with God, could not have had such influence when Queen Mary feared him more than any man or people. Our Covenanters took up their torches, and after severe trials with courage, came to American soil and had our people in Canada and United States stood true, would never have attempted to cut out the foot-notes of our disciples either in the Presbyterian and Methodist or any other church, the Anglicans or any other church. Sobriety in the mothers of our lands would never have fallen to such a low state, for I do declare I am forced to feel ashamed of our women and girls. Our woman sex (no morality), we can only say, as to those who are truly sincere, as God said to Daniel, stand in thy lot until the end be. All hail to our brother for his courage and faith; be thou faithful unto death and thou shalt receive a crown of life.

Thanking you for space, sincerely,

Mrs. N. S.

Dear Sir, — Also of the Chinese question, I quite agree what has been said. While it is a sad state of affairs, but it is a true saying and worthy to be repeated, If man sows to the wind, he will reap a whirlwind, because iniquity abounds. The love of many shall wax cold, and this has surely caused hatred in our brother nation. Think you they are not watching, our white people, sad to say, only too true, and are disgusted. Turn ye, for why will ye die, "Oh house" of Israel.

Sincerely,

Mrs. N. S.

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

SEVEN SPARKS
By Dr. Frank Crane.

Some moments in the history of mankind have been more important in their far-reaching effects than any of "The Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World."

Such moments have been like tiny sparks setting fires which have spread and grown and carried their influence down to the present.

Seven of these sparks are:

1. The moment when the first word was spoken. The transition from a grunt to a word opened up endless possibilities. Without words, ideas are impossible. Thinking would concern merely personal experiences. Words brought an opening that led to advancement in a thousand ways.

2. The first man-made fire. The instant when man held within his power the ability to control fire he had mastered the twin fears of darkness and the wild beasts that prowled in it. He had freed his fear-haunted brain to more constructive thinking and could come out of the trees and the caves into the open where his advancement was more rapid.

3. The moment when writing began. From it spread the passing on of knowledge from generation to generation by accurate means. Folk-lore and word-of-mouth preservation of the learning of the fathers was superseded by a more water-tight conveyance. It made possible papers, books, and the quick dissemination of information.

4. The moment man first felt love. When love in the true sense first budded in the soul of appetite, primitive man raised himself from all fours and stood erect. A door had opened leading to infinite possibilities.

5. Money. When man first conceived the idea of money, of an easily handled medium of exchange (instead of bringing the cow to exchange for the wagon), he made possible trade, industry, civilization as we know it.

6. The moment when man first appreciated beauty. Up to that time he had been concerned only with bodily comfort. Then some moment when his hunger was satisfied, IT happened. He felt a strange delight in the sight of a flower or a cloud or a sunset. An appreciation for the beautiful awoke and opened new avenues of growth.

7. When the idea of a soul began. Some cave-man may have sat up in his cave and looked around some morning after dreaming of escaping a dinosaur or capturing an enemy's wife. He remembered all this distinctly, yet he saw he had not left the place where he lay down the night before. The idea that he was two popped into his head. And from this idea grew the all-influencing idea of mankind—the belief in a soul.

Such spark-moments record the history of humanity more truly than do the dates of conquests, the names of incidental leaders or the migration of peoples.

For they record the inception of ideas which have had an influence world-wide and lasting.

Her dancing feet were like a golden flash of happiness in those dark alleys where men go to forget and be forgotten—she was a flower in the squalor of the slums—and when her petals drooped there was a sound of tears on the cold stones that floor cruel Chinatown and the shadows seemed to sob "Poor Limehouse Kid, Oh, Poor Limehouse Kid! Canadian Folk Songs

Not very much—in many quarters of our fair Canada, at least—seems to be known about our Canadian folk music. Yet, together with Canadian folk tales, it yields a mine of wealth to explorers.

Close on four thousand melodies, it is said, have been collected, and that is considered a small amount compared with what awaits to be recovered.

Until recently, the old world songs formed part of the upbringing of many Canadian peasants. They had been handed down orally ever since the French emigres had followed the intrepid Jacques Cartier, when he sailed in 1535, from the little Breton port of St. Malo to the newly-discovered Continent of America. The story of his entering the Gulf of St. Lawrence and making his way up the river as far as where Montreal now stands, of the incredible hardships he endured from the severity of the climate, of his returning with some of the natives to France and obtaining assistance from the King for further explorations, and of how he finally took possession of the land in the name of Francis I. of France, is all as romantic as any story of high courage, endurance, and adventure extant. In course of time many thousands of people, hailing chiefly from Normandy and Brittany, followed in the wake of the first emigrants. They formed a mixed crowd representative of all sorts and conditions—farmers, peasants, craftsmen, gentry. They set to work establishing towns and villages, cultivating the land, and setting up trade with the Indians. Later, the whole country passed from French to British rule. Under British administration, the Gallic settler continued to live undisturbed on his own bit of land. He managed to retain the old traditional home atmosphere, and to exist entirely in a neutral world of his own making, in which he stored, as in a treasure house old traditions, craft, folklore, folk music. It is not surprising, therefore, that the old bucolic ditties are still in vogue today, together with an endless variety of love songs and all kinds of chants celebrating a wide diversity of episodes in everyday life. Fairy tales also abound, lending the glamor of imagination to the drab monotony of modern existence. The old French-Canadian peasants vary their recital of Christian stories of saints and angels with tales of werewolves and changelings, dwarfs, dragons, and all manner of water elves and spirits. Many of the recorded traditional themes and melodies can be dated back to the time of the Troubadour and Jongleurs of France.

This lends to Canada a glamor which has not been habitually associated with it, especially if it is realized that these Troubadour songs and lyrics were contemporaneous with the epochs that celebrated in Gallic verse the romances of Lancelot, of the Gallic Parsifal, and the songs composed by Chreton de Troyes for Marie de Champagne.

It was towards the end of the 12th century that those immortal stories of love and adventure first appeared to gladden the world, spreading orally over Europe from the North of France. Thus, even in the hard-working, money-making, apparently-prosaic Canadian world a substratum of poetry must always have been latent—for truly has it been recorded that from Gaspe to Montreal, from St. Jean d'Iberville to Ungava, all the immemorial French trad t ons, faith, belief, legend and song were jealously fostered and preserved.

E. Gagnon's "Chansons Populaires due Canada" (1886) is one of the best collections of these wild flowers of song. A smaller compilation, with accompaniments by Margaret Gascoyne (1925) comprises a selection of twenty songs from the bigger volume. This includes several of the more typical and commonly known canoe or paddling songs, e.g., "A la Claire Fontaine," "Le fils du roi s'en va chasant," "Le Plongeur" ("Isabeau s'ypromene"), and others; also a cradle song, "Sainte Marguerite," and a round dance, "Marian danse."

La Rochefoucault, visiting Upper Canada early in the 19th century, speaks of his canoe journeys on the big Canadian rivers, accompanied by folk songs, which began when the paddle was picked up, and ending only when it was dropped.

In the footnote of Thomas Moore's poem, "The Canadian Boat "Song," written on the St. Lawrence, the Irish poet mentions the well-known folk song, "Dans mon chemin j'ai rencontre Deux cavaliers tres bien montes," with its refrain. "A l'ombre d'un bois je m'en vais jouer." This he took down, harmonized and published, and ever after its melody called up to him the memory of the great river and the flight of his boat over the rapids.

DE COURCELLE

Q. Who was De Courcelle?

A. De Courcelle was the 8th Governor-General of French Canada from 1665 to 1672. When he arrived the population of Canada was small, the majority of people living at Quebec, Montreal and Three Rivers. It was at the risk of their lives that men ventured beyond the guns of Montreal. The fur-trade was in the hands of monopolists. The colonists could not raise enough food to feed themselves, but had to depend on the French ships to a large extent. The Company of the Hundred Associates had been found quite unequal to the work of settling and developing the country, or providing adequate means of defence.

I.O.D.E. CHAPTER GIVES HOSPITAL FRACTURE ROOM

Peter Robinson Branch Decides To Add Needed Equipment.

ANNUAL MEETING.

Mrs. J. A. McNabb Re-elected as Regent—Successful Year.

At the eleventh annual meeting of the Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E., held recently, the vice-regent, Mrs. F. Hooper, was in the chair. The election of officers for the ensuing year took place, annual reports were given, and business of importance to the Chapter discussed. Preceding the business session, short addresses were given by Miss Davidson of the Sailors' Inland Mission, and by Dr. A. W. McPherson, who, at the request of the executive, explained to the meeting the need of a "fracture room" at Nicholls Hospital, and the equipment necessary to outfit such a room.

A sum of money, totalling $500, had been set aside by the Chapter early in the year from the funds derived from the sale of the "Hope Chest" tickets to be expended for some definite local purpose of benefit to the community, and the meeting decided to use this sum to equip a room in Nicholls Hospital, to be known as "The Peter Robinson Chapter I.O.D.E. Fracture Room."

The balance remaining from the "Hope Chest" funds, amounting to $22.60, was donated to the Inland Sailors' Mission.

It was decided to hold a "Neighborhood" bridge party on Saturday, February 18th.

In the reports given by the secretary and treasurer, evidence was shown of a particularly successful year just completed, when over $700 had been given by the Chapter in charitable donations, exclusive of the sum of $500 to be used for the hospital room.

Special mention was made of the kindness shown the Chapter by the manager of the Capitol Theatre, Mr. J. D. Fletcher, and regret was expressed that, owing to the new fire regulations, the Chapter would no longer be in charge of the ushering at the Grand Opera House.

Mrs. D. Walker was nominated as National Councillor and Mrs. E. B. Clegg as Provincial Councillor. Members of the various committees were re-elected, and the name of Mrs. J. J. Craig added to the Refreshment Committee.

The Misses G. Glover and G. Mulholland were appointed as scrutineers for the election of officers, which resulted as follows:

Regent, Mrs. J. A. McNabb; 1st Vice-Regent, Mrs. F. Hooper; 2nd Vice-Regent, Miss Geraldine Glover; Secretary, Miss Maida Conner; Treasurer, Mrs. B. Moore; Educational Secretary, Miss Myra Baird; "Echoes" Secretary, Mrs. F. C. Webber; Standard Bearer, Miss M. Drope. Councillors: Mrs. J. Wearing, Mrs. W. Belleghem, Mrs. D. Loucks, Mrs. C. S. Browne, Mrs. J. K. Hughes, and the Misses Rose Mulholland, M. Montgomery, H. Buller, E. Richardson, and F. Adams.

The popular Regent, Mrs. McNabb, who was re-elected to office, was presented with a lovely corsage bouquet.

Afternoon tea, which followed the business meeting, was in charge of Mrs. Joseph Wearing. Mrs. J. J. Craig poured tea, assisted by Mrs. D. Loucks, Miss M. Morphet, Miss F. Adams, and Miss A. Sowden.

The financial statement, presented by Mrs. B. Moore, showed a balance on hand from the previous year, of $337.43, and total receipts during the year of $1,554.10, with ushering at the Grand Opera House and tips bringing in $166.17, fees $63.00, the "Hope Chest" project, $1,167.41, and the Fashion Show, in which the members acted as ushers, $50.00.

The disbursements, totalling $1,102.12, included donations as follows: Children's Shelter, $20.00; local relief, $25.00; Well Babies' Clinic, $175.00; Canadian Institute for the Blind, $50.00; Y.W.C.A., $15.00; National War Memorial, $200.00; St. Vincent's Orphanage, $10.00; Canadian Legion, $10.00; Salvation Army, $10.00; Armenian boy at the Georgetown School, $200.00; expenses in connection with the "Hope Chest" amounted to $101.99; Provincial fees were $43.70; convention expenses, $22.50, and Regent's expenses to Hamilton, $22.00.

The Chapter closed its year with a cash balance in the bank of $789.41, and a bond of $500 in reserve.

The eleventh annual report of the Chapter, submitted by Miss M. Conner, showed a present enrolment of ninety members. During the year, seven new members joined the Chapter, and five left town.

The year did not furnish as much revenue from ushering as in former seasons, and, owing to new fire rules, this work will have to be given up entirely by the young ladies. A nice sum was raised by several of the members acting as models in spring and fall fashion shows.

The Chapter was extremely successful in netting nearly $1,100 from a "Hope Chest" in the spring, when tickets were sold for the venture, the draw being made at the Capitol Theatre. Most of the articles for the Chest were donated and a percentage of the receipts at the theatre on the "draw" night also given to the Chapter.

WOMAN LOVES HOUSEWORK, HAS GOOD TIME

"I had stomach gas so bad that work was a burden and I was always drowsy. Adlerika is the best medicine I ever took. Since taking it, I feel like doing my work and enjoy life again."—Mrs. W. H. Clintsman.

Adlerika gives the system a REAL cleansing and brings out old poisons which may have caused trouble for a long time. Unlike most medicines, it acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel. Just one spoonful relieves GAS and takes away that full, bloated feeling so that you can eat better and sleep better. Even if bowels move daily, Adlerika brings out much additional poison which you never thought was in your system and which caused sour, gassy stomach, nervousness, sleeplessness, headache. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you. At druggists. In Peterboro at McDermid & Jury and other druggists.

THEATRE AT THE REGENT

GREAT CAST SEEN WITH DOG STAR IN FOX DRAMA.

Virginia Brown Faire and Reed Howes Featured in "Wings of the Storm."

Virginia Brown Faire and Reed Howes, who delineate the leading roles in Fox Films version of "Wings of the Storm," are ideally cast in the great thriller based on the story of a dog's life, to be screened at the Regent Theatre today.

In preparing for the production, J. G. Blystone, noted Fox Films director, gave his undivided attention to the selection of players sufficiently talented to vividly portray the human element so necessary to the development of the dog's activities.

The story centres about Thunder, a police dog, who, when a puppy, was a weakling, the runt of the litter. As the tale unfolds it depicts Thunder's mental and physical growth, until, in the full flower of parenthood, he stands a majestic leader of his kind, loyal to those who befriended him and faithful to his trusts.

In the story, Miss Faire is the owner of the dog and Reed Howes impersonates the forest ranger who also befriends him. Incidentally, Thunder is the means of encouraging their romance, concurrently with his own love affair with "White Fawn." They are a striking pair these human favorites of the door films, and it is said they give excellent accounts of themselves in their respective roles in "Wings of the Storm."

Others well known here who have important roles in the film are William Russell and Hank Mann.

On a Paris ballrom the musicians must keep their eyes on a big dial clock face which beats the time and indicates how many beats are allowed to the minute. The orchestra leader controls its speed.

OUTLINE OF SCIENCE XCIX—The Invention of Gunpowder. — by MAX HAHN

Sailing through each joyful day,
Retaining youth the Kruschen way.

The Secret of Eternal Youth

It's the "little daily dose" that does it!

"You are as young as your faith, as old as your doubt; as young as your hope, and as old as your despair . . ."

How these poets do run on! It never seems to occur to them, does it, that to the world a woman is as old as she looks — that there isn't much point in staying young in heart unless your looks reflect the youth of your heart.

A woman is as old as her complexion. In nine cases of every ten a flawed complexion is the result of internal sluggishness. To repair the damage you must go to the source of the trouble — with the "little daily dose" of Kruschen Salts.

Every morning you should tip into your first cup of tea just as much of the magic Kruschen Salts as will lie on a 10-cent piece. You won't taste the tiny pinch taken this way, but your mirror will soon show you its effects — effects that would be magical were they not so simply understood.

The "little daily dose" supplies your system every day with just the six vital salts, blended in nature's own proportions, that nature prescribes for your well-being. All the clogging waste matter that results in constipation—and the whole host of ailments great and small that follow constipation — is gently but surely expelled. Clear refreshed blood is sent coursing gloriously through your every vein. Skin blemishes are banished, dull eyes rekindled. You are all a-tingle with "that Kruschen feeling!"

Because you are healthy, you are young in spirits and in looks. It's the little daily dose that does it!" And the cost — rather less than half a cent a day!

Tasteless in Coffee or Tea

Put as much in your breakfast cup as will lie on a 10 cent piece. It's the little daily dosetul that does it.

Kruschen Salts

Good Health for Half a Cent a Day

The dose to cover a 10-cent piece taken every morning is found in practice just the right amount for a most invigorating daily tonic. The medicinal dose for persons suffering from pains of rheumatism, gout, lumbago, or sciatica, or habitual constipation, with inactive liver, etc., is half to one-teaspoonful in a tumbler of hot water before breakfast. Every druggist sells Kruschen. A 75c bottle lasts three months. This works out at half a cent a day for health and happiness. Get a bottle at your druggist's to-day and start to-morrow. It's the little daily dimeful that does it!

WAR TIME HERO TAKES A REST

Stops Wandering To Seek Quietness in New York.

YOUNGEST SOLDIER.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.— Stephen W. Harvey, late of Winnipeg, Flanders, Archangel and Australia, has decided to retire after spending half his 26 years adventuring about the world, and New York is the haven of peace and quiet he has chosen for his declining years. The dangers of taxicabs, gunmen and poison liquor hold no terrors for one who went overseas with the Canadians when he was 13 years old, and in the ensuing four years was wounded three times, gassed twice, and decorated five times he said to-day. Nine months in a Russian prison and a critical illness on a steamer in mid-Pacific without medical attention at hand are included in the experiences which determined him to look for restful shelter in New York.

Shipped as a Fireman.

It was his latest—and closest—call, his illness on the Canadian Government steamship Canadian Challenger, on which he had shipped as a fireman, that decided his retirement from adventure, he said to-day. On December 23, he sailed from Sydney, N.S.W., and on Jan. 10, almost in mid-Pacific, he became violently ill, as a result, he thinks, of being gassed and of carrying a splinter of shrapnel in his head for the last nine years.

Capt. W. B. Armit of the Canadian Challenger, did what he could for the sick man, and the following day called at Pitcairn Island (the island peopled by the descendants of the Bounty's mutineers) only to find no medical attention was available. He resorted to the radio as the only means of getting assistance, and two days later got in touch with the Str. Pakeha, whose doctor, John Eastcott, prescribed for the sufferer.

Three days later the Pakeha was sighted, but so efficacious had been the treatment that Dr. Eastcott did not have to board the vessel of the patient.

Shrapnel in His Head.

The splinter of shapnel Harvey carries in his head is a souvenir of his exploit on the night of June 16-17, 1917, when in the words of the citation, Captain J. Ross, platoon commander, was mortally wounded beyond the parapet. Private Harvey, disregarding a heavy machine gun fire, ran out and brought him in, although he received a severe wound in the head in so doing." He also has the Military Medal as a souvenir of the occasion. He won the Croix de Guerre for a similar exploit.

After his discharge in 1919 he enlisted in the expeditionary force sent to Archangel to fight the Bolsheviki, and was captured and spent nine months in prison there. He spent several years subsequently in Canadian hospitals. "But Captain Armit did more for me than all the doctors that ever treated me," he said to-day. Captain Armit was a British naval officer on board the Alonia when that ship carried Harvey and his companions of the Thirteenth Battalion of the Royal Highlanders of Canada, overseas in 1914. Harvey is said to have been the youngest man who served in the allied armies in the war.

Thousands freed from racking pain

HANDS TERRIBLY SWOLLEN FROM RHEUMATISM

Gets relief overnight from simple home treatment

After having suffered with rheumatism for years, and tried all kinds of remedies in vain, a Washington, D. C., woman has at last found a way to get quick, sure relief.

"I have been a sufferer from rheumatism for years," she writes. "At times my hands are terribly swollen. Sloan's Liniment always gives me relief in a very short time. I have tried other liniments, but nothing equals Sloan's."

The marvelous effectiveness of Sloan's is due to its stimulating effect upon the circulation. Straight to the sick, aching tissues, it sends a healing tide of fresh, new blood—clears out rheumatism germs—kills pain.

So pleasant, easy and clean to use, too. You don't even have to rub. Just pat it on gently and you will get immediate results. Get a bottle today. All druggists—35 cents.

from 10 cents decline to an equal gain.

Offering of wheat at times greatly exceeded the buying power of the market and included holdings on which there were standing orders to sell out and stop losses at various fixed limits.

In addition to talk which was current that President Coolidge would veto the McNary-Hauden bill, a source of weakness was the fact that better weather than expected was prevailing in domestic Winter wheat territory, the cold wave turning out to be not so severe as has been looked for and being accompanied by snowfalls that furnished moisture and protection as well.

Failure of the Liverpool market to follow Tuesday's upturn of wheat prices in America tended further to make trade sentiment bearish.

Corn and oats were without aggressive support and were carried down by the action of wheat. Stop loss selling was witnessed in both of the feed-grain pits.

Provisions averaged lower, sympathizing with weakness of the hog market.

TORONTO, Feb. 9 (Canadian Press).—The experiences of Oliver Twist are recalled by the circumstances of the robbery of several houses north of Danforth Avenue, in the East end this week. The child is shoved through an ice or milk box entrance and then opens the way for the burglars.

LARGE ATTENDANCE AT W.M.S. MEETING

Bad Weather Fails To Affect Gathering of Warsaw Ladies.

WARSAW, Feb. 10.—In spite of, or perhaps because of, the very inclement weather, the missionary meeting held at Mrs. O. B. MacIlvena's home was better attended than usual. Final plans were made for the pie social and debate to be held on Valentine evening.

Miss Clara Payne had some beautiful Japanese pictures for sale, the proceeds to be donated to the missionary fund.

Mrs. Herrington offered to lend E. Stanley Jones' book, "The Christ of the Indian Road" to any who would care to read it.

Some interesting sketches of China in her present struggle were read. Two outstanding notes were, that there is at present a great desire for the printed Bible in China, and that this upheaval may be a forerunner of great good.

At the close Mrs. McIlvena departed from the usual sandwiches and cake and served most delicious scalloped potatoes, bread and butter and tea.

Old-Time Dance.

The old-time dance given in aid of the Armenian Boys' Farm Home on Friday evening was a success in every way. Eighty-nine dollars were taken at the door. That will leave fully seventy-five or perhaps eighty dollars clear. Ninety-three dollars is the most that had ever been received before. The hall was quite full enough for comfort. Warsaw orchestra supplied the music. There were people present from Havelock and Indian River.

Dr. Munro and Mr. Anderson had taken great pains to see that everything was well conducted. The dances were quadrilles, fox-trots, waltzes and barn dances.

Personals.

Thursday's rain made the roads very icy, and very careful driving is required in some places.

Gordon Bowen has been visiting David Little at the lake.

Miss Emma Robb, of Indian Head, Sask., Miss Marion Adamson and Miss Cressa Crowe, of Keene, spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Crowe.

Mrs. Reynolds (nee Lilly Hamblin) is visiting her sister, Mrs. Robert Moore.

Trapper Shoots Wolves When Surrounded By Pack

HORNEPAYNE, Ont., Feb. 10. Canadian Press. — Erick Smolander, a Scandinavian trapper, was not a bit scared when he informally encountered a pack of wolves on his trap line a few days ago. Instead of fleeing for his life, he calmly prepared baits and shot no less than six of the animals. Proof of his story was furnished when he reached this town yesterday and brought the six wolves, large animals, to claim the governments' bounty. One was a black Siberian, measuring seven feet six inches from nose to tail; and another, a beautiful gray timber wolf, measured six feet, nine inches.

Smolander said he was going back for more "bounty certificates."

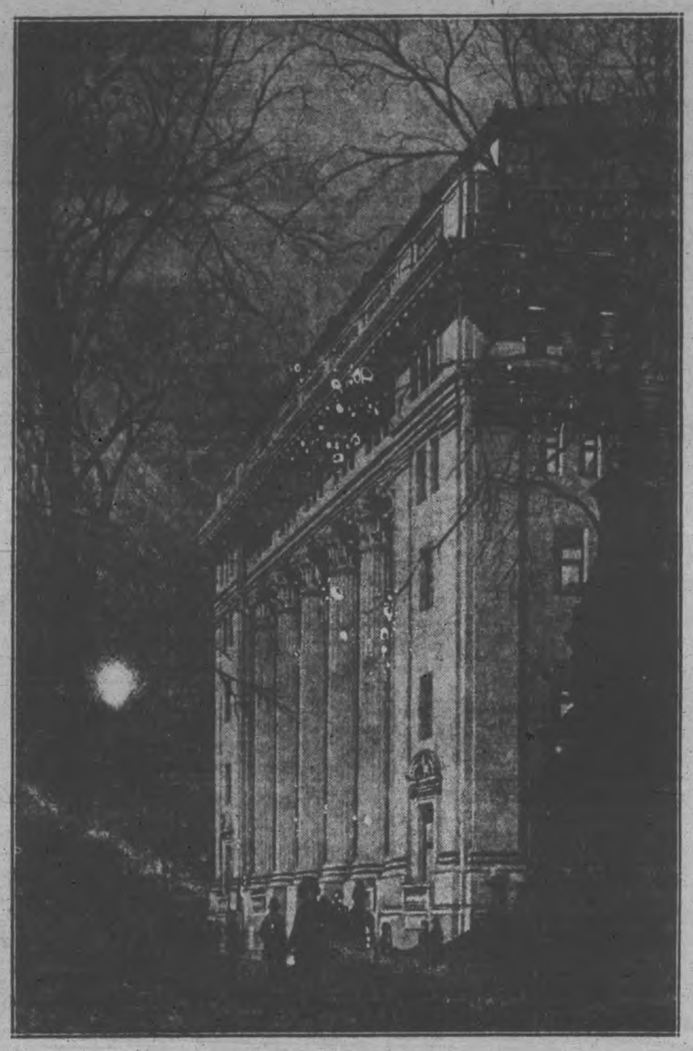
Dividends to Policyholders increased for seventh successive year



EXTRACTS FROM DIRECTORS' REPORT

The operations during the past year have resulted in substantial advances in all departments. . . .

The new policies paid for. . . . almost double the figures of two years ago.

The assurances in force, after deduction of reassurances, ... show an increase of . . . . over twenty-three per cent.

Policies and group certificates now outstanding aggregate well in excess of half a million.

The figures relating to resources and earning power are equally satisfactory.

The high quality and profitable character of our investments has again been demonstrated. As a result of continued reduction in prevailing rates of interest, and of satisfactory industrial conditions, there has been a further rise in the market values of our long-term bonds and of our preferred and other stocks. The appraisal of our securities made by the Government Insurance Department shows that the excess of market values over cost has increased during the year by $6,894,266.26. In addition, the sum of $1,729,364.52 has been realized as net profit from the redemption or sale of municipal debentures and other securities which had risen to high premiums. The rate of interest earned on the mean invested assets has also risen to the remarkable figure of 6.69 per cent, as the result of substantial dividend increases, bonuses, and stock privileges received in connection with many of our holdings.

The quality of the investments listed in the assets may be judged from the fact that on 99.55 per cent of the bonds and on 99.71 per cent of the preferred stocks, not one dollar of interest or dividend is in arrear for even one day. On our common stocks the dividends now being received are greatly in excess of the dividends payable on the same stocks at time of purchase.

The total surplus earned during the year amounted to $20,457,077.28. From this the following appropriations have been made:

The sum of $2,000,000 has been deducted from the official valuation of our securities to provide for possible fluctuations in market values. This raises the amount set aside for this purpose to $5,000,000. In other words, the value at which our securities are carried in the balance sheet is $5,000,000 less than the appraisal made by the Government authorities.

The account to provide for unforeseen contingencies has been increased by $1,000,000 bringing the total under this heading to $11,000,000.

The book value of our Head Office building has been written down by a further sum of $250,000 though it certainly could not be replaced at even its original cost.

An additional amount of $400,000 has been set aside to provide for greater longevity of annuitants. The total held under this heading, in excess of Government requirements, is now $1,500,000.

The reserves on the newly acquired business of the Cleveland Life, and on other reassured policies, have been raised to the same high standard as that used for the valuation of liabilities under our own contracts.

To our policyholders, profits have been paid or allotted during the year to the amount of $9,235,526.80.

After making these deductions and allocations an addition of $5,371,564.56 has been made to the undivided profits. The surplus over all liabilities, contingency accounts and capital stock, now stands at $34,011,565.25.

For six years in succession we have increased the profits to participating policyholders. During this period our profit scale has been doubled. While the assurances in force have multiplied two and a half times since 1920, the amount paid or allotted as profits to policyholders has multiplied five and a half times. We are gratified to announce, for the seventh consecutive time, a further increase in the scale of profits to be distributed to our policyholders in the ensuing year.

SUN LIFE HAS RECORD YEAR

Report Shows Largest Amount of Insurance Ever Written in Canada.

ANNUAL MEETING.

MONTREAL, Feb. 9 (Special to The Examiner). — The largest amount of life assurance ever written by a Canadian Company—over 265 million dollars of Paid-For business is the record the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada has created for 1926. Annually this institution has set a new mark in Canadian Life Assurance history until today it has over one billion and a quarter of assurances in force. The business of this international company is nearly five times greater now than it was eleven years ago, while the assets have risen in the same ratio.

President T. B. Macaulay, who this year wil complete his fiftieth year with the Sun Life, was in the chair at the 56th annual meeting held here yesterday. It was demonstrated that the Company had made its greatest advance during 1926 since it began business in 1871. The financial statement shows how closely the Sun Life is linked with the development and progress of industry in Canada and the United States. The activities of the Company are world-wide, and every year it extends and strengthens its organization. During the year just closed it was particularly active in the United States, opening many new divisions.

The story told by the Sun Life is always impressive. The figures are mighty and the increases every year become mightier. The strength of the Company is almost without a limit. The undivided surplus of the Company now stands at over thirty-four millions, exclusive of contingency funds of eleven million dollars. This is an increase of undivided surplus for the year of over five million dollars, and an increase for the year of one million dollars to the contingency fund. It maintains a title held for many years—the largest Company in the British Empire writing ordinary life insurance. It is a financial institution—Canada's largest single investor—of which Canadians are justly proud. Its assets show an increase for the year of over forty-two million dollars, bringing the total assets close to three hundred and fifty millions. The remarkable progress and enormous strength indicated in every detail of the report is of course pleasing, but probably the most gratifying announcement to the Sun Life's many policy-holders is the statement that for the seventh consecutive year a material increase in the scale of profits has been made to policy-holders. In this connection, it is interesting to note that since 1920 the assurances in force have been multiplied two and a-half times, but the amount paid or alloted to policy-holders has multiplied five and a-half times in the same period. $257,816,000 has been paid by the Sun Life since it began business to living policy-holders and beneficiaries in death claims, matured endowments, etc. Nearly forty millions were paid out in the year just closed, of which amount over twenty-seven millions were paid to living policy-holders. Profits paid or allotted during the same period amounted to $9,235,526.80.

The total income for the year showed a gain of nearly ten million dollars, reaching approximately seventy-nine million dollars for the year.

The average rate of interest earned again shows an increase from 6.41 per cent in 1925 to 6.69 for 1926.

In referring to the investments of the Company, President Macaulay, in the Directors' Report, says:

"The high quality and profitable character of our investments has again been demonstrated. As a result of continued reduction in prevailing rates of interest, and of satisfactory industrial conditions, there has been a further rise in the market values of our long term bonds and of our preferred and other stocks. The appraisal of our securities made by the Government Insurance Department shows that the excess of market values over cost has increased during the year by $6.894,266.26. In addition the sum of $1,729,364.52 has been realized as net profits from the redemption or sale of municipal debentures and other securities which had risen to high premiums. The rate of interest earned on the mean invested assets has also risen to the remarkable figure of 6.60 per cent, as the result of substantial dividend increases, bonuses, and stock privileges received in connection with many of our holdings.

The quality of the investments listed in the assets may be judged from the fact that on 99.55 per cent of the bonds and on 99.72 per cent of the preferred stocks, not one dollar of interest or dividend is in arrears for even one day. On our common stocks the dividends now being received are greatly in excess of the dividends payable on the same stocks at time of purchase."

The remarkable growth of the Company from less than a million dollars of business secured in the year 1872 to over two hundred and sixty-five million of paid-for business written in 1926 is indeed a wonderful story of progress and the clear vision of the management. The little table lucidly tells the story of the development of a Canadian institution which today ranks amongst the foremost financial institutions.

'COFFIN NAILS' ARE ABSOLVED

Eminent British Nerve Disease Specialist Says Pipe is Worse.

LAUDS SMOKING.

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Everyone recognizes that many of the effects of tobacco smoking are psychologic rather than physical.

Sir Robert Armstrong-Jones, well known British specialist in nervous and mental diseases, gives special attention to these effects, at the same time considering any possibility of physical changes that may occur from either moderate or excessive smoking.

He accepts the consensus of opinion among medical men that smoking tobacco is harmful to a growing boy. He does not connect it with any mental defect or criminality, but is inclined to believe that persons with mental defects and a tendency to criminality are more likely to take up tobacco smoking early.

Dr. Armstrong-Jones realizes that the effects of tobacco are soothing, relieving psychic tension, tranquilizing emotion, and fostering repose. He credits its wide use to the fact that most human beings are under constant emotional stress and that the use of tobacco acts largely to relieve this strain.

Among the conclusions presented by this physician, after studying most of the available scientific material on the subject, are the following:

"1. Tobacco is a sedative with pronounced physical effects supplemented by the arousal of the esthetic emotions when smoked.

"2. Speaking generally, tobacco smoking in moderation is not injurious to grown-up people; indeed, on the contrary, it exercises a soothing influence when the system is irritable. With some persons it contributes to calm thought and continuous mental exertion.

"3. Tobacco when smoked should always be of the best with a pleasant aroma and pleasing to look at; and not the hard, coarse, commoner varieties.

"4. Of the various forms, again in moderation, cigarette smoking is the most wholesome or, perhaps, its hould be stated, the least harmful, preferably also without a holder.

"5. Pipe smoking is the commonest form of smoking, and the bowl should be shallow to allow more air, and more frequent refilling. A large, dirty, capacious bowl is unwholesome.

"6. Pipe smoking to be enjoyed persupposes sound teeth, and demand the use of the tooth brush at least twice a day, otherwise pyorrhea, with a long train of ailments, may result.

"7. Cigar smoking is believed to be better, cleaner, and less toxic than a pipe, but is more expensive. A short cigar is better than a long one.

"8. Tobacco smoking is injurious to growing youth in any form, and in them is not infrequently associated with the craving for alcohol, and must be avoided."

ORGAN RECITAL HERE ON MONDAY

Thomas Crawford, of Toronto, Will Play at St. Paul's Church.

The first of a number of organ recitals which have been arranged for presentation at St. Paul's Presbyterian Church will take place on Monday evening next, when Thomas Crawford, Mus. Bac., F.R.C.O., F.T.C.L., organist of St. Paul's Anglican Church in Toronto and conductor of the Eaton Choral Society will be the visiting musician, assisted by his wife, Gertrude Ramsden Crawford, gold medalist of Trinity College, London, England, in solo violin work.

Before coming to Canada, Mr Crawford was for twenty years organist at St. Michael's, Chester Square, London, England, a post formerly held for seven years by Sir Arthur Sullivan. He was one of the founders of mid-day recitals for business men in the City of London, and played regularly to large audiences at Walbrook for twenty-three years. For a time he was also official organist in the Palace of Music at the White City Exhibition. For seven years, he acted as private assistant to Sir Frederick Bridge and did much work of various kinds for the famous musical Knight at Westminster Abbey.

He has been chairman of the Toronto Chapter of the Canadian College of Organists for the past two years. The Toronto Star of November 12th, 1925, says: "Seldom has any organ recital been given in Toronto with such poignant expression and interpretation."

This is Mr. Crawford's first visit to Peterborough, and his programme will be of such a nature as to afford a rare musical treat to his audience and will afford music-lovers an opportunity to hear to advantage the magnificent organ recently installed in St. Paul's Church.

Of Mrs. Crawford, who will assist in violin numbers, The Toronto Globe, in October, 1925, says: "Gertrude Ramsden Crawford played with masterly balance of technique and inspiration," and The Toronto Telegram: "Gertrude Ramsden Crawford's violin playing was marked by deep tenderness of tone and refined persuasiveness of phrase."

CANADA INVADED BY AIR

Canada was invaded by a squadron of foreign airplanes this week—but it was a friendly invasion from the U.S.A. flying field at Detroit. Ottawa and Montreal were visited. It was the first U.S. army flight over Canadian territory. It was for test purposes, all information gathered being available to Canada. Upper left is a picture of the men of the follow-up of transport plane which made a forced landing on Valor's Bay because fuel ran short. The same plane, with a crowd surrounding it, is seen at upper right. Below one plane is shown landing in the ice at Cartierville. Another one is seen in the air.

Since then the traffic on the river has died, but the old post to which Berger used to tie his boat still stands in its place. Every year Berger returns to kick the post and recall the days of his pioneering.

"WORTH ITS WEIGHT IN GOLD" SAYS OTTAWA MATRON

Mme. Beatrice Charlebois Could Not Hold Pen To Write. Nerves Completely Shattered, Health Ruined. Now Alert, Vigorous and Strong, She Gives Praise To Tanlac.

The two-year ordeal which she passed through before Tanlac came to her permanet relief, was recently described by Mme. Beatric Charlebois, of 22 Rose St., Ottawa.

"What I endured in that time could not be told," she said. "I was so weak I could hardly walk. My appetite was poor and my stomach gave no end of trouble. Gas and pains would bring on fainting spells.

"My nerves were so completely shattered that I jumped in fright every time the doorbell rang. My hand trembled so that it could not hold the pen to write my name. Night after night I've gone without sleep, too nervous to lie still for even a few moments. Even my housework became too much for me.

"I tried all kinds of remedies in those two years, but can honestly say Tanlac gave me my first relief. It built me up so that I've gained 11 lbs., eat and sleep fine and have nerves as calm and steady as ever. Tanlac is worth its weight in gold."

Build up your health on Tanlac, nature's own tonic made from roots, herbs and barks. Your druggist has it. Over 52 million bottles sold.

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story.

By Howard R. Garis

UNCH. WIGGILY AND JIM'S ARMS.

"Uncle Wiggily, would you like to come with us?" politely invited Floppy Twistytail, the piggie boy one day.

"We would 'specially like to have you!" grunted Curley, who was Floppy's brother.

"Well, that is very kind of you, I am sure," answered the rabbit gentleman, as he put an extra fine Christmas tree star twinkle on the end of his nose. "Where are you going?"

Neither of the little piggie boys answered for a moment, but there they stood, sort of bashfully digging their paws down in the dirt, looking at each other and at Uncle Wiggily until, finally, the rabbit uncle said again:

"Where are you going?"

"You tell him, Floppy!" giggled Curly.

"No, you tell him, Curly!" snickered Floppy.

"Oh, well, if it's a secret—" began Uncle Wiggily.

"No, it isn't a secret!" quickly squealed Floppy. "We're going to buy some sour milk lollypops."

"'Cause we like that kind best!" went on Curly. "And you are invited to come along, Uncle Wiggily."

"Oh, how nice!" murmured Mr. Longears. "And as I have nothing else to do, and as it may lead to an adventure, I'll go with you."

So he hopped along beside the piggie boys who had to waddle, on account of being so fat. And soon they were at the lollypop store.

"You go in first," grunted Curly to Floppy.

"No, you go in first!" squealed Floppy to Curly.

"Look here!" laughed Uncle Wiggily. "Why all this fuss? Why don't you both go in together? Or is it because you have no pennies to buy lollypops?" he asked.

"That's it!" gasped Curly, and Floppy, with a sigh of relief said: "That's it! We have no money, so we invited you and we knew you were lucky and we thought maybe, walking with you, we'd find two pennies in the street and——"

"Ha! Ha!" laughed the rabbit. "That's pretty good. But you didn't find any pennies, so I guess I had better look in my pocket." This Uncle Wiggily did, and he found two pennies. Giving one each to Floppy and Curly, the rabbit gentleman watched them buy the sour milk lollypops, on the ends of sticks, and then all was happiness.

"Now we must look for an adventure!" said Uncle Wiggily, so he hopped along toward the woods, with Curly and Floppy waddling beside him, eating their lollypops.

All of a sudden, in a deep, dark part of the woods, a voice cried:

"Help! Help! Help!"

"Oh, my goodness! Let's run!" squealed Floppy.

"What! Run away when some one needs help?" asked Uncle Wiggily. "If you want to run and get something to help with, and run back again, that's all right. But—Oh, I see you!" suddenly called the rabbit uncle. "Hello there, Jumping Jack! Do you want another pair of leadpencil legs?"

"I am not Jack! I am his brother Jim," was the answer, and then the piggies saw a little wooden man, like Jumping Jack. But he had no arms; and when Uncle Wiggily asked about them, Jim said:

"Oh, it was my own fault that I lost my arms. I wanted to show my brother Jack what a fine chap I was to swing on a circus trapeze. But I swung so long I dropped right off my arms, and they are still hanging on the trapeze. And without arms I can't wave my hands to keep the flies and mosquitoes away. Oh, dear! What shall I do?"

"I know what you can do, Uncle Wiggily," squealed Floppy. "Take our lollypop sticks—we have eaten the candy off them, and make arms for Jim out of our empty lollypop sticks."

"The very thing!" cried the bunny. "I'll do it!" So from the lollypop sticks he made two new arms for Trapeze Jim, and all was well. And when the Fuzzy Fox tried to bite the bunny, Jim, with his wooden arms, tickled the bad chap so hard that he ran away. And if the clothes pin doesn't pinch the pussy cat's tail and make her scratch the face of the clock, I'll tell you again about Uncle Wiggily.

It costs the United States approximately $2,000 a year to keep one of its soldiers; Great Britain $1572, and France $263.

Its Uniformity Makes It Good for Baby

ONE of the great advantages of Carnation Milk as a baby food is that its goodness never varies. No matter where you buy it or when you use it, baby's delicate digestion is never upset by a change in quality or purity.

Another advantage Carnation offers—the Carnation process of "homogenization" breaks up the fat globules and makes Carnation very easy to digest.

All the food value of milk is in Carnation, for Carnation is just pure, fresh milk evaporated to double richness and kept safe by sterilization. SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

The chief of police laid an affectionate hand on Bob Hathaway's shoulder as he shook hands.

"Hello, Hathaway. Nasty business. I've known your uncle for twenty years. One of the finest men on God's green footstool."

"This is Faith Lane, Mr. Morehouse," Bob introduced Faith. "Farrel insisted that she come with us. She's naturally pretty much cut up and I'd appreciate it immensely if you'd get through with her as qujckly as possible. Her mother's a very sick woman—heart trouble. Could you question Miss Lane now and let her go?"

"Sure, Hathaway. No need to keep the young lady. Mighty sorry I have to bother you, miss. But I thought maybe you could give us a line on your sister's whereabouts."

"Cherry didn't do it, Mr. Morehouse," Faith began eagerly, warmed by his friendliness. "Please don't concentrate on her and overlook clues that would point to the real murderer."

"Reckon we won't overlook anything," Chief Morehouse grinned faintly. "Just come in here, Miss Lane."

"Don't see why not, Bob. If you don't try any monkey business," the chief grinned.

When the door had closed upon them, Bob turned impulsively to the chief. "I want you to be the first to know, Morehouse, that Faith—Miss Lane—and I are engaged to be married. We were keeping it quiet until Uncle Ralph's wedding was over."

"Oh, Bob!" Faith clung to his arm, lifting grateful but tragic brown eyes to his. "Please don't let the—the reporters know—about us. I don't want you to be mixed up in this dreadful business."

"I want to have a right to stand by you, in the eyes of the world," Bob told her firmly. "I'm going to see that all the papers carry the story of our engagement, and a statement from me that I'm standing by. I'd stake my life on the kid's innocence, Morehouse. And I want the world to know it."

"Better let him have his way, Miss Faith," Morehouse nodded. "Now, Miss Faith, just tell me in your own words what you know about this business."

Faith, her voice quivering with her effort to control it, reviewed briefly the events of the evening and told how, after the rest of the household had gone to the church, she had gone to Cherry's room to help her dress.

"I knocked but there was no answer, and then I tried the door. It was locked." She halted, swallowed a sob in her throat. "I thought maybe she was crying and didn't want me to see her—"

"Crying?" the chief pounced on the word. "Why should she be crying? Wasn't she happy? Had anyone coerced her into the marriage?"

"Oh, no," Faith protested, flushing painfully. "None of us wanted her to marry Mr. Cluny, because he was so much older, you know. But she was determined to go through with it. She liked Mr. Cluny—he was awfully good to her—and she was tired of being poor, and—and—"

"Tell him, Faith. It can't do any harm," Bob urged, in a low, compassionate voice.

"She was afraid, if she didn't marry Chris—Christopher Wiley—would bully her into marrying him. She—she was infatuated with him, Mr. Morehouse, but she didn't want to marry him. She knew it would break mother's heart, and Dad had forbidden him the house. She thought if she married Mr. Cluny—"

"Just a minute, Miss Lane," Chief Morehouse rose and strode hurriedly to the door. "Oh, Farrel, send a couple of men to find Chris Wiley, and bring him here—if he's in town," he added significantly. 'Now, Miss Lane—"

SHORT STORY

JUNE'S THEORY

By Jane Osborn.

June sat before the desk in her rather shabby little bedroom, pen in hand, a sheet of note paper spread before her. She intended to write to Rodney Mapes—but she found herself absently filling the sheet with the initials J. E. D., "Jim Edgerton Darrow, Jim Edgerton Darrow," she whispered to herself.

Yesterday had been her birthday and Rodney had sent there to the girls' boarding school, where she served as an instructor, a box of gorgeous red roses and a brief little note in which he had told her of his love and begged her to become his wife. Jim had let the day pass without even a note—yet June knew perfectly well that he had known it was her birthday. Obviously Rodney loved her—and just as obviously Jim didn't. During a wakeful night June had almost decided to write accepting Rodney's proposal—there was so much about him that she admired, so much that she almost loved. June tore up the note paper into fine scraps and threw them into her wastebasket. She felt that she was in no frame of mind to answer the letter then.

It was late afternoon. She picked up an afternoon paper and idly began to scan its pages. There was a section of one page devoted to rather inane sort of advice to the lovelorn. Sleepily June began to read. There was an answer to a young woman obviously suffering from the pangs of unrequited love. "I am sorry to say," ran the advice, "that there is no way to make a young man fall in love if he is not disposed to do so. The best thing for you to do is to try to forget. Perhaps there is some other young man who really cares for you who is really much more worth while."

June didn't read the rest of the answer but her sleepiness vanished, and in its place came a deep feeling of resentment toward the woman—or man—who wrote the advice. Of course it was possible to make a man love you. June had read once that any girl providing she was not positively repulsive could win the love of any man who was not already in love. June firmly believed it. If the girl did not succeed it was because she did not use the right tactics. Take Jim and herself. Of course she could make Jim love her because she knew she was attractive and she knew further that Jim was not interested in anyone else. The only trouble was that she had not gone about it in the right way. She had already tried to win Jim's love by making him jealous—by being cold and indifferent. She would now try the effect of making him think she really did care for him. Without difficulty now she went to her desk and wrote a little note to Rodney, in which she told him as kindly as possible that while she was very fond of him she did not want to marry him. She mailed it and then called Jim up at his office.

"Hello, Jim," she said archly. "You know yesterday was my birthday. Somebody sent me some lovely red roses, but you didn't even send a card." She paused almost terrified at her own boldness. Jim was making excuses. He had been very busy. He didn't think she cared about him anyway. In fact, he had actually forgotten that it was her birthday. There was an ote of flattered self-love in his voice that June did not exactly like, but this made it all the easier for her to go on. "Really I was only teasing you," she said. "I didn't expect you would remember—only it's terribly dull here at the school, and if you should ask me to go to the movies tomorrow night I think I'd say yes."

The next afternoon came a box of orchids with Jim's card enclosed. On the back June read—"With sincere apologies for dear little June. There was a tone of conceit about it decidedly irritating to her.

The following Sunday afternoon Jim came for her in his car to take her motoring. Somewhere on a lonely country lane he stopped the car and drawing June to him kissed her and only laughed rather triumphantly when she protested.

"Poor little June," he said when he had let her go and sat there stroking her hand. "I'd always liked you a lot. But, great Scott, I never thought you cared so much for me. You know I wouldn't do anything to make you unhappy. I don't know as it's a good plan to become actually engaged now—it might make trouble for you at the school. But suppose we have a sort of trial engagement. We'll play around together this winter—and in the spring if you still care for me the way you do now—why, I'll get you the nicest engagement ring you ever hoped to have."

June did not show her resentment—did not even withdraw her hand. Instead she looked straight in his eyes—eyes that beamed with gratified conceit.

"Jim dear, I hate to hurt your feelings. I've always liked you a lot. Only as you say a real engagement would be awkward."

Jim looked a trifle nonplussed. "Perhaps if I'd come right out with a proposal you'd have liked it better," he grinned.

"Perhaps," agreed June.

Back in the school June lost no time in telephoning to Rodney. She simply asked him to come to see her at the school as soon as he could, after supper. He was waiting for her in the dreary drawing-room when she came up from the drearier dining-room. She sat beside him on the little divan in a corner of the room.

"Rodney, I made a mistake," she said. "Rodney, I really love you—but it took a little time for me to find it out."

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 11, 1927

(Copyright, 1927, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Kindly stars dominate to-day, according to astrology, and it is a time for strenuous activity.

Much profit may be derived from friends who are in power, if advances are made while this rule prevails.

This is held an auspicious time to visit relatives who are inclined to make wills or to grant favors.

There is a sign making for foresight and wise judgment in most important matters. Investments made to-day should be fortunate.

Engineers and all who are interested in construction work of any sort will have a busy and profitable year. Much foreign demand for Americans is indicated.

Aviators are now subject to unfavorable planetary influences and should be exceedingly cautious.

Signs presaging severe storms, as well as other convulsions of nature, warn dwellers on Earth of many calamities.

Again earthquakes are foretold and volcanoes will become active, while tidal waves will do great damage.

New international alliances are indicated among European countries and there is a sign threatening to certain American interests.

Leagues in which religious prejudices are involved are forecast for this country as well as for those near by.

Jupiter rising is said as presaging activity in trade and the stock markets especially in Great Britain.

Cotton and wheat are subject to planetary influences, making for sudden fluctuations of value and great demands for them from unexpected quarters.

It is well not to travel on the ocean this month or next, for all the omens appear most threatening.

Persons whose birthdate it is should pass the year in steady, determined industry. Success will come through friends and employers.

Children born on this day have the augury of marvelous success in any career they choose. They will not lack money.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

This sleeveless jacket of light blue crepe de chine embroidered in rose, yellow and green is worn over a frock of white georgette.

The sleeveless jacket undoubtedly had its origin as a sports jacket—a garment that would provide extra warmth without imposing any restrictions upon the free motions of the arms. Even the bolero was probably made without sleeves for much the same reason, though the sport for which it was contrived was the hated one of bullfighting.

The sleeveless jacket has persisted in present-day fashion as something quite distinct from actual sports wear, though there are still sleeveless jackets for riding, for golf and for tennis. In this country the sleeveless jacket has not usually persisted as part of our summer wardrobes, because the additional warmth about the body so soon becomes undesirable. It may be seen now at the Southern winter resorts where it frequently introduces an attractive note of color to the costume consisting of short pleated skirt and soft silk blouse.

Sleeveless jackets have enjoyed quite a vogue in Paris this winter as effective and not too bulky house jackets to be worn over the afternoon or evening frock on cold days. Many of these have been of black velvet embroidered in color or metal. They are usually rather too long to assume the outline of the bolero.

These sleeveless velvet jackets are sometimes worn here as part of the luncheon or bridge costume. One clever woman recently transformed a simple crepe frock by adding a band of velvet about the skirt and providing herself with a sleeveless jacket of the same color. The frock was of plum color with the velvet of a somewhat darker tone.

For street wear this spring there are cloth and silk frocks with the skirt and sleeves of cloth and the bodice of silk. A sleeveless jacket of cloth lined with silk finishes the costume.

Two Kinds

You can get Quaker Oats in two forms—the large plump whole flake or the half flake, rolled thin, and partly cooked. Both are of the same Quaker Quality, famous in 58 countries.

If you wish to make porridge while you boil the coffee or make the toast, use Quick Quaker. It cooks in 3 minutes.

The 4 most important hours

When food must satisfy and "stand by" you

Most people have to do more than two-thirds of their most important work in the forenoon. To supply this energy, they need a breakfast that satisfies and will "stand by" them throughout the morning.

That is why health authorities urge good breakfasts—why the matchless flavour of Quaker Oats makes it the breakfast of millions of people. Its delicious taste awakens lazy appetites and thus promotes easy digestion. Its bulk and tender bran assist in the assimilation of other food and aid in one of nature's most important functions.

Quaker Oats is the most perfect of all cereal foods. It supplies the elements which build tissue and give energy, as well as the important vitamines and mineral salts. It contains 16% protein and 65% carbohydrates.

For better mornings, have Quaker Oats for breakfast. No other is "just as good", for no other has 50 years' experience in grain selection and milling behind it. See that the picture of the friendly Quaker is on the package.

Steady Tone Prevails On Mining Exchange

TORONTO, Feb. — (Canadian Press.)— Fairly steady tone prevailed in this morning's session of the standard mining exchange. Victory Silver was the active leader and advanced a point to 11. Barry Hollinger was the next most active stock and weakened under selling pressure, closing at 68 1-2, off 1-2. McIntyre was weak feature of the dividend paying golds, selling down 25 to 14.30. Noranda held the spotlight amongst the unlisted stocks, advancing 15 to 20.90. The Quebec issues on the whole were steady.

Wheat Rallies Quickly Heavy Foreign Shipments

CHICAGO, Feb. 10. — Wheat rallied quickly to-day from initial declines that were associated with larger shipments from Argentina and from Russia. Selling pressure here, however, had abated and considerable eastern buying was in evidence. Starting unchanged to 1-2c off wheat sagged little more but then rose to above yesterday's finish. Corn and oats swayed with wheat, corn opening unchanged to 1-4c lower and subsequently scoring gains. Provisions held steady.

ARE YOU SLEEPLESS?

Some Hints On How To Overcome This Most Serious Trouble.

Some people lie awake for hours before they can fall asleep. Others waken suddenly in the small hours and worry over trifles, while some doze fitfully all night and never feel rested on rising. Sleeplessness is caused by a disordered condition of the nervous system. It means that the nerves are not receiving proper nutrition, and in the quiet of night, when the muscles relax and heart settles down to repair the system, the nerve grow restless and cry out for the nourishment the blood cannot supply.

It is very unwise—more, it is dangerous to rely on narcotics. What is needed is a good tonic to build up the blood. For this purpose no other tonic is so highly recommended as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This because they assist the digestive organs to take blood-making ingredients from the food, and so supply the nerves with the punishment they need. With satisfied nerves sleep comes easily and naturally.

Not only do Dr. Williams' Pink Pills help the nerves. Their main function is to enrich and increase the blood, and as the blood supplied the whole body, new life is given to the entire system. Better sleep, steady nerves, improved appetite, increased vigor—all these can be yours by taking Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Begin them today. Sold by all medicine dealers, or by mail post paid, at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Interest In Rails Chilled Industrials Return Strong

NEW YORK, Feb. 10 (Canadian Press).—Speculative operations for the advance shifted from the rails to the industrials in today's stock market. With public enthusiasm for the rails temporarily chilled by yesterday's demoralizing market in those issues, operators for the rise began bidding up selected industrials and specialties in an endeavor to obtain an outside following. Baldwin was again an outstanding feature, touching 176, the highest price ever recorded, with short covering operations playing prominent part in the advance.

Other railroad equipments followed the lead of Baldwin, American Brake Shoe and Foundry jumping five points, and American Locomotive, Lima Locomotive and American Car and Foundry climbing two points or more.

Massey Harris Is Again A Very Active Leader

TORONTO, Feb. 10 (Canadian Press)—Massey Harris was again the overwhelmingly active leader on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. On turnover of more than six thousand shares it climbed 5 1-4 to 90, easing only to 89 at the noon close. Seagram was the next most active issue and like most of the 23 3-8. Brazilian gained five eighths list was firm, advancing 7-8 at at 118 3-8 and City Dairy, gaining one at 90, was another firm spot in the regular list. Oil issues came into prominence in the unlisted section and the new British American Oil led with an advance of five eighths at 23 5-8. Imperial Oil was three-eighths higher at 4 and International Petroleum up 5-8 at 33 5-8.

RECORD TEST RUN MADE WITH ESSEX SUPER-SIX SEDAN

An average speed of 53.8 miles an hour for 24 continuous hours was hung up by one of the new type Essex Super-Sixes on the Culver City, Cal., track, according to official word receive here by C. L. Brewer, Hudson-Essex dealer and distributor.

This test, according to Mr. Brewer, was completed by Walter M. Murphy, the Los Angeles distributor, and was officially observed and scored by Los Angeles newspapermen and by the Western Union. After the Essex had dashed off its 1,291 miles on the track, it completed a trip up Mount Wilson and return, and was placed for display in the distributor's Los Angeles showroom.

"When this test was undertaken," said Mr. Brewer, "the programme was simply to equal the 50-miles-an-hour average which has been promised by the Hudson organization for the Essex Super-Six. To be safe, this speed was somewhat exceeded early in the 24-hour run, so that even when fog and a damp track handicapped the latter part of the run, the average was substantially better than had been planned.

"Such a test takes more out of a car than ten times the mileage under usual driving conditions, yet the car was immediately started on the Mount Wilson climb which involved entirely different operating qualities. No difficulty at all was experienced in either part of the test. The top speed made on the track was around 63 miles an hour.

"We consider that this test backs up our statement that the Essex Super-Six is the most enduring Essex ever built. The old Essex Four was admittedly a remarkable car, yet it never equalled the performance just completed at Culver City. At the Indianapolis races, even, the cars—though their speed is much higher—operate only a total of 500 miles as against this Essex's 1,291. This record was made, too, not with a stripped car, but with a regulation Essex sedan.

"Our Los Angeles distributor, Mr. Murphy, declares that he has seen many tests run at Culver City, but that never has a motor car finished more successfully or in more perfect mechanical condition than this Essex Super-Six. No mechanical changes or adjustments whatever were made during the run, and the car was running smoothly and easily at the finish."—BREWER MOTOR SALES. 1d, 35, 1925

NOEL'S CAMERA CAUGHT VIEW MISSING MEN

Recorded Passage of Irvine and Mallory Towards Everest's Peak.

NEVER RETURNED.

Intrepid Explorers Carried British Fame Into Strange Land.

To travel over Tibet, the unfriendly—to visit the fortress monasteries of the Lamas, to venture into valleys, snowfields and glaciers never before seen by man, and finally to climb to the top of the wonderful mountain, venerated as the Goddess Mountain of the World—these were the reasons for the 1924 Mt. Everest Expedition, which will be visualized in story and wonderful motion pictures when Captain J. B. Noel appears here on the evening of Feb. 25th, at St. Paul's church, under arrangements being made by the Kiwanis Club.

Colonel Norton was in command with Captain Noel as official photographer; Sheppard, in charge of transportation and luggage; Dr. Hingston, doctor and naturalist; the intrepid assistants, Irvine and Mallory, who now sleep in the snows near the top; and Odell, McDonald, Somervell and Beetham—these names are now gilt-lettered in the Book of Adventure, for they scaled to a height of 23,000 feet. Five hundred others took an active part in establishing food stations, camps and equipment relays.

It was Capt. Noel's camera that saught the farewell photographs of the two who lost their lives. It was Capt. Noel who recorded the whole drama of the expedition through the unfailing eye of the motion picture camero.

It is Captain Noels' story through movies, still pictures and the spoken word, that tells more granhically than any written record the epic drama of all time. Captain Noel is coming direct from London with his pictures and story, for a limited number of pictures. The pictures have been the sensation of London, Paris, and Berlin during the past two years.

AGREEMENT ON HANKOW MADE

LONDON, Feb. 10 (Canadian Press)—Resumed negotiations between Charge D'Affairs O'Malley and the Cantonese foreign minister at Hankow have resulted in an agreement regarding the British concession there; Sir Austen Chamberlain told the House of Commons to-day.

Sir Austen said the agreement provided that the Hankow concession would be returned to the British Municipal Council, which would formally hand it over to a China-British municipality modelled on that already existing in the former German concessions.

The agreement also provided that the Chinese Nationalist government would seek arrangements by negotiations and would neither use or countenance force.

If the agreement was signed and foreign minister Chen accepted Great Britain's assurance that the troops would only be used in a grave emergency, Sir Austen said, then only the first troops already enroute to Shanghai would be landed there, while further troops from England and the Mediterranean would be concentrated at Hong Kong.

Troops Pass Hong Kong

HONG KONG, Feb. 10 (United Press)—Two battalions of Indian troops from Calcutta, scheduled to arrive here to-day, continued on their way toward Shanghai without stopping. Naval wireless reports to-day said Chinese troops had fired on British steamers in the neighborhood of Ichang, a Yangtse river port above Hankow.

Two battalions of white British troops from England left Hong Kong for Shanghai yesterday.

COBB ACCEPTS ATHLETICS' BID

Will Draw Between $60,000 and $75,000—Contract is For One Year.

MAKES RECORD.

(By the Associated Press.)

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 10.—Tyrus Raymond Cobb will wear the uniform of the Philadelphia Athletics this year.

The veteran of 22 American League pennant campaigns has accepted the terms of Manager Connie Mack, and probably will close his base ball career as a member of Mack's team. The contract is for the season of 1927, and Cobb has announced that he will retire from the game at the close of the season.

The "Georgia Peach" announced at the Philadelphia Sport Writers' dinner, where he was a guest last night, that he had accepted Mack's offer, the terms of which, he said, would have to be disclosed by the manager of the Athletics if they were to be made public. Mack declined to discuss the financial details.

Persons close to both Cobb and Mack said the contract called for $60,000—$25,000 for signing, $25,000 salary and a $10,000 bonus. Others placed the amount at $75,000. Either figure would be the highest salary ever paid a base ball player.

There had been keen rivalry between the Athletics and St. Louis Browns for Cobb's services since he was cleared of base ball scandal charges by Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis. Other American League teams also were said to have made him offers, but managers Mack and Dan Howley made special trips to Cobb's home in Augusta, Ga., in their efforts to get him. Howley was reported to have offered the former Detroit manager $50,000 to join the Browns.

"I think this is the proper spot for me," Cobb said at his hotel yesterday, "and I am glad to be with the Athletics. They have a mighty fine chance for the pennant. I only hope that I will be spared any illness or accidents, for I am just rarin' to show the public that I can still reach dizzy heights in base ball. Because of certain incidents that received prominence during the off season, I call this 'vindication year' and I am out to play the kind of base ball that will make folks write letters to their cousins in the country.

Sees a Big Year.

"I never felt better. My legs are strong and I can go a fast clip from the kickoff to the finish. I have always had much admiration for Connie Mack. I am strong for his ideas and policies and am glad to lay down the managerial reins of the Detroit team and play for him this year as a private in the ranks."

Mack announced that Cobb would play in right field and would be third in the batting order. With Zach Wheat at left, Simmons in center, and Lamar and French in reserve, the Athletics' pilot said he had an outfield of which any club should be proud.

"Cobb will add power, experience and brains to the team," added Mack.

The Athletics, who finished third last year, will start the 1927 season with two new men in the outfield and three in the infield. In addition to Cobb and Wheat, they are Eddie Collins, former manager of the Chicago White Sox, who will play second base; Joe Boley, formerly of the Baltimore Internationals, at shortstop, and Branom, obtained from the Kansas City team of the American Association, at first base. Manager Howley, of the St. Louis Browns, recently called Boley the greatest shortstop he had ever seen in uniform.

Based on reported prices paid for new players in building up his 1927 team, Manager Mack has spent approximately $250,000. Boley and Branom cost a total of $125,000, Wheat's contract and bonus totaled $18,500; Collins' contract $20,000, and Cobb's between $60,000 and $75,000. In addition to these, several pitchers and an outfielder were purchased from Texas League clubs at a total outlay of $15,000.

In the third round of the Intermediate series Oshawa plays in Lindsay, Friday, February 11. The return game will be played in Oshawa Monday, February 14.

Referees appointed for Friday are as follows:

Senior Series.

Parkdale at Galt — Alvin Schlegel, Preston.

Marlboros at Peterboro — Harry Batstone, Kingston.

TRIS SPEAKER'S SALARY

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(AP)—Gossip among base ball men here yesterday was that both Tris Speaker and Ty Cobb would be paid $75,000 for their work the coming season.

One story was that Clark Griffith, owner of the Senators, met Speaker and asked him his terms some time ago.

"Seventy-five thousand."

"I'll give it to you."

The highest salaried man in base ball has been John McGraw, manager of the New York Giants, who draws down $65,000 yearly. Babe Ruth has been the highest salaried player, his contract calling for $52,000 yearly. Rogers Hornsby has been ranked next, with the terms of his two-year agreement with the Giants believed to call for $40,000 per annum.

Ruth, who is expected to negotiate with the Yankee management for the renewal of his expired contract this month, has been reported as seeking sums ranging between $75,000 and $100,000 for his yearly home run clouting in the future.

Ruth, who is 33 years old, has sent a check for $33,000 to the Bank of Manhattan Co. in New York as the first installment of a $100,000 trust fund to provide against the time when four-base clouts no longer hide in his war clubs.

Return games will be a football novelty in the Western Conference this season. Michigan and Minnesota are to have two meeting on the gridiron and the same will be true of Indiana and Northwestern universities.

CAPACITY CROWD FOR MARLBORO GAME FRIDAY

Second Place at Stake in Senior Clash Here.

TOUGH FIGHT.

Marlboros Will Battle To Avoid Being Eliminated.

A victory for the Petes here tomorrow night against Marlboros means second place for Eddie Wright's boys and a play-off series with Varsity Grads for group honors, while a loss would mean that the Petes would have to beat the Grads in Toronto or Toronto Canoe Club win from Marlboros to give the local crew second position.

The Petes hope to finish the struggle to-morrow night by taking the Marlboros into camp, but they realize that they have a tough task ahead of them. The Dukes were beaten last night by Varsity Grads, having a bad night all round, but if they get back to their usual form against the Petes, the blue and white are going to have a busy night holding them.

Harry Batstone has been assigned the referee's job, and will start the game at 8.30 o'clock sharp.

There has been a rush for reserved seats, and a capacity crowd is certain.

When an English professional football player is bought by another club he gets his share of the purchase price the sum of $750 for every year he has been with the club he is leaving.

CANADIENS GET YOUNG PLAYERS

Unofficial Reports Say They Have Obtained Galt Terriers Player.

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 10.—Albert Gauthier, star left-winger of the Galt Terriers in the Senior Ontario Hockey Association, will play for Canadiens for the remainder of the season, according to unofficial reports prevalent here. Gauthier practiced with the Canadiens at the Forum Tuesday and made a favorable impression. He is a short, shunky player, much on the lines of Carson Cooper, injured forward, who is out with a broken collarbone.

Gauthier's Galt team was practically eliminated from the Ontario Hockey Association when beaten by Preston three nights ago. He immediately came to Montreal to discuss the offer which Manager Hart had made some time ago and which he renewed after Cooper's injury.

It is also understood that Canadiens have received a favorable reply from George Conroy, youthful defence player with the St. Paul team in the American minor pro. hockey loop. Conroy is expected to join the Canadiens when they arrive at Chicago for their game there tomorrow night. Conroy weighs 175 pounds and is a left-defence man, who will act as relief for Herb Gardiner, who has been going at top speed for 60 minutes in every game.

The salary limit of professional football players in England is $40 a week, with a bonus of $10 for every championship match won.

In Belgium a big football match is regarded as an affair primarily of social importance, to be attended by cabinet ministers, aristocracy and women as well as men.

Following Princeton's lead, it is expected that practically all of the big football teams this season will make extensive use of the "huddle" system of giving signals on the gridiron.

Claude Oliver is a good goal keeper. As a result of his efforts Lindsay Intermediates advance into the next round of the O.H.A. playoffs while Havelock's team in the same series goes into the discard for another year. Last night, at Brock street rink, Havelock had most of the play, especially in shots on goal, but Oliver turned all their efforts aside, while the Scugogville team managed to get in one goal in each period for a 3-0 victory. It was Havelock's home game, played here because of lack of a suitable rink. The score in Lindsay was 5-3.

It was a great game. Each team came to Peterboro backed up by hundreds of rooters who arrived in special trains. Expecting a real scrap, Peterboro fans turned out in large numbers, and as a result the rink was nearly full. What is more, not one of them could say he didn't get his money's worth. For those who like scientific hockey there was the clever playing of Wilford, Davis, and Wright. Those who like to see the big fellows bump each other were provided with plenty by Hooper, Carew, Coombs, and Quinn. Every member of both teams helped in providing excitement at breath taking moments.

In only one respect did the Lindsay forwards have an edge on Havelock. That was in condition. For twelve or fifteen minutes of each period the majority of the play would be centred around the Lindsay blue line. The C.P.R. boys outskated and out-stickhandled their opponents. Then they would fade and for the last few minutes the white sweatered crew would be all over Havelock territory. The use they made of this advantage is shown by the fact that two of their three goals came at the ends of the periods.

The play of both teams was of the same type. All the forwards, and some times the defence men as well, chased the puck from one end of the rink to the other. They bunched together, leaving wide openings of which a more finished team would take instant advantage. When the puck was in a corner the opposing forwards were left uncovered in front of the nets. When a man rushed he would be accompanied by team mates, who rarely received a pass, but who were on hand to pick the puck up if he should be checked, or to sweep in on the goal for a rebound.

The ice had a great deal to do with the type of play. Sticky from the start, it became worse as play progressed and carrying the puck became a feat of some difficulty. Shooting from the blue line and following in for the rebound was the accepted method of play for most of the game. Both teams tired towards the finish and signals for relief came thick and fast.

Wright and McWilliams were outstanding on the Havelock team, while Neal also played a good game. Wilford, Davis, and Coombs were the stars of the visiting aggregation. Little, however, separated the leaders from other members of their team.

Referee Ernie Collett treated the boys fairly liberally when he handed out only thirteen penalties. Play was strenuous towards the end, bumps and pokes being handed out freely, and he could easily have ruled off a few more. Supporters of both teams clamored loudly at various times for the punishment of offenders who escaped the referee's eye. Hooper was the bad man of the night, using his weight too freely, while Carew was not far behind. Most of the players carried their sticks high in the last period.

First Period.

Lindsay broke away from the opening face-off but a body check behind the blue line stopped Reeves, who had the puck and play swept back to the Lindsay end, Brennan securing the first shot on goal, a bullet like drive from the left boards. Soon after Hooper secured the first penalty when he added a push with his fist to a legal body check. While he was off Coombs opened the scoring, counting when he grabbed a loose puck in front of the Havelock net and giving Neal no chance to save. Wright and McWilliams made a determined effort to get it back, the wing sending in a hard one from the blue line and the Marmora boy firing the rebound right back at Oliver. Wright came back again and was foiled, and then Hooper tested the Lindsay goalkeeper.

Killen was ruled off for a body check and Havelock attempted to take advantage, Wright and McWilliams again bombarding the goal to no effect. Wilford relieved on a fine rush but missed the net by inches. The Easterners came back and sent a number of point blank shots at Oliver on passes from the corners but found him too good for them. Hooper and Carew served terms on the penitent bench, and when they came out Brennan went in. Pollock went around the Lindsay net in an attempt to beat Oliver, but was turned aside. Reeves carried play to the opposite end without counting. Brennan checked the Lindsay rush and went through after the puck in an apparently onside play but was called back. His shot, which he got away just as the bell rang, hit Oliver's pads.

Second Period.

Carew opened the second period by drawing a penalty for tripping. While he was off McWilliams bombarded the Lindsay goal. Carew came back but was speedily chased for bodying a man into the boards. Caesar, Wright and McWilliams rained drives at Oliver, and on one of them the Havelock supporters raised a cheer. From the penalty box the puck appeared to have gone in, and it was claimed by many of those close to that end of the rink that it had gone through. As a result of this play the goal umpire was changed at the end of the period. Coombs and Wilford combined, to be followed a moment later by Williams, but Neal was unbeatable in the Havelock net. Wilford then counted for Lindsay by lobbing a slow shot from the blue line, the puck bouncing over Neal's stick for a counter. Wright led the Havelock attack which followed, but the efforts were of no avail, the team being too tired to go in fast for rebounds.

Third Period.

The third period was marked by penalties, seven being issued. Wilford had the first shot, hitting the post with a high drive which fooled Neal. Havelock tried some combination attacks but failed due to the sticky ice. Hooper went off for tripping and Killen for cross checking. Play went from end to end, both goals being in danger. Quinn was the net delinquent, being penalized for bodying an opponent into the boards. While he was off Brennan gave a finished exhibition of ragging the puck, holding it for quite a while in spite of Davis' efforts to get it Wilford and Reeves, Wright and McWilliams, then contributed their efforts which failed at the goal mouth. Hooper drew his fourth penalty for a trip, and Brennan followed immediately after for shooting the puck past the referee. Wilford evened matters a little by tripping, so that there were only nine men left on the ice. With the teams playing in skeleton formation Williams went down and passed to Coombs right in front of the net for a neat goal. Two of the delinquents returned, but Hooper, whose term had been longer, was unable to get back before play was called.

Several members of the Oshawa team, which plays Lindsay next week, watched the game.

Ruth, 33, Deposits $33,000, Part Of Off-Season Earnings

Babe Ruth celebrated his thirty-third birthday in Los Angeles by establishing a trust fund of $33,000 for himself in the Bank of Manhattan Company, New York. This is part of the money he has saved from vaudeville and picture making this winter. In a telegram to the bank George Herman said that he is planning a $100,000 trust fund, but is holding off until he has signed a Yankee contract. If all goes well, Babe said, he will increase the fund to $50,000 by June 1, and make it an even $100,000 by the end of the year.

R. G. C. WON FAST GAME 4-0

Combination Was the Main Factor in Getting Goals.

The R.G.C. Hockey Team went in to battle against the Maple Leafs on Friday last at the Mark street rink. Though lacking practice the P. G. C. defeated their opponents 4-0 in a harder battle than the score would indicate. The Maple Leafs have no place to practice and showed the lack of this necessity but all admit that with a good rink they would make an A1 team.

Howard Macdonald refereed and handled the game nicely.

For the R.G.C. the goaler, Max Clarke, starred in stopping many dangerous shots. C. Clarke and L. Cheu also played exceptionally well.

The scorers were: R.G.C., C. Clarke, 1; L. Cheu, 2; . McWilliams, 1.

TOMMY TOTHILL HAS HAD GREAT CAREER

Startled Billiard World When Mere Youngster.

Tommy Tothill, billiard player, demonstrator and lecturer, who is billed for an engagement at the Canadian Legion hall to-night, is undoubtedly one of the outstanding personalities amongst the experts of the great English game. Born in Lancashire, surprisingly close to the end of the last century, Tom, or "Tum," as he is known in the county of clogs, has a record to his credit that few veterans can surpass. Shunning toys for the fascinating click of the ivories, he became the boy wizard of the age, realizing the student's greatest ambition, a century break, before celebrating his thirteenth birthday.

As boy champion of the United Kingdom, he reigned from 1904 to 1907, defending this title against the present world's champion Tommy Newman, in 1905.

With the coming of war, Tom ceased to nurse the ivory cannons, to become acquainted with cannons of a different calibre, which held his attention for five years. With the signing of the armistice, however, Tom was soon back on the job, and annexed the north of England championship, defeating Jimmie Harris in one of the greatest uphill battles of his career.

Just previous to leaving England on his present world's tour, Tothill defeated two of the finest veterans of the game, one being Tommy Reece the other, no less, than the world-famous J. Inman, who was world champion 1910 to 1920.

At the conclusion of the session, Tothill will give part of his famous demonstrated billiard lecture.

WIN FOR KEENE.

KEENE, Feb. 10.—Keene defeated Burns' Bridge at hockey on Monday night at Keene in a strenuous game. The score was 8-4. A large crowd of supporters accompanied the Burns' Bridge team.

A hole in one is the big thrill in the life of every golfer.

It is the no-hit game of baseball, a run for the length of the field for a touchdown of football.

True, luck is more or less the deciding factor, but the drive must be straight for the pin to turn the trick. A hole in one does not necessarily signify class. Many a novice has performed the feat.

Jock Hutchison is one of the leading golfers who has qualified for membership in the hole-in-one club. He has two to his credit.

It is an interesting coincidence that both of Hutchison's holes in one were made on the St. Andrew's links. He first turned the trick on the St. Andrew's links just outside of New York, while the other hole in one was made in the British open of 1921 on the St. Andrew's links, Scotland. He almost repeated. Here is how Jock told the story to me.

"Lots of players have made a hole in one in exhibitions but seldom in national tournaments.

"In 1921, the year I won the British open, I made the eighth hole in one. It is a short hole and my drive was straight for the pin. Imagine my surprise when I discovered I had holed out.

"The ninth hole at St. Andrew's is a trifle better than 300 yards. Elated at my success in making the eighth hole in one, I took a healthy cut at the ball and got off a beauty that I knew must have carried to the pin.

"Reaching the green, I discovered that my ball was within three inches of the pin. The ball had carried to the pin with unerring accuracy, struck it, and rebounded a few inches. Those standing around the green said it would have dropped in for a one had the pin been removed.

"I have always regretted it didn't. Making two successive holes in one in the British open would have given the boys something to shoot at."

TEN DRIVERS SET FOR START

Annal Contest of New England Sled Dog Club To-day.

VETERANS COMPETE.

WOLFBORO, N.H., Feb., 10.—(Canadian Press).—Ten of the leading Canadian and American dog team drivers last night were awaiting the start today of the second annual point-to-point race conducted by the New England Sled Dog Club. The distance to be covered during the three days contest totals 133 1-2 miles over snow-packed roads in the foothills of the White Mountains.

Emil St. Goddard, 19-year-old musher from Le Pas Man., was designated as the first starter today. He comes fresh from his recent victory in the Manitoba dog derby and has been ranked as a favorite to win. Another favorite is Leon-Nard Seppala, veteran Alaskan dog driver and hero of the dash to Nome with diptheria antitoxin during the epidemic there two years ago. Frank Dupois, winner of the international dog derby at Quebec last year, was also looked upon as a strong contender.

CRISIS LOOMS IN MAJOR LEAGUES

May Cut Off Relations Entirely With Three Minor Leagues.

PRICE PROVISO.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(Canadian Press).—The possibility that the major leagues may cut off relations entirely with the three class AA minor league—American Association, International and Pacific Coast—loomed yesterday as a sequel to the present revival of the draft controversy.

To consider what course they will take and as evidence of the gravity with which they regarded the situation, a joint meeting of the American and National League club owners will be held in June, probably in New York.

The fresh crisis in major-minor league affairs has been brought about by the rejection of the proposed new draft agreement by the International and Pacific Coast circuits.

The proposed new agreement called for restoration of the "universal draft" in the big minor league, with a probision that the price for selected players be increased from $5,000 to $7,500.

CANADIAN DIVIDES HONORS IN OPENING SKATING EVENTS

Charles Gorman, of Saint John, Receives Big Ovation.

LIGHTNING FAST.

Several Juniors Do Well, But Fail To Break Into the Finals.

SARANAC LAKE, N.Y., Feb. 10 (Canadian Press).—Charles Gorman of Saint John, N.B., Canadian champion, divided honors yesterday with O'Neil Farrell, of the Midwest Athletic Club, Chicago, in the opening events of the International outdoor amateur speed skating championship.

Each won first and second places in senior events and both victories were upsets.

Always lightning fast in the 400-yard dash, Gorman was regarded as almost a sure winner, but the Chicago flier passed him within two yards of the tape. Farrell, favored to win the mile, was unable to overcome the lead established by the Canadian champion when he sprinted away from the pack at the beginning of the last lap.

Henry Nelson, Farrell's teammate, was not up to the form he showed last week at Detroit, when he took honors in the national championships. Valentine Bialis of Lake Placid, defending champion, was placed third in the mile.

Senior events to-day include the one-sixth mile and three miles.

Gorman's performance yesterday got him a big ovation from the crowd, and his winning of the mile made him a high favorite for the title.

Edgar Snodgrass, of Saint John, had a tough break when he fell ten yards from the finish in the semi-final of the senior 440. At that time he appeared a sure winner.

Several of the Canadian juniors did well in the preliminary heats, but could not break into the finals.

Boxing Commission Retained With All Members For a Year

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 10. — The State Reorganization Commission, headed by Senator Walter W. Westall, of Westchester, at a meeting yesterday, definitely decided to retain the present State Athletic Commission, regulating boxing, and the State Racing Commission, which exercises certain regulatory functions, in their present form, and with their present personnel, for another year at least. Secretary of State Robert Moses said he would make no changes in either agency for the present.

NEW YORK TRADE KELLY

Obtain Eddie Roush, of Cincinnati Reds as Result of Deal.

NO CASH INVOLVED.

NEW YORK, Feb. 10.—(Canadian Press).—The playing cast of the National League was given another sensational and unexpected shake up yesterday when the New York Giants traded George Kelly, their 32-year-old first baseman for Eddie Roush, outfield star of the Cincinnati Reds. It was a straight player transaction with NO cash involved, the New York club announced.

The chief advantage of the transaction to New York was seen as adding unquestioned strength to McGraws outfield. Roush for several years has ranked among the most brilliant outfielders in organized baseball. He has been constantly in the .300 class and led the league in 1917 and 1919.

GRADS PILE UP LARGE SCORE

Beat Marlboros 12-1, Outclassing Them All the Way.

ONE-SIDED GAME.

TORONTO, Feb. 10. — The University of Toronto Alumni team gave a wonderful display of skating, stickhandling and combination in overwhelming Marlboros, 12 to 1 in their senior O.H.A. game at the Arena Gardens last night. It was a one-sided contest practically throughout, though Marlboros, weak defensively tried hard on the attack but were outclassed. The result leaves Marlboros position in O. H. A. Group No. 2 race, just this: They must defeat Toronto Canoe Club next week, win in Peterboro on Friday, and the Petes lose to the Grads at Varsity to get into the play off for the section championship. They think they can do it.

REBELLION ENDS WITH SURRENDER OF LISBON PARTY

Rebels Yield Arsenal To Government Troops and Make Escape.

MANY CASUALTIES.

Heavy Property Damage Also Caused By Fighting in Capital.

Portugal has passed through another revolution and President Carmona's dictatorship is still in power.

Despatches from Lisbon to-day confirmed that the revolutionaries there surrendered after a 44 hour bombardment of the naval arsenal, their principal stronghold, and today the bodies of those who fell during the fighting in various parts of the city were being sought in the wreckage.

The number of casualties is not known, but despatches say many were killed, including non-combatants.

The movement in Lisbon was started in support of a revolt at Oporto, the second largest city in Portugal which broke out a week ago and continued until Monday night, when the revolutionaries surrendered.

General Souza Diaz, one of the chief rebels, has been reported among the killed at Oporto, but this has not been confirmed.

PARIS, Feb. 10 (Canadian Press) —Portugal's latest revolution is over, says a telegram received by the Portuguese diplomatic representative here from minister of foreign affairs. The revolutionaries in Lisbon surrendered last night. The rebels surrendered after being beaten in eevry quarter and those who were barricaded in the arsenal fled. A cruiser which joined the rebels yesterday was silenced by shore batteries. The crew ran up the white flag and took refuge aboard a German boat.

Lisbon Quiet

LONDON, Feb. 10 (Canadian Press)—Surrender of the Revolutionaries in Lisbon at 10.30 o'clock last night, is reported in a Reuter despatch from the Portuguese capital this morning. The correspondent said the city was quiet and that order had been restored throughout the country. A large number of persons, including non-combatants, were killed or wounded in Lisbon during the fighting between the Insurrectionists and the Loyal forces and the property damage is very extensive.

The insurgents, who had entrenched themselves in an arsenal, surrendered after forty-four hours of intense bombardment from field guns and machine guns. To add to the discomfort of the Revolutionaries, an airplane dropped three torpedoes into the arsenal, doing much damage.

Started on Monday

The revolution broke out in the capital at noon on Monday, supported by naval men, a portion of the Republican guard, police, and a large number of civilians. The insurgent's erected barricades in various parts of the city and the government took energetic measures to crush the movement, ordering out all loyal detachments of the Lisbon garrison, who directed an intense machine gun fire on the insurrectionists.

By orders of the government the cruisers whose crews were suspected of favoring the revolt were promptly disarmed. Thus, it is believed, Lisbon was spared the horrors of naval bombardments. The insurgents had seized the naval arsenal and the general post office, preventing news from leaving the capital.

Aimed at Dictatorship.

BADAJOZ, Spain, Feb. 10 (United Press).—Interviewed by the United Press at the Portuguese border, five miles from here, a high Government official who said he was neutral in the present conflict, said the aim of the revolutionists was to substitute constitutional government for the dictatorship in Portugal. The rebels surrendered at Oporto, he said, to end the terrific bombardment of the Government forces which threatened to destroy the city.

The rebels were outnumbered.

From other sources it was learned that the revolt at Lisbon was initiated by Republican Guard Marines. Their theory was to take the city before the Government forces were reinforced by their troops at Oporto, but the rebels were immediately surrounded.

In 1890 Mr. Fleming married. In 1895 he ran his first election, a Provincial bye-election in Carelton County, and was defeated. In the general elections of 1899 he was again defeated in his home constituency. In a bye-election in 1900, he was elected to the Provincial Legislative Assembly for Carleton County and held the seat until his retirement, owing to ill-health, in 1914. He was re-elected in every intervening election and in 1908 he entered the government of Premier Sir Douglas Hazen, as Provincial Secretary and Receiver General. When Sir Douglas Hazen left Provincial politics to enter the Cabinet of Sir Robert Borden in 1911, Hon. Mr. Fleming became Premier of New Brunswick. He went to the country in 1912 and was returned with 46 seats out of 48 which comprise the comprise the Legislative Assembly.

In 1912 the construction of the St. John Valley Railway was commenced and Mr. Fleming moved from Hartland to Woodstock, where he has made his home since. It was in 1912, also, that the University of New Brunswick conferred upon the Premier the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

In 1914, Hon. Mr. Fleming retired from politics. He had been suffering from an ailment that had necessitated treatment abroad. During his periods of good health he directed his lumbering operations. In 1919 his life was despaired of, but his rugged constitution carried him safely through the crisis and until 1924 he was in good health. In 1924 he was again stricken but recovered sufficiently to enter the Federal campaign of 1925 and was elected in Carleton-Victoria, defeating his Progressive opponent by 1,900 votes. In the general Federal elections of 1926 he was again returned by Carelton-Victoria with a majority of 1,100.

Hon. J. K. Fleming was prominently mentioned in the charges against State Senator A. R. Gould of Maine of improper campaign activities which resulted in a hearing before the Senate elections committee at Washington. It was charged that money had been paid by Senator Gould's organization to the ex-Premier of New Brunswick in connection with railway construction contracts and Hon. Mr. Fleming was invited, early in 1927, to go to Washington to give evidence at the investigation held to study the charges against Senator Gould. At the time the invitation was wired, however, Mr. Fleming, who was directing his lumbering interests at Juniper, was again stricken and rushed to Woodstock, where a serious operation was performed.

There were five children, three sons and two daughters. Mr. Fleming was a Liberal-Conservative in politics and a member of the Presbyterian Church.

Made Miserable By Eczema In Blisters Cuticura Healed

"Eczema broke out in watery blisters on my face, hands, arms and limbs and made me miserable. After the blisters broke sore eruptions formed and they were terribly itchy, causing me to lose my rest both day and night. I could not do any work, and could not touch water. My clothing aggravated the breaking out on my limbs.

"I was treated and tried different remedies but they did not help me. I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and purchased some and in less than a month I was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. W. Robinson, Box 144, Holditch St., Bracebridge, Ont.

Use Cuticura Soap, Ointment and Talcum to promote and maintain skin purity, skin comfort and skin health; the Soap to cleanse and purify, Ointment to soothe and heal, and Talcum to powder and refresh.

Sample Each Free by Mail. Address Canadian Depot: "Cuticura, Ltd., Montreal." Price, Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c. Talcum 25c.

In securing the services of Captain John B. Noel, of the British exploration party that came so near to conquering Mount Everest, for a lecture in St. Paul's Church this month, Kiwanis Club believes that it is performing community service.

Everyone thrilled to the story in type of how Irvine and Mallory left the party in a last attempt to gain the summit. Those who attend the lecture-cinema on February 25 will actually see, through the eye of the camera, these hardy explorers waving farewell and disappearing on their last great adventure.

The expedition, the wild Tibetan country, the majesty of Everest, all are wonderfully pictured by Noel, and his accompanying lecture will make this a memorable evening.

IN MEMORIAM

GODDARD. — In loving memory of our dear Mother, Mrs. Mary E. Goddard, who passed away Feb. 10th, 1923:

February brings sad memories
Of a loved one gone to rest,
Who will always be remembered
By those who loved her best.

The happy hours we once enjoyed,
How sweet their memory clings!
But death has left a vacant place
That never can be filled.

But some day we hope to meet her
And to behold her smile,
Where love reigns evermore,
And friends do not depart.

No Canadian Troops to China Says Premier King

Offensive Starts Against Cantonese By Northern Armies

Chang Notifies Adherents That Advance Into Province of Honan is Under Way—Says He Will Brook No Opposition.

FOREIGN SHIPS COMMANDEERED TO BRING TROOPS TO HANKOW

Wu Makes Spirited Reply to Chang's Declaration—Challenges Him to Declare Number of Troops He is Sending.

PEKING, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press).—The allied war lords of the north have begun their long-expected drive to hurl back the Cantonese invaders into the southland. North against south, the struggle is on to determine the control of all China.

Chang Tso-Lin, dictator of Manchuria for many years, made the announcement yesterday in telegrams to generals of the northern alliance, which he heads, as the power behind the Peking government.

Through Chihli and Shantung provinces for the northern troops are advancing to recapture Hankow from the Cantonese, who have been using it as their Central China base to prepare for their further march toward Peking and also Shanghai.

The northerners will not halt at the Yangtse River, said Chang, but will force the Cantonese back through Hunan province to their home province of Kwangtung, from which they began the northward march last Spring that gained them domination over half of China.

In a vigorous telegram to generals of Marshal Wu Pei-Fu, Chang notified those adherents of the once dominant war lord of Central China that the northern armies were advancing into their province of Honan, he requested their co-operation, but warned them that he would brook no opposition.

Many requests for relief from Cantonese rule had reached him, asserted Chang, and he was most anxious to assist the people of Hunan and Hupeh provinces, but in this he had been balked by Wu Pei-Fu, once his ally against the Kuominchun, the National people's army of the Peking government, which Chang and Wu overthrew last April.

Marshal Wu, charged Chang, not only had done nothing for six months in Honan province against the invading Cantonese, but had prevented Chang from driving them out. Wu's forces had placed obstacles before the advance of the northern troops. Wu had failed to act against the enemy which drove him from Hankow last August and wrested nearly all of Central China from his rule.

Reports were circulated in Peking yesterday that Wu had made spirited reply to Chang's declaration. Wu was said to have demanded that Chang state the number of troops he was sending into Honan province and to have ordered Chang to stop their advance at Changteh, at the northern border. Conflict might be prevented between the northern soldiers and his men, intimated Wu, if Changteh were the limit of their advance, and he thus were enabled to attempt better understanding between the troops.

The Cantonese, it is known here, have been preparing for the northern advance upon them. For more than two weeks they have been concentrating their forces at and near Hankow to resist. Foreign ships have been commandeered by the Cantonese in their haste to bring to Hankow troops that were stationed at other places along the Yangtse.

Honan Province seems destined as the battleground of the contending forces. In its eastern portion Feng Yu Hsiang, once called the "Christian general," some time ago was reported operating with the wandering Kuominchun troops, well armed and aided from Russian sources. Although forced from Peking and kept moving, they are considered a powerful foe of both Chang and Wu.

The Cantonese, believed about to move northward from Hankow, may form a junction with the Kuominchun.

With the northern armies pouring in from the north and east, Wu Pei may be caught with his army between the opposing forces. If so he may have the choice of allying himself with either, or fighting both.

The "diagnoscope," invented by a German scientist, register mental development, according to the claims of its maker. The machine establishes electric contact with the brain's nerve centres and thus is said to determine for what career or occupation the person is best suited.

BRITISH PAPERS DISCUSS NOTE FROM COOLIDGE

Comments Range From Sarcasm To Cautious Approval of Plan.

NOBLE SENTIMENT.

Westminster Gazette Hopes President's Initiative May Bring Results.

LONDON, Feb. 11 (United News). — Comment ranging from criticism to approval is found in the first London newspapers to discuss President Coolidge's arms parley proposals. Many of the papers are deferring comment due to the fact that the proposals came as a complete surprise.

In a sarcastic view The Daily Express says that "Coolidge, from the calm geographical security of the United Stes, gives the world an idealistic exhortation on armaments which contains little new either in aspiration or predicability. We fully appreciate the nobility of sentiment behind the proposal," said The Express, "but what is needed is a formula to remove warlike intentions from the world."

"The proposal in no way interferes with a land conference," says The Daily Chronicle. "Centrarily a naval agreement would be of immense assistance to full disarmament. If the five principal naval Powers agreed to limit their auxiliary ships, thus giving an example of self-denial regarding cruisers and submarines, we might hope that the next step would soon follow."

The Liberal Westminster Gazette, the only publication to commend, cautiously contends itself with the hope that "As the late President Harding effected the Washington agrement his successor's initiative will have an equally salutary effect."

Japanese Press Comments

TOKIO, Feb. 11 (United Press). —Afternoon newspapers were in substantial agreement here today that Japan would accept President Coolidge's disarmament conference proposals but would not favor limitation of cruisers on a 5—5—3 basis. The Foreign Office, while refusing to express a definite attitude, said Japan would be found ready to participate in the proposed disarmament conference.

A spokesman for the Navy Office pointed out that Japan, France and Italy had already subscribed to the resolution of the Geneva experts regarding naval limitations on a basis of total tonnage and while not opposing the Coolidge proposal Japan, along with the other Powers, would have to take into consideration the resolution already favored.

Monk, Once General, Dies With Uniform Under Robe

ROME, Feb. 11.—(A.P.)—On the death to-day of the Franciscan monk Alfonso Fusco, who gave up a brilliant military career in 1914 to enter the religious order, it was found that under his religious robe he wore his full uniform as an army General, with a crucifix and the Italian tricolor sewed to the breast.

Fusco served with great valor with the Italian forces in the African colonies and later distinguished himself in rescue work after the earthquake at Messina in 1908.

W. A. ANDERSON ASKS IF KEEFER HOLDS POSITION

Member For Peterborough County Enquires About Northern Secretary.

OTHER QUESTIONS.

Member Asks If McConnell, Named in Scandal, Was Windsor R. O.

TORONTO, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press).—Questions on the order paper in the Ontario Legislature today included one by A. Colquhoun (Liberal, Perth South), inquiring if John McConnell of Windsor, who resigned from his position as Alderman at Windsor during the recent investigations, is the same person who was returning officer for Windsor Riding in the Provincial election of December 1, and if he now holds the position of inspector under the Luxury Tax Act of 1925.

W. A. Anderson (Liberal, Peterborough County) wants to know if F. H. Keefer, K.C., is still Legislative Secretary for Northern Ontario and if not so, has a successor been named for that position. He further asks if Mr. Keefer has been employed by the Government in any connection since the Provincial election, and what remuneration he is to receive, if any, for services performed.

T. Legault (Liberal, Sturgeon Falls) also has a question on the order paper which asks if the Government has made a decision to open the Townships of Ledger, Purdom, and Booth near the Town of Nipigon, and when they might be ready for settlement.

ASKED TO VOTE $21,000,000 FOR CANADIAN NATIONAL RLY.

Also Include Estimate For Canadian Government Merchant Marine.

QUESTIONS ARISE.

New Equipment For Branches in United States Also Included.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 11. Canadian Press. — Parliament was asked yesterday to vote $21,000,000 for new equipment for the Canadian National Railway Company and the Canadian Government Merchant Marine.

The House discussed in committee the estimates for the fiscal year 1926-27, totalling $31,000,000. Of this sum $10,000,000 was voted last session. The whole represents a decrease of more than $19,000,000 when compared to the estimates of 1925-26.

Of the sum to be spent this year, approximately $5,000,000 is for equipmentment for the branches of the Canadian National Railways in the United States. This gave rise to a question from Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion (Conservative FortWilliam) as to the accuracy of a report that a large part of the new contract would be awarded to United States' firms, "while a number of Canadian plants on the Canadian side are idle."

Hon. C. A. Dunning, Minister of Railways said that he could not be responsible for newspaper rumors, but he would check up and give a report to the House later.

Hon. R. R. Bennett Conservative-Calgary West), expressed the hope that proper reserve would be built up to replace worn out equipment. Unless this was being done, he said, Canadians were being "misled into believing that we are making money when we are not."

Mr. Dunning thought there was no cause for alarm. In any case, such matters could be threshed out when next year's estimates were in committee stage. He hoped that the small special committee which devoted itself during the last few sessions to Canadian National Railways estimates, would be revived this year.

R. R. Harson (Conservative-York Sunbury) asked if it was true that the C.N.R. charged the Intercolonial Railway $175 per diem for locomotives. On this scale he thought it would be easy to pile up a deficition the Maritime section of the National roads.

Mr. Dunning replied that he was glad of a chance to "explode that particular fallacy." Per diem charges were pooled and then allocated to different parts of the system, and the cost of operation of the National Railways was, he thought, fairly spread out ove the whole system.

Mr. Dunning explained the proposed wing to be built on the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa. The hotel had shown a net revenue of $150,000 in 1926, and during the first six months of the ye nearly 2000 people had been offered sleeping accommodation in cars in the railway station, when the hotel was filled. The proposed wing would be of 200 bedrooms as well as additional banquet hall, and ballroom space. The management expected that with the complete equipment $300,000 more revenue would be produced each year. The expenditure would total $2,000,000, and ultimately $4,000,000.

FLU EPIDEMIC REPORT ISSUED

Great Increases in Bulgaria and Japan—Decline in England.

MANY DEATHS.

GENEVA, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press).—There were eight hundred deaths from influenza in the larger cities in England during the first week of this month, and more than four hundred in Bulgaria, says a bulletin issued by the health section of the League of Nations. The serious spread of the disease in Bulgaria is further indicated by the fact that a total of a hundred thousand cases were reported during the period covered by this report. Despite the large number of deaths in England, the epidemic is decreasing. A marked increase is reported in Japan and slight increases increases in Czecho Slovakia, Portugal and Eastern Hungary.

Government Enforces Curfew Law—Gun Carriers To Be Shot.

LONDON, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press)—An eye-witness' description of Lisbon following the revolt which the government now has well in hand was received to-day from a Reuter correspondent, who journeyed to the Portuguese capital from Spain. Strikers interfered with railroad operations and trains were operated by military crews.

"From the river, Lisbon looked like a dead city," declared the correspondent. "Many buildings along the water front were destroyed and hardly a single pane of glass remained unbroken in the government building. Black Horse Square was full of broken furniture from the ministry of marine, where the rebels had entrenched themselves.

"Many private buildings showed signs of fighting. The home of U. Alexandra, British representative of the Bank of London and South America, was completely destroyed. The family had a narrow escape, leaving just before a shell burst in the nursery. The palace of the Duke of Palmellas was destroyed in a fierce encounter centering around it."

The correspondents added that the government was enforcing the curfew laws. Civilians carrying guns are ordered to be shot without trial.

WILL CONSULT PARLIAMENT IF CHINESE SITUATION ALTERS BUT NO TROOPS IN MEANTIME

Premier King Makes Statement in House Regarding Canada's Attitude.

IN SYMPATHY

Does Not Consider Any Useful Purpose Would Be Served.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 11.—Canada will not send any troops to China unless the situation there changes considerably. Even then nothing will be done unless parliament has been consulted.

This was made clear when Premier Mackenzie King yesterday made a statement in the House of Commons in reply to a question. The statement follows:

Advisable Precaution.

"The protection of life and property, in any country, whether of nationals or of aliens, is primarily the duty of the government of that country. Of late, civil war in China, now of several years' duration, has increased the difficulty of ensuring that protectoin and the evacuation of certain interior areas by foreign residents has been considered an advisable precaution. At the same time it must be recognized that the loss of life by foreigners in these years of disturbance has been extraordinarily small. So far as I known only one Canadian has been killed. The existence of a political motive in that case, which occurred in June, 1926, was not fully established, and the murderer was shot immediately by Chinese soldiers.

In Sympathy.

"Canada is in full sympathy with the desire of the Chinese people to secure control of their own destiny having due regard to the safety of the life and property of foreign residents. While there are extremist elements in the situation, it is clear that as regards the responsible Chinese people, the present Nationalistic movement is directed, not against the lives of private rights of foreign residents, but against the special privileges of the measure of control over Chinese affairs, exercised by foreign countries as regards extra-territoriality customs, concessions and other matters.

"Canada has not in the past had any part in shaping or maintaining the policy of acquiring such rights or privileges in China, and has had no part in the recent negotiations for their readjustment. The Canadian Government is, however, in full sympathy with the British Foreign Secretary's announced policy of 'going as far as possible to meet the legitimate aspirations of the Chinese nation,' and believes that this course is both just and best adapted to ensure protection of life and of religious and business interests.

"Under these circumstances it is not considered that it would serve any useful purpose to propose despatching Canadian forces to China if the situation should change the government will take the earliest opportunity of consulting with parliament as to the appropriate course to pursue."

Marriages between members of the Ethiopian and Caucasian races would be prohibited under amendment.

COOLIDGE PLAN FOR DISCUSSION WELL RECEIVED

Maritime Powers Show Willingness To Consider Disarmament Next Month.

PRELIMINARY TALKS.

Actual Method Likely To Be Left To Conference Proper.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press).—President Coolidge's proposal for further limitation of naval armament appears to have found the maritime powers in a receptive mood.

First impression as reflected in news despatches from abroad indicate that the President's plan to discuss the question next month at Geneva probably will be accepted, but that specific methods of limitation will have to be left for determination by the conference itself.

Responsible officials of both the British and Japanese Governments are quoted as agreeable to discussion of the subject broached by the President, but not certain that his suggestion of the extension of the 5—5—3 ratio to all classes of warcraft can be accepted in advance. France and Italy, the other two nations to whom the proposal was addressed, are reserving decision, but they are not expected here to refuse to discuss limitation should the other Powers agree to such discussion.

Government Endorsation.

LONDON, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press).—The British Government heartily endorses the principles of President Coolidge's naval disarmament proposals. This was made known at the Foreign Office to-day.

Italy Considers Proposals.

ROME, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press) —It is understood in political circles that an exchange of views on President Coolidge's naval armament proposals will be sought by Italy, with England and France and probably Japan.

Japan Accepts Proposal.

TOKIO, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press) —Renjo, the Japanese news agency, learned officially to-day that the Japanese Government has decided to accept the proposal of President Coolidge, suggesting a new conference for the reduction of naval armament, and it is said a reply to the President's message will be forwarded to Washington soon.

French Study Message.

PARIS, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press) —President Coolidge's proposal for further naval limitation is receiving careful study, it was said at the French Foreign Office to-day.

DELEGATION ASKS FOR FAIR GRANT

Chatham Fair Board Wishes To Erect Permanent Buildings.

TORONTO, Feb. 11.—(Canadian Press).—"Very sympathetic consideration" was promised the delegation representing the Chatham Winter Fair which waited on Premier Ferguson yesterday with a request for a grant of thirty thousand dollars toward the cost of erecting a permanent home for the fair. The delegation was introduced by A. C. Calder (Conservative, Kent West).

SIX STABBED DURING FIGHT

Nobody Seriously Hurt in Battle on Montreal Street.

TWO MEN JAILED.

MONTREAL, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press) —A stabbing affray at a street corner to-day resulted in six persons receiving cuts. Four of these are in hospital and two men are under arrest. None of the wounded are believed to be in a critical condition, although two are seriously cut. The affray started in a quarrel between members of a party.

THE WEATHER

February up to the present time has proved to be a remarkably fine winter month. On only one night has the temperature got down to the zero mark. Last night's lowest was three above. The sun's rays are also becoming stronger. Yesterday the effects of the sun's influence were to be noticed in many places. The earlier beginning of day light in the morning is also noticeable. While we may yet have cold blustery winds, heavy snow and cold dips that pinch the ears and nose, we have the satisfaction of knowing that the back of winter has been passed and we are en route to better things. The green grass and the singing birds are not here yet but they are coming.—W. P.

AMENDMENT CHALLENGING POLICY OF GOVERNMENT REJECTED IN BRITISH HOUSE

Sir Austen Chamberlain Gives Important Explanation Looking to Settlement.

WALES PRESENT

Reviews Entire Chinese Situation Since Tariff Conference.

LONDON, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press).—The House of Commons last night rejected a Labor amendment to the address from the Throne, moved by Charles P. Trevelyan, challenging the Government's policy in China, by a vote of 320 to 113.

Sir Austen Chamberlain gave an important explanation of the Government's policy, which included a concession that for the sake of advancing negotiations looking to a settlement of the difficulty, only an Indian brigade would be landed at Shanghai unless unforeseen dangers arose.

The sting was taken out of the Labor attack by Sir Austen's announcement concerning the troops. Ramsay MacDonald, the Opposition leader, sought to defend Labor's attitude. He contended that the Government policy of defence was bound to end in an offensive, but he recognized the importance of the Foreign Secretary's speech and hoped that its effect would be duly weighed at Hankow.

Recognition of the strong pressure brought by the Labor party, induced Sir Austen Chamberlain, as he himself admitted, to make the Government's policy toward China unusually clear.

The pressure appeared in the form of Trevelyan's amendment asking immediate diversion and recall of the British forces now on their way to China. Mr. Trevelyan contended that self-respecting nations did not sign treaties while the mailed fist was being shaken in their faces.

The Prince of Wales was an interested listener in the peers' gallery. After reproaching the Extremist Laborites for making the Government's path to negotiation difficult, Sir Austen reviewed the entire Chinese situation since the tariff conference.

Chief interest in his speech, however, was in the distinct announcement that, provided Eugene Chen, the Chinese Foreign Fmister, signed the agreement already reached at Hankow with the British Charge d'Affaires, Owen O'Malley, only the Indian troops now en route from Hong Kong would be landed at Shanghai, while the main body of the Shanghai defence force would be held at Hong Kong unless required by the emergency of fresh danger at Shanghai.

The Foreign Secretary argued that it was impossible to wait until danger was at the gates. The British position was different from that of others powers — although all had taken certain precautions—inasmuch as in the last two years the whole Chinese drive had been anti-British; hence British nationals were more seriously menaced than other foreigners.

IS THE UNITED STATES SINKING?

Property owners on the shore lines of the United States who have been disturbed by scientific theories that the continent is sinking, at least in part, may have their fears reinforced or allayed by a Government survey just undertaken. There are two possible explanations, says Popular Science Monthly, for the apparent lowering of the Atlantic coast at the rate of one or two feet a century. One is the gradual sinking of the whole continent; the other is changes in the sea level. To solve the mystery geologists have just begun a series of studies with tide gages along the Atlantic shore line.

OLD MASTERS

Drink to me only with thine eyes,
And I will pledge with mine;
Or leave a kiss but in the cup
And I'll not look for wine.
The thirst that from the soul doth rise
Doth ask a drink divine;
But might I of Jove's nectar sup,
I would not change for thine.

I sent thee late a rosy wreath,
No so much honoring thee
As giving it a hope that there
It could not wither'd be;
But thou thereon didst only breathe
And sent'st it back to me;
Since when it grows, and smells, I swear,
Not of itself, but thee!

FEAR FOUL PLAY CAUSE OF DEATH

Scarboro Authorities Decide To Hold Inquest on Woburn Man.

SKULL FRACTURED.

TORONTO, Feb. 11.—Circumstances pointing toward foul play have been uncovered in the inquiry being conducted into the fire in which Albert Fisher, aged 47 years, came to his death early Monday morning at Woburn, a four-corners settlement on the Markham road, in Scarboro Township. An inquest is being held in the Scarboro Council Chambers at Birch Cliff on Tuesday night.

It was thought at first that Fisher had been burned to death in the fire which gutted the old Scarboro Council Chambers at Woburn, near the hotel in which he lived. An autopsy, however, has revealed that the man's skull was fractured. The question arises: Was this fracture sustained before, during, or after the fire?

Explosion First Theory.

The body was found in one corner of that section of the building which was formerly used as a driving shed and near by the car in which Fisher intended to drive, as he did nearly every morning, to Toronto, was standing. The theory originally advanced was that there had been an explosion in the car, causing the fire, but it has been found that the gasoline tank is still intact.

Police Are Investigating.

John Vaughan, who was employed by Fisher to take care of the four or five acres of land contiguous to the hotel, states that he was the first man into the building after the fire was discovered. He says that he pushed out the motor car, thinking Fisher was in it, but when he had got the car outside it was empty. He says he then returned into the blazing building, and, with Jack Hall, who was near by, and rushed to the scene, found the body in a corner of the shed, where the flames were thickest.

Further investigations are now proceeding under the direction of Chief of Police Smith of Scarboro, Provincial Officer Hammond and Coroner Charles D. Farquharson.

New books and pamphlets arriving at the British Museum library amount to 40,000 a year. The library has to preserve copies of all books printed in the United Kingdom.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

ALL I HAVE

All I have's a little house.
A little wife within.
All I have's a little boy.
A little Peterkin.
All I have's a little girl.
A girl with golden hair.
All I have's a little spot.
But all I have is there.

All I have's a little house.
A garden all around.
All I have's a little lawn,
A little bit of ground.

All I have's an apple tree.
A plum tree, and a pear.
All I have's a little place,
But all I have is there.

All I have's a little house,
And not a castle grand.
All I have's a little lot,
A little bit of land.
Though I have a little gold.
A little world to fare.
All I have's a little home.
For all I have is there!

JOKES AIDED FORD BANKER TESTIFIES

Says Publicity Enhanced Value of the Company's Shares.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 11.—Even the jokes about the Ford automobile were of value to the Ford Motor Car Company, according to a witness who testified Wednesday in the appeal of the former minority stockholders against a levy of $30,000,000 in extra income tax on the sale of their stock to Henry and Edsel Ford in 1919. The jokes came under the heading of "free publicity," as the witness saw it.

The case for the appellants was rested yesterday. David H. Blair, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and his deputy, C. R. Nash, will be the last witnesses. Before they take the stand documentary evidence, which the protestants have carefully guarded, will be introduced. The evidence deals with the history of the case in the files of the Treasury Department.

In order to facilitate the sale of the stock, an income tax valuation of it was made in 1919 by Daniel C. Roper, then Commissioner of Internal Revenue. This fixed the value at $9.489 a share. The Treasury Department now contends that the stock was worth not more than $3,500, thus rendering the sellers liable to a higher tax on their profits. The appellants have made much of the fact that six years sped by before the Treasury Department moved to collect the alleged deficiency. It is understood that the documentary evidence will deal in striking fashion with this phase of the complex case.

Another valuation of a "tangible" asset of the company as of 1913 was the estimate of the value of Henry Ford's personality and genius. Paul Clay, Vice President of the Moody Investment Service of New York, estimated that Ford was worth $25,000,000 to the company, but that this estimate must now be scaled down owing to the fact that Mr. Ford was no longer giving exclusive attention to the automobile company. Mr. Clay's estimate was made outside the court room.

Says Earnings Jumped in 1913

George Lindsay, Vice President of Blair & Co., Ins., New York investment bankers, was the witness who stressed the value of advertising to the company in 1913. He did so without specifically listing "wise cracks" on the Ford car. Mr. Lindsay in response to questions by Joseph E. Davis, of appellant's counsel, said that the balance sheets of the company for 1913 showed that the fixed assets were $28,500,000 and that $21,000,000 had been invested in securities and in municipal bonds. A cash dividend of $12,000,000 had been paid, and the liabilities he estimated at $4,111,000. In the first two months of 1913 the earnings had been about four times the earnings in the corresponding period of 1912.

Mr. Lindsay said that the Ford Company during the period under survey had been "in a class by itself, the tendency being to put Ford on one side and the remainder of the automobile industry on the other side." He went into the great volume of advertising the company had received—"free publicity, the best kind of advertising," and said that this must be reckoned with in any attempt to arrive at a valuation for the 1913 stock.

Mr. Lindsay finally expressed the opinion that the stock had been worth from $10,000 to $12,500 a share fourteen years ago.

Praises Ford as an Executive

Alexander W. Gregg, general counsel for the Treasury, in cross-examination, developed that Mr. Lindsay attached great value to Mr. Ford and to the experts who surrounded him in 1913. He admitted that he would have thought the matter over carefully before buying the company if it had appeared that death or dissatisfaction were likely to remove Mr. Ford from direction of the company.

Ralph E. Badger, formerly Professor of Economics at Brown University, completed his direct examination and then was cross-examined at length.

Mr. Gregg appeared to have the witness in deep water for a time when he produced a stock valuation report made by Dr. Badger in 1923, which appeared to be radically different from the methods he pursued in making his valuation of the Ford stock. Dr. Badger, however, explained that the 1923 report dealt with textiles and that conditions in that industry were not the same as in the motor field.

He pointed out that in valuing a motor stock like Ford in 1913 one had to bear in mind that the industry was on the uptrend and that in 1923 the textile industry had already reached its zenith and, as after events proved, was due for a decline.

MISS AGNES HAMPTON.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 11.—News of the death of Miss Agnes Hampton, which sad event occurred with startling suddenness in the late afternoon of Saturday, February 5, came as a distinct shock not only to her immediate relatives and friends, but to the entire community as well.

Deceased was born in Cavan Township, just west of the village, and had spent practically her entire life in Millbrook and its immediate vicinity, winning for herself an honored place in both church and community activities.

Miss Hampton was one of a family of eight children, two sons and six daughters, and the surviving members are: one brother, David, for many years principal of the Public School, Millbrook; four sisters, Miss Mary and Mrs. William McKnight, Cavan; Mrs. L. Rae, Millbrook and Mrs. E. R. Armstrong of California.

Over forty years ago the family moved to Millbrook to reside, living on Anne Street until a little over two years ago, when Mrs. Rae joined the family circle following the death of her husband, Dr. H. Rae, of London, Ontario, when the comfortable home in King Street, convenient to church and business section, was purchased and possession taken.

Brought up in the Presbyterian Church, with which her parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. James Hampton, were affiliated, Miss Hampton gave to it for several years a devoted and active allegiance Over thirty years ago she became connected by membership with the former Methodist Church in order to accompany her youngest sister, the late Miss Rosie Hampton, to her place of worship, the latter, because of frail health, requiring the companionship and care. To the church of her adoption deceased brought that same loyal and efficient service which was an outstanding characteristic of her whole life.

At the invitation of the superintendent of the Sunday School, Mr. R. W. Clarke, now of Weyburn, Sask., Miss Hampton became the teacher of the young men's Bible class, devoting much time and study to the faithful discharge of the heavy responsibilities of this task. When the organized Bible class movement swept the country several years ago, hers was one of the first to adopt the new regime, becoming registered as "Miss Hampton's Young Men's Bible Class," and though ill-health compelled her resignation some two years since, her sister, Mrs. (Dr.) Rae, taking the position of teacher, the name has been, and will continue to be, retained probably as long as this class is a part of the Sunday school activities.

Only eternity will fully reveal the results of her labors, but the fact that over thirty of the members and ex-members voluntarily acted as honorary pall-bearers at her funeral, walking ahead of the hearse the entire mile and a half to the cemetery, speaks clearly of the place she had won in their affection and esteem.

A loving "ministry of flowers" was another church service willingly rendered, and through many years Miss Hampton provided the flowers about the pulpit and within the altar railing each Sunday, often at the expense of much arduous toil. To one who had so keen a love for flowers, and for working among them, the time and labor involved were no deterrent though the claims of special Sundays, particularly, were always decidedly heavy.

A life member of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary, and for some years its first vice-president, deceased rendered such efficient service that, when her health in recent months prevented active participation in the work, the office of "honorary vice-president" was created in order to secure her permanent association with the organization, in connection with the official position she had filled so well. She was also a member of the Ladies' Aid Society and gave willing help with all its activities.

For twenty-five years Miss Hampton was librarian at the public library, and was associated with her brother, Mr. David Hampton, to whose initiative the village owes this popular institution, in all that pertained to its interest and welfare.

The funeral took place from the family residence, King Street, on Tuesday, at 2.30 p.m., her pastor, Rev. F. H. Howard, being in charge, assisted by a former pastor, Rev. S. T. Tucker, of Orono, who spoke in warm terms of the Christian character and life service of the deceased; Rev. Joseph Wilks, who led in prayer; Rev. P. C. Howard, who read the Scripture lesson, and Rev. John Riddle, pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church, who announced the closing hymn, "Lead Kindly Light."

The pall-bearers were the president and ex-presidents of her Bible class: Messrs. L. W. Smith, P. Stinson, H. Lang, F. McMahon, G. E. Burnham, and W. Fred Fallis.

Among the many beautiful floral tributes, laid in loving memory upon the casket, were a wreath from the Bible Class of the deceased, and a spray from the executive of the Sunday School. Interment was in the Presbyterian Cemetery.

MRS. IRWIN GREENLY.

NORHAM, Feb. 11.—The funeral service of the late Mrs. Irwin Greenly, (nee Gladys Jones), of Keene, who passed away in Nicholls Hospital, Peterborough, on Tuesday morning, was held at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Jones, of Norham, on Thursday afternoon at 1.30 p.m. and was conducted by Rev. J. F. Everson, assisted by Rev. Milton L. Hinton, of Hastings. The high esteem in which the deceased was held was evident by the large number of friends who were present to bear their tribute to a beautiful life departed before its morning had touched the noon and while the shadows still were falling toward the west.

The deceased was in her 24th year and was born in Murary township, but when quite young moved with her parents to a farm a few miles north-east of Warkworth, where she lived until her marriage to Mr. Greenly, in August, 1924. She was taken suddenly ill on Saturday and removed to the hospital the following Monday. All that medical skill and loving care could do was unable to cope with the strong hand of disease and a week later she passed peacefully away.

She leaves to mourn her loss besides her parents, a sorrowing husband and a little son about twenty months of age, one sister, Mrs. Ross Skinkle, of Lindsay, and three brothers, Francis, Rosco and Raymond, of Percy township.

The pallbearers were Fred Platt, Harry Wilson, Lee Isaac, Wesley Weir and William and Frederick Samis. Interment was made in Warkworth cemetery.

SIX LINERS ARRIVE, DELAYED BY STORMS

Bring Passengers Through Gales and High Seas on Atlantic.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Six overdue liners, delayed by storms in the North Atlantic, arrived here Wednesday with 3,500 passengers. They were the Olympic, Hamburg, Bremen, American Banker, Aurania and Cameronia. All encountered high seas and winds of hurricane force. Injuries to two passengers were reported.

The worst weather was encountered by the Hamburg of the Hamburg American Line. She carried 905 passengers. She was two days overdue and, according to Captain Oscar Schwamberger, her commander, the liner encountered continuous storms which came to a climax on Feb. 4, when, he said, there was a terrific wind, with lightning, hail and rain. Judo Bintz of Hamburg was hurt by being thrown to the deck when a wave crashed through the glass on the promenade deck.

During the height of the storm a baby, later christened Helga, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rasteller of Oak Hill, Kan. A purse of $200 was collected among the passengers and given to the parents.

The Olympic of the White Star Line, with 815 passengers, was a day late. While plowing through heavy seas on Tuesday morning, a port hole near the waterline in the firemen's quarters was smashed and the quarters flooded. The liner was turned about, bringing the damaged part to leeward, and held on that course for half an hour while the repairs were made.

The North German Lloyd liner Bremen arrived at Hoboken with 617 passengers after an unusually rough crossing from Bremen. She was three days late. During the storm on Feb. 4, Siegfried Greifenstein, a Bremen merchant, on his way to visit his sister in Cleveland, was thrown to the deck and suffered a fractured leg. He was detained at the Marine Hospital at Ellis Island. Immigration authorities refused to permit him to go to St. Mary's Hospital in Hoboken on the ground that he was disabled and therefore liable to become a public charge.

Captain William Gimmell of the Cameronia said his ship was in Glasgow when that city was partially wrecked by wind and its waterfront flooded by water. The worst storm that liner encountered was on Thursday last, he said, when high seas washed the decks throughout the day. The liner brought 450 passengers.

Captain J. C. Townley of the Aurania, with 580 passengers, reported unusually heavy storms.

The American Merchant liner American Farmer arrived a day late after encountering heavy weather throughout the entire voyage. Captain J. Middleton said that delay was caused partly by the fact that he altered his course to follow and give aid if needed to the President Harding, which had a leak in her oil tank.

SEEK REFUGE IN TIMMINS JAIL

Family of Nine Are Without Food and Have No Home.

FRIENDLESS.

TIMMINS, Feb. 11.— The local jail, generally reserved for evil-doers, was given an opportunity for a new kind of service this week as a result of which since Sunday it has been providing refuge and warmth for a family of nine persons who arrived in Timmins, tired, hungry, friendless and well nigh penniless after a 4-day and 4-night battle with discouragement and disappointment in a search for a home and a means of livelihood.

The new occupants of Timmins Jail are George Stratman, a miner from New Roch, near Lunenburg, Nova Scotia, his wife and a family of seven little children, ranging in ages from 11 years to three months. Stratman is an honest looking man of about 40 years of age, on his hands and in the muscles of his arm are stamped the marks of toil. When visited, the other night, he was engaged in trimming the children's hair. Gertrude, a chubby-faced little thing, aged four, was between his knees, submitting to the barbering operation as the reporter entered.

Three Days in Train.

"We left Lunenburg last Wednesday to come to Hamilton, where I had a friend who told me sometime ago I could get work," said Mr. Stratman. "We were three days and three nights on the train, and when we got there we found that our friend had gone to British Columbia. We knew no one. I left the wife and children in the station and went out to see if I could get work. I was told there was already 1,300 men idle and that there were no jobs especially for a stranger.

"We hadn't much money, and that night we all slept in the station. The children slept on the benches while my wife and I sat up and watched over them. We had heard of Timmins, and being a miner I decided to come up here. We arrived in Timmins on Sunday night. Before I started I had $220, but after I had paid for the tickets and other incidentals there was very little left. I had only $20 left when I arrived in Timmins."

Everybody Kind.

On the train the Stratman family fortunately fell in with a couple of prominent Timmins citizens, A. W. Lang and G. H. Gauthier, who were returning from the Haileybury bonspiel, and who assisted them and directed them where to look for rooms. Three attempts were made to secure lodgings in Timmins hotels and three times they failed.

"It was all right till they found out we had seven children and then they wouldn't take us in," said Stratman sharply. "However, everybody has been very kind, the police and Mr. Gauthier and Mr. Lang have done everything they could to make us comfortable. I have been promised a job at the McIntyre Mine and we have a house. We expect to move out of here to-morrow."

Feels Position Keenly.

Mrs. Stratman also feels keenly the position in which they have been placed. "We were never up against it like this before and I never was in jail before," she added, smiling. "I guess our only crime is that I have too big a family."

"You ought to be proud of them," it was suggested.

Then as one of the little girls threw her arms about her father's waist he picked her up and answered, "So I am. I wouldn't trade one of them for a million dollars."

FIVE CHILDREN BURN TO DEATH

Fire Started From Overheated Stove Unnoticed By Family.

MOTHER JUMPS.

S. S. MARIE, Mich., Feb. 11—Five children of Mr. and Mrs. Harris Trimble were burned to death in their home at Rudyard, southwest of here yesterday. Trimble was badly burned, while his wife, who jumped from an upper window with their sixth child, is suffering from exposure. The fire starting from an overheated stove down stairs, was unnoticed by the sleeping family upstairs until it virtually had consumed the stairway. Trimble, carrying Margaret, 8, and Robert, 5, tried to run down the stairs, but stumbled, dropping the children into the flames, falling into the flames himself. He was terribly burned, but managed to make his way out of the house.

The charred bodies of five children, two in their beds, were found after villagers with snow had extinguished the embers of the destroyed home.

DAIRY COMPANY ANNUAL MEETING

East Emily Co. Plans Extension—Past Year Very Successful.

EAST EMILY, Feb. 11. — The annual business meeting of the East Emily Dairy Co. was held at the creamery residence on the afternoon of February the 4th. Rather a small attendance greeted the speakers, possibly on account of other attractions in the neighborhood and the dangerous condition of the roads. However, the regular routine of business was carried out with accuracy and despatch.

The former Board of Management was re-elected, with Mr. Eugene Switzer again Chairman. This makes Mr. Switzer's fifth term as President of the E. E. Dairy Co., a striking tribute to his ability and integrity as an official and a fitting testimony to the high regard held for him by his colleagues.

The Auditors created a favorable impression on the meeting by very highly endorsing the work of the Secretary-Treasurer as accountant during the past season, and the outcome of their report was his re-election.

A bylaw legalizing the sale of preferred stock in E. E. Dairy Co. was read and confirmed, and during the next few weeks farmers may expect solicitations for their financial support and influence in establishing a larger, better and stronger E. E. Dairy Co.

M'CORMICK DENIES DIVORCE RUMORS

Knows Nothing of Wife's Plans For Paris Divorce, He Says.

CHICAGO, Feb. 11. (Canadian Press)—Harold F. McCormick, of the Harvester family of millionaires, denied today that his wife, Ganna Walska, beautiful Polish singer, is to divorce him. He is her fourth husband. "I know nothing of the matter because there is nothing to it" Mr. McCormick stated here yesterday on his arrival home from New York.

A New York newspaper had published a story that Ganna was to divorce her husband in Paris and that he already had arranged a substantial property settlement for her.

. . . MIRROR OF THE PUBLIC MIND . . . INTERPRETER OF THE PUBLIC INTENT . . . TROUBLER OF THE PUBLIC CONSCIENCE.

SHOULD GIVE RESULTS.

The possibility of a special committee being appointed by the Legislature to survey the whole fish and game situation this year and report to the House at its 1928 session will be welcomed by those who have given any attention to this question.

That conditions in regard to the Province's supply of fish and game are not all that they should be is generally recognized, but there is a lack of unanimity as to the remedies needed.

The Ontario Hunters' Game and Fish Protective Association, for instance, has recommended that the fishing season in most of Ontario's waters should not be opened until July 1st each year, whereas the proprietors of summer resorts may be expected to oppose such a suggestion, arguing that the tourist season is short enough as it is and that cutting two weeks off it would be a heavy financial blow to them.

An inquiry into the whole situation by a committee of the Legislature, giving an opportunity to the members to secure various viewpoints, and after sifting the evidence to introduce some concrete forms, would seem to be justified.

The matter is of vital importance to Ontario's reputation as a fish and game paradise.

PETERBOROUGH AND CONVENTIONS.

The local Chamber of Commerce and its affiliated organizations are to be congratulated upon the efforts that are being made to have Peterborough selected as a logical meeting place for annual conventions.

The securing of the convention of the Associated Boards of Trade for this city is an event that means much to Peterborough, bringing representative citizens from all sections of Ontario.

The district convention of the Ontario Brotherhood of Threshermen is to be held here next week, the second time within three years that the threshermen of Eastern Ontario have chosen Peterborough as their convention city.

The Chamber of Commerce believes that it is good business for Peterborough to act as hosts to as many organizations as possible, and no opportunity to secure conventions for this city is being overlooked.

The publicity that is gained from such sources, as well as the fact that every gathering held here means the putting into circulation of considerable sums of money to the general benefit, offer justification for an aggressive policy in regard to conventions.

BASEBALL'S BIG SALARIES.

That the baseball magnates are not greatly worried at the thought that public confidence in the game may have been shaken by revelations made during the past few months is evident from the stories of huge salaries for stars of the diamond that are being circulated.

Tris Speaker and Ty Cobb, a short time ago apparently through with baseball, are each, it is stated, to receive $75,000 for their services this summer, the former from the Washington club and the latter from the Athletics.

This sum is the largest ever paid to a baseball player, but even it promises to be exceeded by the remuneration Babe Ruth will receive from the New York Americans.

Ruth, whose contract has expired, is demanding $100,000 a season for his services, and as he is the biggest box-office attraction in baseball, there is reason to expect that his terms will be met.

An industry that can pay such salaries as these and pay a Commissioner about as much to keep the game straight can be classed as big business.

It is more profitable to be able to hit a baseball into the bleachers 50 times a season than it is to be President of the United States.

ADVERTISING THE WATERWAY.

The most ambitious and artistic pamphlet that has yet been issued to advertise the Trent Waterway is the descriptive guide book prepared by the Trent Waterway Development Association and printed by The Examiner.

"We submit it," remarks Gordon K. Fraser, Honourary President of the association, in an introduction to the booklet, "in the hope that the reader may comprehend the possibilities of using the Trent Waterway as the summer playground of Ontario."

In this aim the guide book should be entirely successful, inasmuch as every section of the waterway, from Lake Ontario to Georgian Bay, has been covered, and there is a mass of information concisely presented that should be of interest to tourists.

Included are an official welcome from Hon. Geo. S. Henry, Minister of Highways, with a synopsis of the motor vehicle laws and a summary of the fish and game laws, two sections that visitors will find decidedly useful.

All in all, the pamphlet is a splendid piece of propaganda for the Trent Waterway and many copies were distributed by Frank Stinson, Secretary of the local Chamber of Commerce and of the Waterway Association, at the New York Motor-Boat Show and others are being sent out in many directions, the result should be a greater interest in this part of Ontario.

WHO LAUGHS BEST.

Moscow would have it that "the whole world is laughing" at Secretary Kellogg and at American economic and political "imperialism" toward Latin America. Perhaps Moscow seeks some crumb of comfort after the smallness of success following its own exposed efforts to stir trouble in that region. Also after its recent rebuffs from both British and American labor bodies.

When it comes to the laughable, a whimsical yet somewhat sensible suggestion comes from England. Instead of any affright at Bolshevist doctrines and threats to overturn economic society and Government structure the world around, the best treatment would be a profuse publication as humorous literature. Let the Reds' prose bombast and metrical and melodic gems be scattered broadcast. They would engender their own inextinguishable laughter.

In the realm of politics also the present joke may be pointing in Moscow's direction. One of its best triumphs was the winning of trade and diplomatic recognition from Britain. Moscow would seem to have gravely imperiled the continuance of those prized relations by its intrigues in the Orient.

But the largest jest is one that quietly goes on in ever bigger proportions in America—the great goal of Red aspirations for "world revolution." That goal grows remoter yearly, almost daily. Our bulwark against Red invasion grows stouter.

An instance of its growth was afforded this past week in the fourth offering of preferred stock to its workers by Bethlehem Steel. Already under that plan some 35,000 employee-stockholders have a stake of $8,000,000 in the company. Which steadily makes them less susceptible to any Bolshevist heresy.

So fast and so far has this "silent economic revolution" progressed in the diffusion of corporate proprietorship—through employee and customer ownership—that it is difficult for the statistics to keep pace. Add the notable statistics so far in 1927 on savings deposits, insurance, home building, etc.—despite all the instalment buying and love of luxury and sports—and the swiftly growing dimensions of our bulwark become evident. Never did the world behold so much wealth so widely distributed.

Against Moscow is the laughter as well as the logic of events.—Barron's.

FOOLING OURSELVES.

(Belleville Intelligencer)

What is the use of newspapers and civic officials talking about "a probable increase in the cost of power" and 'the expectation of lighting costing more"? What is the use of a committee to investigate the "proposed new rates?"

The new rates are in force now as the next batch of Hydro bills will most emphatically show. And the present schedule is not a probable increase—it is an actual increase of an average roughly of around 25 per cent. And what is more, all the committees of the City Council and Chamber of Commerce will not change it.

The Hydro-electric Power Commission is an unique body, apparently above the control of the people and the Government which erected it and whose servant it was designed to be. If any citizen or group of citizens disapproves of the new rates, they only have to say so and the Commission will, with the utmost readiness and with all courtesy, cut them off. The dissatisfied ones may lighten their darkness with candles and turn their machinery by hand, if they so desire, but the laws of the Medes and Persians were not more immutable than are the decisions of the autocratic Hydro czars.

The justice of the case does not apparently enter into the matter. Peterborough has a street railway being run with a ruinous deficit each year, and at Campbellford a pulp mill is costing a large amount of money to keep running.

On the other hand, Belleville was paying such rates for light and power as was piling up a handsome surplus each year. One would think that the street railway and the pulp mill, along with other leeches, should be discontinued, or if towns and cities concerned wanted them kept in operation, such municipalities should pay the deficits incurred and that the rate of Belleville power users should be lowered.

But the Hydro Commission does not work that way. Instead of a cut in rates Belleville gets a sharp increase. There is no explanation, no apology or attempt at justification. It is a simply pay more or do without or get power anywhere else. We must meekly pay more.

Our sister city of Oshawa is in much the position of Belleville. They held an indignation meeting there at which two Hydro representatives designed to appear and told the Oshawa people—nothing. So Oshawa is out the amount spent in advertising the meeting and the expense of holding it.

The proposal has been made that Belleville purchase the distributing system within the city and run it as a local public utility. That would get us nowhere. The Hydro Commission, we imagine, would be delighted to sell us the system and sell us the power to operate it—at their own price. They would also fix the rate at which the consumer could purchase it.

Belleville can only grin and bear it—pay the increased price demanded and try to economize where possible on the electric current used. Let's talk about the prospects of our baseball team next summer.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Event The Toronto Star agrees that the Hanna appointment is a good one. That makes it unanimous.

It is to be hoped that the prospects of a business-like and short session at Ottawa will not be interfered with by a threshing out of old straw.

Governments have been known to change their minds. Mr. Dunning's statement that the Trent Canal is not to be completed should not be accepted as the final word.

So much is expected of Hon. Mr. Robb in his next Budget that the Minister of Finance will have to be a magician to produce something to please everybody.

Relating the experience of a Sault Ste. Marie housekeeper who received two hundred dozen eggs from eleven hens last year, The Globe thinks that is evident that these were non-union hens.

Winnipeg—Dealers are quoting country shippers extras 48, firsts 46, seconds 35. Prices to retailers extras 53, firsts 51, seconds 42.

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 11—Owing to the fact that foreign bids were again below local exporters' views, the export trade in Canadian grain here yesterday was again extremely dull.

In sympathy with the renewed strength in corn futures at Chicago a firmer feeling prevailed in the local market for cash corn and prices were marked up another 1-2c per bushel. Car lots of American No. 3 yellow were quoted at 90 1-2c, and No. 4 yellow at 88 1-2c, sample yellow corn at 86 1-2c, and cool sweet corn at 83 1-2c per bushel, ex-store.

The trade in Canadian Western oats was slow and prices were unchanged.

The demand for spring and winter wheat grades of flour continued of a limited character but values were steady.

The millfeed market continued moderately actiev and firm. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats showed no improvement and prices ruled firm.

A fair trade was done in fresh eggs and the undertone was firm. The market for United States storage eggs was weaker and prices were reduced one cent per dozen with a small trade passing. The receipts were 780 cases.

The market for potatoes was without any new feature to note, prices being about steady with a moderate trade passing. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.75 to $1.80 per bag of ninety pounds, and Quebec White Stock at $1.30 to $1.35 per bag of ninety pounds in bulk ex-track.

The butter was quiet and the undertone was easy, but there was no further change in prices. The receipts were 23 packages.

Extreme dullness marked the local and export trade in cheese but prices were unchanged. The receipts were 69 boxes.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11—Butter, firm; receipts 14,806; creamery higher than extras 51 1-2 to 52c; creamery extras, 92 score, 51; creamery higher than extras 51 1-50 3-4c.

GOT HER FEET WET CAUGHT BAD COLD

Mrs. Ernest Hall, Cardinal, Ont., writes:—"Last winter I got my feet wet and I caught a terrible cold. I took different kinds of medicine, but none did me any good and I seemed to be getting worse all the time.

One day I was reading about what your medicine had done for others, so thought I would get a bottle. After I had taken a few doses I found it was helping me, so I took a few bottles and was completely restored to health. I cannot praise too highly, as I believe that if it were not for it I would be an invalid today."

A Thought For To-day

MAN MOST USEFUL AT 70

A man is most efficient at the age of 70, says Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, health commissioner, in the weekly bulletin of his department issued yesterday. That is the age of highest mentality and it is a man's duty to keep his body fit so that he may be an asset at that time of life, the commissioner declares.

Exercise, fresh air and suitable and timely recreation are necessary to keep the body physically efficient, Dr. Bundesen says. He prescribes a regular physical examination in order to maintain a high standard of health.

Fast living and the waste of physical energies shorten life, he says, adding: "Man is made or unmade by his own actions. Health conservation while in youth is more important for a healthy and happy old age than a big bank account."

Piles

QUICKLY BANISHED

"I suffered years of agony through blind itching piles," says Mrs. W. Hughes, of Hochelaga St., Montreal. "Pain, loss of strength, complete misery, was my daily lot until I came across Zam-Buk. I know now that there is nothing on earth to equal this grand herbal healer. Since it lifted me from misery my earnest wish is to make Zam-Buk known to all sufferers." 50c. Box.

HEALTH and DIET ADVICE

YOUR CHILD'S VACATION

The summer school vacation which extends practically three months should be devoted almost exclusively to a development of the child's body, with almost an entire rest from lessons and study. Of course, you are anxious to have your child learn as rapidly as possible, but do not become so over-zealous that you ruin his nervous system by too intensive an application to the mental side of his education. There is grave danger that many of our children are given too much education during the school year. At the end of every term children look pallid, irritable, temperamental, and obviously played out. The younger children are often pressed beyond their mental powers, while the elder children are to often seriously overworked.

Children usually detest a good many of their studies, but still they are forced to remain in their class room for from six to eight hours, and a pernicious practice is being carried out of having them take home extra work that requires two or three hours to complete; if such over training is continued for any length of time, it is certain that it will ruin the mind and intelligence of the children, so that they will grow up fit for no practical purposes.

It is certainly carrying this cramming too far if you insist on having your child study very much during the summer time. Make this period of the year at least one for recreation, and an intensive cultivation of the physical. Give the children a chance to be out in the sun and air, to take plenty of exercise through such games as tennis, horseback-riding, swimming, boating, hiking, baseball, etc.

During the summer time, when you can have the children with you at home, be sure to regulate their diet as closely as possible. During the school year the problem of school lunches has to be met, but in vacation time the children can always be at home during the noon hour, and can be fed the proper kind of wholesome food, which is so hard to secure in school cafeterias, and difficult to take in lunch-boxes.

Let them romp and play to their heart's content during the summer season, allowing them to be a little more careless with their clothes and personal appearance. You must realize that your child is a little animal who is being pushed probably far beyond his mental capabilities, and you who find so much good from a vacation in the woods must realize that your child should be allowed to slip back to primitive enjoyment, at least, for two or three months, if you can expect him to regain that strength of body so necessary for the coming fall term of school, with its many responsibilities and unnatural mental tension.

During the summer season teach your child to excel in various kinds of athletic games, checking up on his daily activities at the end of each day. Give him praise and possibly even prizes ever so often, for proficiency in winning physical contests. He will not have time to develop any vicious habits or mannerisms, if encouraged in this manner to do the right kind of wholesome exercising.

THE GROWTH OF MYTH

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

One of the best established data in history is the principle of the growth of myth.

Whenever a popular hero appears there grow up about him, usually after he is dead, a number of stirtling tales.

Somehow he attracts a certain class of stories to himself. Many stories are attributed to Lincoln of which he was probably innocent. They sound like him and the teller likes to attribute them to him although he probably never heard them himself.

So about every famous character myths accumulate.

Kitchener's body was supposed to have been found the other day somewhere in Norway, and they will probably be finding his body in Norway and Sweden and England and France for many years.

Moses was supposed to have been spirited away, and the power of myth is such that many people suppose that he simply got lost and died in the mountains.

King Arthur never really died, they say, but just went away, and about every hundred years the people in a certain section hear faint music which they trace to a cave where King Arthur's spirit is supposed to abide.

The same is true of that picturesque character, Marshal Ney, who is supposed to have escaped from France.

So the supposed stories of Romulus and Remus being suckled by a wolf, and of William Tell shooting an apple off of his son's head and George Washington chopping down a cherry tree considered by many historians to be myths.

This is based upon the fact that most people would rather be interesting than to tell the truth.

In fact, to make what you have to say interesting was the rule of literary people up to the time of Niebhur and only since then have historians carefully dug around to find out the truth.

Attention has often been called to the fact that whatever things you see in the newspapers are not typically true. It may be specifically true, but it has no verisimilitude. The reason is that the newspaper aims to print news. Whatever is unusual is news. Whatever is common is not news. As Dana said:

"If a dog bites a man that is not news, but if a man bites a dog, that's news."

Usually a common state of things in a community is just the opposite of what you see in the newspapers.

A similar truth holds in regard to history. A thing must not be too interesting if it is to be accepted as the truth. The trouble is that people's desire to tell an interesting story is stronger than their desire to adhere strictly to what is so. One kind of work takes only imagination and the other one takes trouble.

HEROIC ADVENTURE IN EVEREST FILM

Struggle Against Terrific Forces Shown on Roof of the World.

The story of the Mount Everest Expedition is one of the strange and heroic adventures, as great as any in the annals of exploration; of a great struggle against terrific forces amid cold and tempest, in the rarefied atmosphere on the very roof of the world.

"The Epic of Everest" has been graphically dramatized by Captain Noel, the official photographer with the 1924 Expedition and with the three previous expeditions as well. The story he tells is one of failures and triumphs, and through the aid of the motion picture camera he brings a most complete and graphic story of the attempts to scale the dizzy heights of the highest mountain in all the world. He is to appear here on the evening of February 25 at St. Paul's Church under arrangements being made by the Kiwanis Club.

As these wonder pictures are thrown on the screen Captain Noel tells his own personal story of the purposes, the work, and the tragic results of this famous expedition. It is a story that should be heard by all who value and prize a tale of daring and indomitable courage.

Mt. Everest reigns supreme as the crowning glory of the Himalaya Mountains. It is venerated in "Lama Land" as the "Goddess Mother of the World." It lies in parts of Tibet where prior to 1924 no white man had been permitted to enter and for what reason it remained unexplored.

To travel over Tibet—the Unfriendly—to visit the fortress monasteries of the Lamas, to venture into valleys, snow-fields and glaciers never before seen by man, and finally to climb to the top of the wonderful mountain, were the reasons for the 1924 Expedition.

In command of the Expedition was the Honorable C. G. Bruce, C.N., a man of wide experience in mountain climbing. General Bruce was the leader but left the actual climbing to younger men of which Col. Norton was in command. Captain Noel as official photographer; Shebbard, in charge of transportation and luggage; Dr. Hingston, doctor and naturalist; the intrepid assistants, Irvine and Mallory, who now sleep in the snows near the top; and Odell, McDonald, Somervell and Beetham—these names are now gilt-lettered in the Book of Adventure, for they scaled a height of 28,000 feet. Five hundred others took active part in establishing food stations, camps and equipment relays.

The pictures are remarkably fine. Here is what the London Times said of them, quoting a member of the royal family:

"Prince Henry said—The expedition was indeed fortunate to have so experienced and able a photographer as Captain Noel, who had made that film. Under the most trying conditions he had taken those marvelous photographs which gave some idea of the obstacles faced and of the hardships endured. Their efforts had had most interesting and scientific results. Captain Noel enabled us to get a glimpse of the most marvelous views of this summit of the world."

MASTER OLAVESON WINS THE CLOCK

Guessed Nearest Actual Time the Clock Stopped in Maher & Wesley's Contest.

Maher and Wesley's clock guessing competition has come to an end, with Master J. Olaveson, 521 Bolivar Street, winning the prize. The clock stopped at 3.34 p.m., February 9, while the lucky winner's estimate was 7.18 p.m., February 7. The next nearest estimator was Master Berwin Tilcock, 525 Bolivar Street, with 9.43 a.m., February 7, as his guess. An interesting coincidence in this, is that Olaveson and Tilcock are teen lads, living on the same street; they are chums, and both guessed the clock would stop on February 7, the former only winning out on the hour and minutes.

This contest called for entrants estimating the time at which a handsome eight-day mahogany case Ingraham mantel clock would cease running, it having been wound up and set in motion last dollar day, January 26. Mayor Holloway started and sealed the clock, which, centering an attractive display of men's always dependable clothing in Maher and Wesley's window, 188 Charlotte Street, ticked merrily away in full view of the passing crowd until 3.24 last Wednesday afternoon.

So this eight-day timepiece continued in active service for fourteen days six hours and twenty-four minutes without rewinding, and Master Olaveson's estimate coming nearest of all competitors to that actual running, to him goes the clock itself, a worth-while prize indeed for his trouble.

This popular competition was wide open to Maher and Wesley's customers, each of whom were entitled to one guess for each dollar of their purchase during this enterprising firm's recent eight-day sale.

His Worship the Mayor broke the seals on the clock, examined the estimates and named the winner.

HOUSE UNITED.

NEW BEFORDD, Mass., Oct. 11.—Two brothers quarreled. They lived in the same house, which had been left to them "half and half" under the terms of a will. Feeling grew so bitter that one of them went to a lawyer to see if he couldn't have his half of the house torn down. But finally they made up.

EDISON, EIGHTY, TAKES DAY OFF IN CELEBRATION

Assistants Look For Busy Day With Many Callers.

OLD FRIENDS CALL.

Inventor Has Shortened His Working Day in Recent Years.

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Thomas A. Edison celebrates his most notable birthday to-day—his eightieth. The electrical wiard, who invented the incandescent light, the phonograph, and scores of other things that have helped to make the world a better and more interesting place to live in, was plugging away yesterday in his chemical laboratory just as if he were not ten years past the Psalmist's allotted span of earthly life. And he intends to go on working for some time yet.

But to-day he will take a day off for birthday observance and the inevitable interview which descends upon him every year; this year with more insistence than before, because of the occasion. William H. Meadowcroft, his assistant, who is himself 74, and looks 20 years younger, is preparing for a tumultuous day of questioning and photographing and speechmaking. For at noon Mr. Edison is to attend a luncheon of the Edison Pioneers at the Robert Treat Hotel, in Newark, and be told what his old associates think of him and his work.

Old Friends May Call.

Henry Ford, his friend and a member of the Pioneers also, was expected at Mr. Edison's home at Menlo Park late last night, or early this morning, and it may be that Harvey Firestone, who, with the late John Burroughs, made one of the most interesting quartets of friends in the country, will also drop in. But of that Mr. Edison's associates were not sure.

Mr. Edison spent all day in his laboratory at West Orange yesterday, as he does every day except Sunday. Life to Mr. Edison is a short time in which one must be exceedingly busy in order to get one's work accomplished. So he does not waste any of it. He does sleep a little longer now than he used to, for the four or five hours of sleep have been lengthened to seven, and sometimes eight. He goes to bed at 11 or 12 o'clock now, and arises at 6.30 o'clock, the only concession he has made to the demands of eighty years. He goes to work at 9 or 10 o'clock and works till 6 or 7 o'clock, and then goes home to read until bedtime.

Likes Mussolini.

Yesterday Mr. Edison had one visitor, an Italian journalist, to whom the inventor, who in later years has given more time to contemplation of things outside his work, expressed his admiration of Mussolini. He is a great believer in the eventual worth of what Mussolini is doing for Italy, and admires him primarily as a man of action, something which appeals to Mr. Edison. Mussolini also gets along with a minimum of sleep and holds every office for which he cannot find a suitable official. Mr. Edison's specialty is conducting a multitude of experiments at the same time.

Of Loyalist Descent.

The genius whose contributions to humanity are valued in billions in money and untold comfort is a descendant of one of Canada's United Empire Loyalist families.

He spent his early life in Canada. In the year 1859 he was working for a living on a Grand Trunk Railway train running between Port Huron and Detroit as a "news butcher." While experimenting with some phosphorus during his spare moments on the train, young Edison received a sound cuffing about the ears from the irate conductor.

In 1862 young Edison saved the life of the daughter of the station-master at Mount Clemens, Mich., from being run over by a train, and in gratitude the father of the girl taught the boy telegraphy. Edison quickly became a fast operator and worked for some time in the offices of the Great North-Western Telegraph Company, Front and Wellington Streets, Toronto.

One Thousand Inventions.

Edison has secured patents for more than 1,000 inventions. He has invented machines for quadruplex and suptuplex telegraphic transmission, the electric pen and mimeograph, the carbon telephone transmitter, an instrument for the detection of small changes in the temperature, the megaphone to magnify sound, the phonograph, the incandescent lamp and light system, the electric valve essential in wireless telegraphy, the alkaline storage battery. During the war Edison designed, built and successfully operated several benzol plants and carbolic acid plants. The French Government has honored him by making him a Commander of the Legion of Honor.

Mr. Edison has arrived at the conclusion that there exists more known evidence favoring than those against the immortality of the individual human intelligence.

EIGHTY TO-DAY.

THOMAS A. EDISON.

WEST ORANGE, N. J., Feb. 11.—Canadian Press — Closing another year at his labors in research and invention, Thomas Alva Edison, the inventor, to-day marked off another birthday on his calendar—this time his eightieth.

THEATRE AT THE CAPITOL.

COLLEEN MOORE IN TWINKLETOES."

The gay little lady who has become so popular with movie audiences in sparkling roles of a feathery type has the stellar part in "Twinkletoes," the feature picture at the Capitol Theatre for the week-end. But it is a different Colleen Moore who plays in this production. She has donned a golden wig with curls, displacing the straight-cut dark bob and her manners have changed just a little, to correspond with the softer type of headdress. She is the favorite of Limehouse, the much photographed London slum district that is so prominent in moving pictures at the present time. In English films, Limehouse is quite different to the American-made district, where the speech of the typical American actors mimics the dialect of the English novels, but the setting is ideal for the tiny star, whose artificial type of acting has just a hint of Lillian Gish in this picture.

Twinkletoes introduces herself as a mediator in a Limehouse street fight, boisterous in the extreme and then scintillates on the stage of the district theatre, as the premier danseuse of a ballet. Her dancing is very effective in this bit, and her multitude of admirers accord her a rousing welcome. Then her manager, "Markey" Roseleaf, an ugly part played in excellent fashion by Warner Oland, who is so admirable in roles of a disagreeable, fleshy type, tries to get hold of her, and finally succeeds in getting her to his house. But the tigerish, self-defensive instinct of a child of the slums, comes to her rescue, and she makes her escape.

"Hank," the worthless sot of the gutter, helps her throughout this episode, and there is "Chuck" Lightfoot also, (Kenneth Harlan), the champion 'pug" of the district, the "big blister," as she scornfully terms him who loves the little lady, and finally wins her love in return. His wife, Cissie, interferes with the smoothness of things for a while, and goes so far as to inform the police of the thieving activities of Twinkletoes' dad the old "pot and pan" whom she loves so much.

Having gathered together all these elements of tragedy and despair, the picture takes a back flop and peters out to an inept finale. With the intriguing agility of the silver sheet, it skips a number of intervening years, and leaves the heroine who has gone to work on the soil, with a rake and a hoe, finally in the embrace of her father, returning from enforced incarceration, also welcoming joyfully the large "Chuck," who informs her with happiness that he is "free." Whether he has "chucked" the disagreeable and drink-loving Cissie into the Thames or whether she became less disagreeable, and died at the important moment, to allow of his joining his sweetheart, no one knows. The director, perhaps, got tired and put a period to matters at once or else the censor was busy and cut out some of the picture.

As an exhibition of the emotional art of the tiny star, Colleen Moore, and as a very interesting production, as far the point where it decides to leave off suddenly, "Twinkletoes" is amusing and very entertaining.

It has as a companion attraction one of the new serial episodes of "Benson at Calford," a "Collegian" production, which features a freshman hero on his first days in college. "The Shirt Rush" of the freshman, as pictured, is a stirring bit. George Lewis is the hero, Edward Benson. —Jeanette.

AT THE REGENT

"WINGS OF THE STORM," WITH NOTED POLICE DOG, RECALLS DEEDS OF CANINES

Late United States Senator from Missouri Paid Fine Tribute to "The Greatest Friend of Man" While Addressing Jury in Dog's Behalf.

With Fox Films photoplay based on the story of a dog's life, coming to the Regent Theatre, many memories of dog tales are being revived. This is largely due to the remarkable performance given by Thunder, the beautiful police dog, who stars in "Wings of the Storm," the picture in question.

The action of the piece depicts a dog's reaction to kind treatment and his mental and physical growth from a weakling puppy to the full flower and strength of doghood.

One of the best tributes to a dog which the cinema has revived this week is that of the late United States Senator Vest, of Missouri. It is a tribute which made at a time when he was addressing a jury in behalf of a dog. He said in part:

"A man's dog stands by him in prosperity and in poverty, in health and sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground, where the wintry winds blows and the snow drives fiercely, if only he can be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer.

"He will lick the wounds and sores that come from the encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of the pauper master as if he were a prince. When all other friends desert, he remains.

"When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces, he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journey in the heavens. If fortune drives the master forth an outcast in a friendless world, homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him to guard against danger, to fight his enemies.

"And when Death comes there by the graveside will the noble dog be found."

REBEKAHS HOLD SUCCESSFUL EUCHRE

Twenty Tables Played in Millbrook Card Party.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 11.—Golden Sheaf Rebekah Lodge, No. 176, held a very successful euchre on Monday evening in the I.O.O.F. Hall, twenty tables being in use for play. Intervening events in the vicinity made the attendance less than usual when the Rebekahs entertain, but a very enjoyable time was spent.

The ladies first prize was won by Mrs. R. M. Howden, and the consolation by Mrs. H. A. Fallis; Mr. V. R. Hunter had the highest score among the gentlemen, and Mr. J. Allowell received the consolation.

Supper was served about 11.30 p.m., after which a number of the guests indulged in dancing before the gathering finally broke up.

Among those present were: Dr. H. and Mrs. Young, Mr. and Mrs. T. M. Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Harkness, Mr. and Mrs. C. Thorndyke, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Thorne, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. The Wide Awakes group Canadian Girls in Training held its regular meeting on Tuesday evening at the leader's home, sixteen members being in attendance.

After the business period, during which the girls decided to hold their annual basket social on March 17 (Saint Patrick's Day), the new "Dedication Service" recently issued from the Girls' Work Board, Toronto, was impressively carried through. This service replaces the former initiation ceremony used by C.G.I.T. groups, and brings home, in a more effective manner, the full purpose of the Canadian Girls in Training movement.

The group has now purchased the new C.G.I.T. Song Book, which is just off the press, and during the social hour at the close some of the songs, particularly those learned at the summer camp, were used for a happy sing-song such as all girls' groups thoroughly enjoy.

Two new members were enrolled at this meeting, and there is promise of others in the near future. The group has maintained a membership of about eighteen for some months, though ten is the limit usually considered as best suited for carrying through the official programme successfully.

As the girls pass their seventeenth birthday they are supposed to graduate into the senior organizations of the church, but many prefer to remain with the group in connection with which they have had training according to the four-fold standard which is the ideal for all 'teen age work among both boys and girls.

Rev. S. T. and Mrs. Tucker of Orono motored over on Tuesday and attended the funeral of the late Miss Agnes Hampton. They were guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Burnham during their stay in town.

The Junior W. A. of St. Thomas' church is holding an entertainment in the town hall on Wednesday, Feb. 16, for which Mrs. W. McKee Bingham is training those taking part. "Queen I Love You's Five O'Clock Tea" a Fairy Cantata, is the programme being arranged with much pretty detail of stage and costumes.

Bulletins received from the two rinks of local curlers who are in Toronto this week competing in the winners of the district cup series report play in the preliminary round for the Governor-Generals' trophy at the Granite Club on Tuesday morning as follows:

Millbrook: R. H. Edmunds, skip, 22; J. Steele, skip, 10. Total 32.

Toronto: Col. W. O. Morris, skip, 10; J. B. McQuaig, skip, 24. Total 34.

Majority for Toronto, 2 shots.

In the Mail and Empire trophy competition, played at the Granite Club on Tuesday afternoon results were:

Bala: H. Rousthorne, skip, 14; A. Weismuller, skip, 10. Total 24.

Millbrook: J. Steele, skip 16; R. H. Edmunds, skip, 29. Total 45.

At the Victoria Club on Wednesday morning, Millbrook won from Guelph by 21 shots; play in the afternoon was with Agincourt.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

HOW TO MAKE OUR HOMES CHRISTIAN

Text: Ephesians 5:25—6:4.

Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ also loved the church, and gave himself for it;

That he might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of water by the word.

That he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot, or wrinkle, or any such thing; but that it should be holy and without blemish.

So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies. He that loveth his wife loveth himself.

For no man ever yet hated his own flesh; but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the church;

For we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones.

For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh.

This is a great mystery; but I speak concerning Christ and the church.

Nevertheless let every one of you in particular so love his wife even as himself; and the wife see that she reverence her husband.

Children, obey your parents in the Lord: for this is right.

Honour thy father and mother; (which is the first commandment with promise;)

That it may be well with thee, and thou mayest live long on the earth.

And, ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath; but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Feb. 13. How to Make Our Homes Christian, Ephesians 5:25—6:4.

By WM. E. GILROY, D.D.
Editor of The Congregationalist.

There was a time when a homily on the making of Christian homes might have been regarded as a very ordinary and commonplace affair. At present it is so gravely needed as to have all the marks of urgency and unconventionality.

Recently I have been reading much of the literature of present-day radicalism regarding questions of sex and marital and home relationships. Much of this literature is the product of those who make a sort of gospel of the new Freudian and behavioristic psychologies and whose general attitude is that of rationalism and infidelity.

Few who have not followed the matter up or made a study of it would believe how extensive is this literature or how it flaunts itself in places and forms of respectability where but yesterday its conclusions and its assaults upon what have hitherto been regarded as virtuous ideals would have been strongly resented.

Assails Christian Ideals.

An outstanding impression, also, from the reading of such literature is that the brunt of its assault is upon monogamic marriage and the Christian ideal of loyalty, faithfulness, and consideration, as inherently enshrined in the relationships of love in the home.

Perhaps we need not worry too greatly about these things. Certainly there is nothing to be gained from drastic censorships or from the effort to suppress free discussion of life's most vital matters and problems. If the nobility and beauty of Christian ideals cannot be defended in the open, the resulting reflection upon Christians is very serious.

But there is a profound need that Christians should be alive to the situation and that we should be defending the Christian ideals of love and virtue, not merely by our words but also by our practice. The fact is that these ideals are not arbitrary matters; they are enforced in the experience of home and social life, and the more one considers the whole history of mankind and the evidences of the practice of other ideals as they appear in the stories of marital tragedy and divorce on the front pages of our newspapers, the more one comes to see that the only way of safety for society is the way of maintenance of good homes, and that good homes cannot be maintained where there is a lack of the sort of love that implies fidelity and considerateness, long suffering and service, the deep attachments that are more than physical in their nature and expression.

It is these things upon which Paul lays great stress in our lesson. Possibly Paul's discussion of these things was somewhat affected by the bias of his own day. It was an age, as most ages have been, in which woman was thought of as occupying a somewhat inferior place. The remarkable thing is that in Christian circles women should have so soon emerged to such a place of reverence and prominence.

Ceremony Not Enough.

But allowing for this mild bias in St. Paul's attitude, his suggestions concerning ideal home relationships are just as sound today as they ever were. Where there is no love, where there is no mutual obligation on the part of husband and wife, there can be no beauty of home life. Similarly, where there is not some relationship of confidence and reverence between children and parents, where there is not some sense of mutual consideration and obligation, there can be no proper conditions for the rearing of children.

Perhaps sometimes we are too ready to defend as Christian marriages relationships that have in them very little that is inherently and beautifully Christian. It takes something more than a mere ceremony, or the word of priest or minister, to establish a happy home life. There must be Christian ideals in the home.

There is no such thing as Christian marriage apart from Christian character and Christian purpose. We shall never have truly Christian homes until this is frankly recognized. This is the weakness of much of our conventional morality, and it provides a sort of loophole for much of the plausible assaults of infidelity. But these plausible assaults do not in any way minimize the beauty, purity, and satisfaction of truly Christian relationships in marriage and the home.

We can make our homes Christian only by being Christian ourselves. The man or woman who is truly Christian can never go very far astray.

THERMITE USED AT RIVER MOUTH AT BELLEVILLE

Planned To Prevent Flooding Due To Anchor Ice in Moira.

ICE VERY THICK.

In Some Places Accumulation Reached To Bottom of Bay.

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Feb. 11.—After a careful survey of the River Moira from Corbyville to the mouth of the river in this city, a distance of five miles, Prof. Barnes and staff of engineers here in connection with checking a possible flood this spring, decided to use nearly six hundred pounds of "thermite" in the harbor mouth as a preventive measure. Prof. Barnes is positive that flooding cannot take place after he has treated the ice with "thermite."

Levels were taken of the bay and holes were dug in the ice at different points testing anchor ice conditions. From the test it was learned that this condition exists nearly eighteen hundred feet from the railway bridge of the C.P.R. out into the harbor and in all that distance the anchor ice reaches to the bottom of the bay, varying in thickness from eight feet to twelve. It was also proved that the anchor ice is very solid, taking some force to drive a heavy iron bar down through the accumulation. This accumulation, said the professor, is what thermite will relieve and will give an open channel for the water to do its natural work. The changed condition of the ice will not be noticed, said the professor, for a week or two after the experiment and then one will find it is not safe to walk on as it will be so honeycombed.

Six hundred pounds of thermite was despatched and four containers each valued at $70 were discharged. In reply to an inquiry Professor Barnes stated that the heat developed by thermite was five thousand degrees fahrenheit, half the heat of the sun. "It is the principle of radiating intense heat the same as the sun's rays into the ice, allowing the channel or current of water to flow which naturally erodes and wears away the ice." The thermite does not explode, but the ice does. When the heat is driven into the ice mass it breaks the ice up into hydrogen and oxygen which causes an explosion. The eroding process caused from the "thermite" goes on for weeks after the experiment is completed.

LODGE CELEBRATES ITS ANNIVERSARY

Star of Bethlehem, L.O.B.A., 650, Holds Enjoyable Banquet.

Star of Bethlehem L.O.B.A. No. 650 celebrated its 2nd anniversary on Tuesday evening in the hall. After the general routine of business had been gone through, visitors and members to the number of about 45 sat down to a sumptuous repast prepared by a committee consisting of Past Mistress Sister Burnham (convenor), Sisters Wigg, Smith, Langton, Sr., Godfrey, Sr., Shurety, Jr., Terrace and Williams.

Bro. Sunman was of great assistance to the committee.

The cake was cut by the W. M. Sister Tate. After the inner man was satisfied, the following program was given:

A much appreciated address was given by Bro. Colonel Miller. Next was a solo rendered by Mrs. Foster, which was encored. Next was a solo by Bernice Cane. The accompanist for the soloists was Sister Freda Shurety. Speeches were delivered by R. W. Dept. Sec. Sister Staples, Sister Wright, W. M., of Vimy No. 244; Sister Frost, W.M., E. Star 525; Past Mistress Sister Foster, Vimy 244, and Past Mistress Sister Brown, Eastern Star 525. Bro. Burnham, Guardian of 650, gave a few remarks.

To embrace the whole creation with love sounds beautiful, but we must begin with the individual, with the nearest. And he who cannot love that deeply, intensely, entirely, how should he be able to love that which is remote and which throws but feeble rays upon him from a foreign star? How should he be able to love with any feeling which deserves the name of love? The greatest cosmopolites are generally the neediest beggars, and they who embrace the entire universe with love, for the most part, love nothing but their narrow self.—Herder.

Advise Women

LARGELY on medical advice, women are abandoning the old-time "sanitary pad" for a new way that supplants uncertainty with positive protection.

Sheer frocks and ill-timed social engagements no longer remain as worries. Lost days are fewer, and health better.

It is called "KOTEX." Ends the insecurity of old-time sanitary pads; 5 times as absorbent! And deodorizes—ends all fear of offending.

As easily disposed of as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

You get it at any drug or department store simply by saying "KOTEX." Buy without hesitancy, and be sure to get the genuine. Only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

Eight in 10 better-class women employ it. Proves the risk of old ways.

TORONTO MAY TAKE IN YORK

Township Council Decides To Ascertain Terms of Annexation.

44,503 PEOPLE.

TORONTO, Feb. 11. — Annexation by the city of the whole of York Township will be the topic of an informal conference to be held in the near future between civic and township officials, according to a proposal put forward yesterday at a meeting of the Township Council.

The proposal, which, in the form of a resolution, was adopted by the Council, was that a committee of the Township Council, together with Township Treasurer C. M. Wrenshall and Assesment Commissioner W. A. Clarke, should interview the city officials, and, in the words of the motion, "ascertain under what terms and conditions they (the city) would consider annexing the whole of the Township of York as a part of the City of Toronto."

If York Township were to become part of the City of Toronto, the city's assessable area would be increased by 5,050 acres and its population by 44,503 persons, according to the 1926 assessment figures. The value of its buildings was then placed at $8,449,850 and its land at $9,431,401. The total business assessment was $236,225, and the total taxable incomes amounted to $1,495,125. Thus, the total value of taxable real property was $17,931,251 and the total real and personal income assessment was $19,662,601.

The half-a-day man

FOR months he had hated to face it. . . . He was slipping. Losing out. He who once had shown such shining promise! His old-time vigor had gone. Ambition, itself! What had happened? He seemed to grow weary before the day was half-way through! What curse was beggaring his life?

Constipation blights many a bright career. It destroys initiative. It weakens the body and leads to disease after disease. Yet, constipation can be relieved—safely, permanently. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to give relief!

Why part-bran products are ineffective

Doctors recommend ALL-BRAN because it is 100% bran. They know that 100% bran means 100% results! Here is why:

ALL-BRAN carries through the system moisture which its "bulk" absorbs. And it gently distends the intestines—cleansing, removing wastes. ALL-BRAN contains sufficient "bulk" to perform this work—because it is 100% bran. In a part-bran product the quantity of bulk is too small to be entirely effective.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is sold with this definite guarantee: Eat it according to directions. If it does not relieve constipation safely, we will refund the purchase price.

Don't risk dangerous drugs

ALL-BRAN works as nature does. How different from pills and drugs whose dose must be constantly increased.

Serve ALL-BRAN with milk or cream—and add fruits or honey. Let it soak a few moments to bring out its nut-like flavor. Mix it with other cereals. Use it in soups. Try the recipes on every package.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is the original 100% bran. Made by Kellogg in London, Ontario. Comes ready to eat. Sold by all grocers. Served by hotels, restaurants. On diners.

HOW TO GET RID OF CATARRH

A Simple Safe, Inexpensive Method that Clears Out the Head, Nose and Throat.

There is no disease more offensive or disagreeable, or no disease that will lead to as much serious trouble as catarrh. You can now get rid of it by a simple, safe, pleasant home remedy discovered by Dr. Blosser, a catarrh specialist.

Dr. Blosser's Remedy is composed of medicinal herbs, flowers and berries which you smoke in a small pipe or cigarette. The warm smoke-vapor is inhaled into the air passages of the head, nose, throat and lungs and carries medicine where sprays, douches and salves cannot possibly reach. Its effect is soothing and healing and is entirely harmless. It contains no cubebs or tobacco, and may be used by children as well as adults.

If you suffer from any catarrhal trouble, catarrhal deafness, asthma hay fever, bronchial irritations, or are subject to frequent colds, get from any druggist a pocket-size package of Dr. Blosser's Cigarettes, and prove for yourself their pleasant, beneficial effects.

Federal judges recently declared unconstitutional the Kaufman Act in New York under which all railroads operating within the limits of the city are required to discontinue the use of steam locomotives.

RESIGNATION IS ACCEPTED

Congregation of Murray Street Church Regrets Departure of Pastor.

RESOLUTION PASSED.

On Wednesday evening, Feb. 9th, the members of Murray Street Baptist Church met to consider the resignation of their pastor. Many expressed their affection for Dr. Rose and sincere appreciation of his work and several suggested asking him to re-consider the matter. Since, however, the pastor had repeatedly assured the officers that his decision was final, the resignation was accepted with regret.

Then the following resolution was unanimously passed:—

"Since our beloved pastor, Dr. Rose, has intimated that his resignation, presented to the church on Sunday morning is final, we, the members of Murray Street Baptist Church, wish to express not only our regret for the necessity which compels us to accept this resignation, but also our appreciation of that modest Christian grace which has marked his efforts among us, his faithful ministry that has brought him especially near to the sick, the afflicted and the bereaved, his executive ability that has kept all our activities co-ordinated, and, above all, that fidelity with which he has interpreted the Word of God.

"His well-merited popularity has extended far beyond the pale of this congregation. The place which, in so short a time, he has made for himself in the community brings honour alike to himself to the ministry and to this church.

"Mrs. Rose's unfailing support of her husband in his work and visitation has not only been a source of strength to him, but has won from this congregation its highest appreciation and admiration. Her fidelity and graciousness her leadership in the women's activities, and her work among the young people will live long in the affection and memory of this people.

"As these faithful friends depart from us to enter upon other fields of service, we wish to assure Dr. and Mrs. Rose and also Miss Evelyn (who has so modestly and yet efficiently taken her place in the church's activities) of our continued interest in their welfare, our prayers for their success and happiness, our affection and our loyalty to the memory of their efficient and self-sacrificing service among us."

Another motion was also carried, requesting Dr. Rose to occupy the parsonage so long as it may suit his convenience.

Before the meeting adjourned, a strong pulpit committee was appointed to arrange for supplies and the calling of another pastor.

BEGIN DRIVE FOR RADIO LICENSES

Dominion Officials Order Inspection To Round Up Fee Dodgers.

ONLY HALF PAID.

OTTAWA, Feb. 11.—Radio fans who dodge the $1 license fee are liable to encounter considerable static when Dominion Government inspectors, accompanied by Royal Canadian Mounted Policemen, ring their front doorbells and ask to see the receipt for this year's fee.

The Government Radio Branch has ordered a drive in Toronto, Ottawa, Montreal, Halifax and Victoria to round up the fee-dodgers, who number nearly 200,000. The maximum fine is $5 0 and costs, but the usual fine for a first offense is $3 and costs, which means a total of $8 or $9.

Of the 350,000 owners of radio receiving sets in Canada, only 160,000 have taken out licenses. In Ontario there are 76,370 licenses issued, and in Toronto 21,000, which is 3,000 more than last year. It is estimated there are 40,000 or 50,000 radio sets in use in Toronto, and 150,000 or more in the Province of Ontario.

LEGION NOTES

At the Canadian Legion Hall last evening Tom Tothill, the eminent English billiardist gave a sparkling display in his match with "Jack" Matthews to whom he conceded a 300 start in a 700 point game.

From start to finish of the game he showed himself to be a master of the art of billiards, making breaks of 126, 123 and 96 with consummate skill, and with an action that was full of grace and precision. Tothill's performance last evening was a wonderful lesson to the billiard fans present. His sureness of eye and his delicacy of touch, allied with his comprehensive knowledge of the tangles and other intricacies of the game, was exemplified in his action while at the table. At the conclusion of the match Tothill gave a very interesting lecture on the finer points of the game, which was of much interest to all present. The players were introduced by Col. Ackerman, the president of the local branch of the Legion. Comrade N. E. Crowe acted as official marker during the progress of the game. While the attendance was somewhat small those who were fortunate enough to be present saw an exhibition of billiards from the greatest expert of the game in Canada.

YOUNG PEOPLE PRESENT PLAY

"Home Ties" Viewed By Appreciative Audience —Church Meeting.

OMEMEE NEWS.

OMEMEE, Feb. 11.—On Friday evening, a small but appreciative audience greeted the young folk of Trinity United church when in Coronation Hall they presented their play entitled "Home Ties". The entire play required only one interior scene and the stage looked at its best with a prettily draped casement window, softly shaded lights, baskets of flowers, etc.

The play was a wholesome love story, the moral of which was "The sins of the father shalf be visited upon his children." Harold Vincent, a handsome New Yorker, losing the girl he loved because his father had lured the mother of the girl away in days gone by.

Each character in the play was a star and there was just enough pathos to make the story of the play cling.

The cast of characters was as follows:

Ruth Winn, the heroine—Violet McBain.

Martin Winn, her father—Cecil Kennedy.

Melissa Winn, her aunt—Florence Rutherford.

Mrs. Poplin, a lady with symptoms—Mary Faulkner.

Josiah Tizzard, an umbrella mender—Ted Marsh.

Lindy Jane, colored maid—Evelyn Bland.

Alma Wayne, Ruth's New York friend—Elda Overholt.

Harold Vincent, Ruth's New York admirer—Ross Rutherford.

Leonard Everett, his rival—Evie Corneil.

Three pretty choruses were given between acts by a group of girls. The first chorus "In A Little Spanish Town" was given in Spanish costume with tamborine drill included. The second, "When the Red, Red Robin Comes Bobbin' Along" drew forth rounds of applause, when the first pair of robins to be seen here this spring hopped in looking their part. Misses Frances MacPherson and Evelyn Morcombe were the assistants. The final chorus was "The Rose's Dream", and the girls arrayed in white and carrying a garland of roses presented a pretty appearance.

Miss Lillian Race was the efficient pianist of the evening and the play was under the direction of Mrs. Rowland and Miss Lila Parsons with Rev. E. W. Rowland as critic.

Those taking part in the chorus were Misses Reta Kennedy, Jessie Lamb, Edna Morcombe, Mary Lowe, Jane Earle, Mary Weir and Christina Cornell.

The proceeds of the evening amounted to $83, which was gratifying to those in charge as it was feared that owing to one hundred fans going to the hockey tournament at Fenelon Falls the same evening the play might have to be postponed.

Vestry Meeting.

The annual vestry meeting of Christ church was held on Thursday evennig, Feb. 3, in the basement.

A. W. Hill, as people's warden, presented an excellent report of the financial affairs of the parish. The financial outlook is very optimistic despite somewhat heavy expenditures during the past year. This optimism was in evidence in the reports of all the societies belonging to the church.

Messrs. A. Hill and Vincent Jones were re-elected as wardens for the ensuing year.

Trinity W.M.S.

The Women's Missionary Society of Trinity United church met at the home of Mrs. R. Poast on Thursday afternoon in their regular monthly meeting. The president, Mrs. Rowland conducted the meeting. Following the opening hymn and prayer, the Scripture lesson found in St. Luke, 5 chapter, 12-26 verses, was read by Miss N. Rutherford. The devotional leaflet entitled, "Faith and Forgiveness" was given by Mrs. J. Bushnell followed by a short reading, "If ye keep in memory", by Mrs. C. L. Morcombe.

The 5th chapter in the study book, "New days in Old India" which dealt with the publishing of missionary literature was divided into three parts and was splendidly taken by Mrs. Rowland, Miss Lillian Race, and Mrs. R. Williamson. Several interesting views were distributed showing glimpses of scenes in China and Japan.

Miss Lila Parsons contributed a pretty vocal solo, "In Jesus," much to the delight of all.

Owing to the books having to be closed the last of March, the Easter thankoffering was discussed and it was decided to hold same during the month of March. Mrs. Lamb and Mrs. Rowland were appointed a committee to communicate with the Rev. Mr. Kitchen, who is home on furlough, to give the special address.

Mrs. C. L. Morcombe and Mrs. R. Bradley were appointed a programme committee for the next three months. Mrs. Lamb's kind offer to be responsible for the missionary topic in Sunday school was readily accepted.

It was decided to make preparation for some quilts, each member being asked to contribute a strip one foot wide and seven feet long.

The March meeting will be held in the church when the election of officers will take place.

Mrs. C. R. Corneil, Mrs. G. Haygarth and Mrs. Rowland were the hostesses for the day.

The young people of Christ church enjoyed a merry sleighride on Monday evening, when under ideal weather condition and splendid roads they journeyed as far as Downeyville. Upon returning to the church they were ready to devour the hot dogs and coffee which was in waiting and, needless to say, it took no small amount to satisfy the numerous healthy appetites created.

OYSTER SUPPER

WARKWORTH, Feb. 11.—The regular meeting of St. Andrew's Y.P.A. was held on Monday evening, the basement being comfortably filled. The meeting was opened by singing "Blest Be the Tie that Binds". Interesting papers were given on the life of John Calvin by Miss Marion Wilson, and the life of John Knox by Miss Gladys Weir. The scripture lesson was read by Everett Nelson.

Several hymns were sung and Mr. C. T. Maycock favored the audience with a solo, "Asleep in the Deep" which was well rendered.

The main item on the programme was a debate "Resolved that the pulpit has done more for mankind than the press." The affirmative was taken by Gordon McCubbin and Edith Richards and the negative by Ivan Duncan and Cleora Cockburn. Great credit is due all the debaters on the excellent points they brought out on both sides, and the judges found it very difficult to come to a decision. After much consideration the affirmative won. So great was the interest taken in this debate that the young people intend having another one in the near future.

BETHANY UNITED W.M.S. MEETING

Interesting Programme Given and Plans Made For Coming Sessions.

BETHANY, Feb. 11.—Rev. Fred J. Reid, recently returned from China, will preach in the United church here on Sunday, Feb. 13th. Mr. Reid will also preach at the Franklin appointment on Sunday morning. While in the village Mr. Reid will be the guest of Rev. and Mrs. Alfred Poulter.

The Women's Missionary Society of the United church held its regular meeting at the home of the Misses Richardson, Main street, on Tuesday afternoon, eight members and two visitors were present. A very interesting programme was given under the leadership of the president, Mrs. T. Jackson. A chapter in the study book, "New Days in Old India," entiled "Gateways to Knowledge," was told by Mrs. Jackson and Miss Weatherilt. The devotional leaflet, "Faith and Forgiveness" was read by Miss Elsie Richardson.

It was decided that the Auxiliary observe the day of prayer, holding a meeting March 4 in the Sunday school room of the church and the ladies give their regularly quarterly tea afterwards. Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. Monk and Miss Aida Richardson were appointed a committee to arrange for the programme and tea. Each member was asked to bring her mite box to the meeting. It was also decided to hold the annual Sunday service as close to Easter Sunday as possible. Mrs. Ona Thorndyke and the Misses Ada and Elsie Richardson were appointed a committee to arrange for the music for this occasion. The speaker for this service will be announced later. After concluding the meeting, afternoon tea was given by the Misses Richardson and the usual social half hour was spent.

MISSIONARY TALK ON SUNDAY SCHOOL

Mrs. Hetherington Tells of Work in Home Mission Fields.

WARSAW, Feb. 11.—The United Sunday school had a special missionary service on Sunday morning. Mrs. Herrington gave a talk on the Home Missions in Canada and New foundland, using a map, with each mission station of the church marked.

Before the actual mission talk she asked if the boys and girls present appreciated the advantages they had. They have a beautiful church, Sunday school, and church services every Sunday, and a minister right in Warsaw. Later on she pointed out some places in Labrador where there are no schools, the people are very poor, supplies can come only in the summer, and missionaries can visit the people only a few times during the year. In many parts of the west there are services only once a month, and that for four or five months. Some places a missionary has not visited for four years, and right along the railway there is a stretch of over 200 miles with no mission station. She showed that the missionary must be able to do almost anything. Once her husband was barely settled in a place when a man came to the house to have his razor sharpened.

Mrs. Herrington touched on missionary work from Newfoundland to British Columbia showing the different needs in the several places, and she did it in a very interesting way.

The evening service in the United Church was conducted by the Tuxis boys of the Regent street square in Lakefield, led by Norman Lemay, a member of the boys 'parliament, and accompanied by Mr. Burroughs.

The four-squares of the Tuxis boys and of the Trail Rangers, was explained fully. The requirements also the training, and the need of the training, were fully and interestingly explained.

At the close the boys sang "The Little Brown Church on the Hill."

There is nothing of the kind at present in Warsaw. Some years ago, H. G. E. Choate organized and carried on a boy scout patrol for some time. Later there was a Union Tuxis Square, but that was stopped in a peculiar way though some of the boys begged one of the mentors to take it up again.

Miss Edith Grant spent the weekend at the parsonage with Mrs. Herrington.

Mr. James Tighe has been ill for some time and was taken to the hospital on Monday.

OFFICERS SEIZE SEVEN STILLS

Two-Day Search Near Bancroft Has Good Results.

PROTECTION ASKED.

TORONTO, Feb. 11.—Seven stills were seized at seven different places in Hastings County during a two-day round-up, carried out by Revenue Preventive Officer Edward Floody and Royal Canadian Mounted Police Officer G. G. Davis, who have returned to Toronto.

Bancroft Base of Operations.

The officers left here Monday morning for Bancroft. From that centre they directed their operations, acting on information furnished by a group of law-abiding citizens of Hastings County, who complained of the open selling of liquor on the streets of Bancroft to miners and lumberjacks from nearby camps.

The two officers worked with despatch, covering a radius of about 12 miles, but they said last night they would have met with even more success in seizures had not their presence become known and warnings been sent by telephone over the district.

One Owner Fined.

One of the still owners appeared before Magistrate J. L. Jarman, and was fined $200 and costs. Other owners will come up later, after samples of liquor seized have been analyzed by the Customs Department at Ottawa.

Two of the seized stills were found hidden beneath a snowbank. Three of them were made out of old milk cans and, while they were not as modern as some of those found near this city, they turned out a well-made brand of liquor, according to the officers.

More Protection Sought.

Citizens of Bancroft intend to take up at once the question of better Provincial Police protection for the district. At the present time, they say, there are no officers in or around the mining and lumbering camps, and men have been able to make and sell liquor without interference.

It is the intention of the people of the district to appeal to the Attorney-General to have an officer stationed at Bancroft. Operation of the stills just seized has been going on for sometime, they say.

Lace Trimmed Hats For Men In Jersey

ATLANTIC CITY, Feb. 11.—The well-dressed man will wear chic lace-trimmed hats of tulle or voile this season in Jersey, it was declared by F. S. Donnelly, Trenton, newly-elected president of the New Jersey Retail Clothiers' and Furnishers' Association, in an address before that body at the Hotel Ambassador. Other hats, he said, would show red and green feathers. Mr. Donnelly predicted the return before the Fall of derby hats, and the convention agreed with him that it was "scandalous" for men to wear "last year's hats." Besides, suggested one delegate, it isn't good business.

At a recent inquest in London it was stated that a bullet, after penetrating a man's heart, passed through the bed on which he was lying, penetrated the floor and pierced the ceiling of the public bar below. There it struck a barrel and glanced off into the pocket of a customer, where it remained unnoticed for 20 minutes.

A RARE FRUIT.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—One of the rarest of fruits is the mangosteen, which can be grown only where the temperature never drops below 35 degrees above zero. It is about the size of a mandarin orange, with a thick, woody rind. Queen Victoria, it is said, once offered a large reward for the first man who succeeded in placing a dish of mangosteens on her table at Buckingham Palace, but it is said the reward was never won.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

"Why do you want Chris Wiley?" Faith asked breathlessly. "You don't think—"

"I think just what you think, Miss Faith," Chief Morehouse nodded rather grimly. "I think Chris Wiley is responsible for your sister's disappearance. Now, go on with your story, please."

Faith told him, haltingly, the story of her finding Cherry's farewell note, after she had gained entrance to Cherry's room through the open window.

"Now let me see that note."

"It—it's so pitiful," Faith's voice caught on a sob. But she opened her handbag tremblingly and fumbled for the folded bit of paper. "Oh—I forgot! Here are the pieces of jewelry that Mr. Cluny had given Cherry. She left them on the dresser. She didn't take a thing he had given her, didn't wear a single garment of her trousseau."

The chief of police examined the envelope on which Cherry had written her hasty farewell.

"H-mm! 'Return to Christopher Wiley, 1115 Chauncey Street'," he read aloud. "This is postmarked three months ago, Miss Faith. Held a love letter, I suppose? She must have kept his love letters handy, I'd say."

Hot blood flamed in Faith's cheeks. "I—didn't mean to forget—she was reading a lot of old love letters when I called her to take her bath at eight o'clock. They were scattered all over the bed, on which she was sitting."

"What did she say about them—the love letters?" Chief Morehouse asked.

"She said," Faith paused and frowned in an effort at concentration, "she said, 'I was reading some of my old love letters. I thought I'd burn them up, but now I don't believe I will. They may be all I'll ever know of love'."

"H-mm! Getting cold feet then, wasn't she?" Morehouse mused. He turned the envelope over and read slowly, aloud, Cherry's pathetic farewell. "'I'm running away, Faith. Tell Muggy I'll be all right. Don't worry. I couldn't do it after all, Faith. He was so old! Please don't try to follow me. Give me time to get away or I'll kill myself. Love, Cherry'." The frantic words assumed new and terrible significance in his measured, emotionless voice.

"Where is she? Oh, where is she?" Faith cried out wildly. "She may be marrying Chris Wiley right now!"

"That's what we've got to find out," Chief Morehouse rose from his chair. "I've got to get busy, Hathaway. That'll be all for this time, Miss Faith. And thank you for your frankness. I wish all witnesses were as conscientious. You can take her home now, Bob, but I'd like to have you come back right away. And don't leave the house, Miss Faith. We might need to question you again—along other lines, you know. Now don't worry. I'm going to send telegrams all over the state, and we'll have Miss Cherry back here tonight or in the morning, sure. Good-night. Try to get some sleep."

As Faith and Bob left the house, they were followed by the curious, speculative glances of half a dozen officers and by the malevolent, hating eyes of Alexander Cluny and his son, Ralph.

At the curb, as they were settling themselves in Bob's sedan, a police flivver panted up, shuddered to a stop, and Farrel sprang to the ground.

"Hello, Farrel. Any news of Chris Wiley?" Bob leaned from his car to ask.

"Found his bachelor apartment locked up. And at the garage where he keeps his car a guy told me that Wiley had been there at about nine to fill up with gas and oil, and that he had a red-headed young lady with him. Looks like he's skipped, don't it?"

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 12, 1927

(Copyright, 1927, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

This is a fairly fortunate day, according to astrology, but there are certain adverse aspects.

Bankers will push business successfully early in the morning and there will be great transactions with foreign countries, it is foretold.

Big business is to prosper, for it will enter new fields and will benefit from world distresses.

All the law courts will be busy through the year, it is foretold, for there will be sensational cases involving prominent persons.

This is a time when error in many forms and vice in all its hideous aspects apparently will reach the highest point, but it is the apex of evil, the seers declare.

Under this rule both men and women may be exceedingly self-centered, and for this reason many quarrels are likely to develop.

Vanity and egotism will be evident under this sway, which is especially threatening for actors and writers.

There is an adverse sway for surgeons to-day and operations may be less successful than usual.

If the stars are read aright women are to turn to modest modes and to wear longer skirts.

Again the virtues rather than the vices are to be cultivated, for fashions will change suddenly and they will be reflected in stage and screen.

Following a sensational book, literature is to show much spiritual inspiration, it is prognosticated.

France is subject to some sort of a calamity that will cause much loss of life and property.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have a few annoyances in the coming year, but they are to be rarely successful, it is augured.

Children born on this day should be fortunate in one of the learned professions. Physicians are born under this rule.

FRIED VEGETABLES.

Fried vegetables are delicious, raw tomatoes, eggplant, squash or cold boiled turnips may be simply rolled in flour and fried in butter.

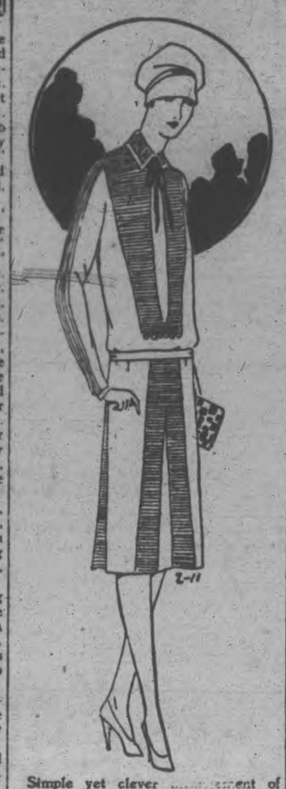
DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL



Simple yet clever ... ment of tucks provides the trimming of this frock of plum-colored silk crepe.

Pin tucks, fine tucks, double tucks, waffle tucks, horizontal tucks, diagonal tucks, spiral tucks, perpendicular tucks—tucks of every sort that the fertile minds of dressmakers can devise—appear in the new clothes designed for spring. Frequently frocks are ornamented with tucked insets in diamond, square or other geometrical shapes. The finest of pin tucking is then employed. Ruffles, flounces and tiers are sometimes finely pin tucked at the top, with the material flaring below where the tucking ceases.

This revival of tucking is part of the general tendency on the part of many of the best designers to get away from ostentatious trimming, and to make skillful use of the material of the frock rather than to introduce the more elaborate metal embroidery and beading and other extraneous ornamentation that has been usual within the last six months or so.

Several of the fabrics which have been predicted for spring lend themselves especially well to the intricate sorts of fine tucking. Cashmere in dark or neutral colors—black, navy blue, beige and gray especially—will be much used for spring coats and in the hands of experts this fabric may be tucked exquisitely.

By clever arrangement of these tucks in curves, angles and perpendicular or horizontal stripes, much can be done for the woman whose natural silhouette is too substantial or deficient in the proportions that fashion marks with approval.

Various silk crepes and the newly revived wool voiles also lend themselves to tucking and experts in this work have even succeeded in tucking georgette, which, however, might be too much for the amateur.

As spring draws near and the dressmakers begin to make plans for summer frocks these various pleating devices will, no doubt, be applied to cottons and linens.

HOME AND SCHOOL ASSOCIATION MEETS

Annual Meeting Held by King George School Branch.

On Tuesday evening, February 8, the members of the King George Home and School Association gathered for their annual business meeting and election of officers. The secretary gave a summary of the year's work which was quite encouraging. The treasurer reported a substantial balance in the bank.

Mrs. Ernest Scott, president for the past two years, tendered her resignation and extended to the Association her best wishes for the future, promising to still assist in the work, though not as president. An expression of appreciation was then given Mrs. Scott for her fidelity to the Association. She was always an enthusiastic worker and extended to all members and visitors the same genial welcome.

The officers for the year 1927 are: Hon. President, Mrs. Ernest Scott; President, Mrs. Craig; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. W. Pomeroy; 2nd Vice-President, Mrs. Pammett; Secretary, Mr. Trevor Miller; Treasurer, Mrs. V. Hamilton; Pianist, Mrs. James Ellis; Convenor of Social Committee, Mrs. Hamilton; Convenor of Programme Committee, Mr. James Ellis.

After the business session, Mr. Ellis led the community singing. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Ebbs and her committee. After a few remarks from the new president, Mrs. Craig, the meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

MAGNESIA BEST FOR YOUR INDIGESTION

Warns Against Doping Stomach With Artificial Digestents

Most people who suffer either occasionally or chronically from gas, sourness and indigestion, have now discontinued disagreeable diets, patent foods and the use of harmful drugs, stomach tonics, medicines and artificial digestents, and instead, following the advice so often given in these columns, take a teaspoonful or four tablets of Bisurated Magnesia in a little water after meals with the result that their stomach no longer troubles them, they are able to eat as they please and they enjoy much better health. Those who use Bisurated Magnesia never dread the approach of meal time because they know this wonderful anti-acid and food correctives, which can be obtained from any good drug store, will instantly neutralize the stomach acidity, sweeten the stomach, prevent food fermentation, and make digestion easy. Try this plan yourself, but be certain to get Bisurated Magnesia especially prepared for stomach use.

CLAIMS HE WAS ILLEGALLY HELD AT HOSPITAL

William E. Bastedo Detained In Psychiatric Hospital at Toronto.

SEIZED ONE NIGHT.

Held For Mental Examination Without Warrant, He Says.

TORONTO, Feb. 11 — That he was apprehended by two men in civilian clothes in the darkness of night on Glenholme Avenue, forced into a waiting automobile and driven to the Psychiatric Hospital, Surrey Place, and detained there three days, is the allegation of William E. Bastedo, who is now visiting his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Read, Gilmour street, Peterboro.

Despite the fact that he demanded that he be shown a warrant before being detained at the hospital and refused to sign a voluntary admittance to the institution, Bastedo charges he was held there in custody for mental examination. At the expiration of the three days he says he was released, but was refused a written statement that attending physicians had found him to be of sound mind and possessing his full mental capacity.

Graduate in Law

Mr. Bastedo said last night he was a graduate of the University of Toronto and a barrister. He had practised law on Danforth Avenue, in Toronto, he said. Owing to ill-health of his child he and Mrs. Bastedo had spent considerable time in Florida. He also served fourteen months with the Princess Pats, and was four years in Otaki.

Since his release from hospital, Mr. Bastedo declared he has engaged Mr. T. N. Phelan, K.C., in an effort to find out who was responsible for his being taken into custody and held for mental examination. The occurrence took place, he says, on the night of January 13, and he was allowed his freedom January 16. During the time he was detained, he charges, the authorities failed to notify his wife in Florida of his whereabouts.

Telegrams Exchanged.

Mr. Bastedo made it known that he had a large amount of money invested, and that while he was in the South he had engaged another lawyer to look after his affairs. Telegrams, he said, were forwarded by him worded in such a way as to be understood in the light of information contained in letters sent on in advance of the telegrams.

Bastedo thinks that the telegrams may have had something to do with his detention. All telegrams, he said, were supposed to have been confidential.

In his endeavors to trace this theory, he said, Mr. Phelan had sought information from the Provincial Secretary's office. This was refused, he alleged, and he was told he could not enter action against the Government department without first having secured a fiat.

Dr. Farrar, when spoken to last night over the telephone, referred enquiries to the Provincial Secretary's Department, which, he said, had complete details of the case. He did say, however, that Bastedo's being taken into the hospital was done within Government regulations and that Bastedo was a "sick man."

From the Provincial Secretary's Department it was learned the case was under consideration, and that Mr. Bastedo had been reported to have been in a very nervous condition.

I was in a very poor state of health—was weak, it seemed that all my strength had left me. I could not do anything. It was quite necessary that I have a good tonic to make me strong enough for my second operation so I took Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and it soon had me well and strong, and I came thru the operation without any trouble. JACK MINER TELLS OPINION OF FORD

Backs Motor Magnate Up In Prohibition of Nurses Smoking.

During the past few years, whenever any of my friends such as Mr. Ford, Mr. Mellon, Mr. Henry M. Leland, Mr. Tyrus R. Cobb, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, Mr. W. K. Kellogg, Mr. John Haggarty, Governor Grosbeck, Mr. George D. Pratt and others have visited my home and been my guests at the bird sanctuary, my mail has been flooded with requests from the press asking me my impressions of my well-known guests. I have always kept from giving the press the impressions I formed of my guests, because my impressions of my friends that visit me are always one hundred per cent up to the standard or else they would not be invited to my home.

But the other morning, while on the train en route from a lecture tour in New York and Boston, Mass., while waiting for my breakfast to be served, a morning newspaper was handed me which, on the front page in capital letters, printed these words: "Henry Ford Hospital Nurses Discharged for Smoking Cigarettes." I then thought of several requests I have had to put in print the impression I had of Mr. Ford. The Ford Hospital organization taking this stand against cigarettes, I no longer can keep quiet and think every one of his many friends all over the world, and organizations for the betterment of humanity, should back him up in this step, which will not benefit him so much, but the rising and unborn generations.

The Henry Ford Hospital in Detroit is owned by Mr. Henry Ford and his family, representing an investment of over ten millions of dollars. Men and women have travelled from all over the world for treatment of their ailments there. I mention these facts to show it is no small organization, not with the spirit to advertise the hospital, as it is run solely on a non-profit basis and, when the Henry Ford organization stopped ladies smoking cigarettes under his employment, I say this alone shows you the calibre of Mr. Henry Ford and his interest in the moral side of life and in the born and unborn generations, and this fact, connected with the character of Mr. Henry Ford will go down in history.

If more men will take Mr. Ford's example and have backbone instead of wishbone, it will help slow this world up a bit and children a century from now will have healthy reasons to thank him. So many men ask me why I am so opposed to women smoking, and in reply I will say: The biggest asset the world has is its babies and the hope of the world for permanent peace is more love and education among its babies and profit by the mistakes of their foreparents; but what a pitiful thing if these babies' growth intellectually and morally is going to be stunted through the motherhood of the land smoking cigarettes months before they are born. Right here let me say to the world, I will give more for any child's nine months' health and education before he is born than I will any nine years after. I think every human being wants to see the world take a step forward, and not backward, and who, in the name of God, can say that by women smoking it makes this world better.

So many people have asked me what I thought of Mr. Ford and his peace ship idea. Let me say right here, it showed where his heart was and his willingness with his money to stop the war if money would have stopped it and, had his efforts been of any use and had any effect, my sister's three boys and many other mothers' boys would undoubtedly be alive and well today and have a chance to be of some use to Canada instead of being blown to pieces and buried in France. And many a heart still bleeding with tears would today be rejoicing at this home [illegible] knock a man if his intentions are good even though ma[illegible]

EXPLORERS TELL OF TORTURE BY MONGOL TROOPS

Reach San Francisco With Wrists Still Showing Scars.

BRING OVIS POLI.

Many Other Rare Specimens Brought Back From Thibet.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 11. — With their wrists still showing scars from thongs with which they were bound three months ago by half-savage Mongolians who tortured them and held them under death sentence for more than forty hours, James L. Clark, of New York, and William J. Morden, of Chicago, arrived here Wednesday with the fruits of their Ovis Poli expedition for the American Museum of Natural History, New York.

Last November 6, they related, they were travelling through the wild, wooded hills of Jijiho country when their party was set upon by a motley throng of Mongol soldiers, wearing discarded uniforms of the Russian Reds. Their three native interpreters were beaten into unconsciousness, while Clark and Morden were trussed up to poles in a reed hut, where the captors tortured them by pouring hot water over them.

Led Out For Execution.

After a night of torture they were told they were to be executed, and were led into an open space where an armed squad awaited. There seemed to be a change in plans, however, and they were taken to another hut, where they were stripped and left without food until the next morning. The temperature was near zero, they said.

The next morning they were again told they were to be shot. They had bade each other farewell, when into the camp rode an "officer of intelligence," leader of the band, who had been absent. He ordered their release, and they proceeded to Uptsum, a town 100 miles distant.

Clark and Morden brought with them what is said to be the most elaborate collection of the Marco-polo sheep, or ovis poli, ever gathered, together with many other specimens of rare animals from the Thian Shan Mountains. They took more than 20,000 feet of motion pictures and 4,000 other photographs.

From India through Thibet and China, they travelled nearly 8,000 miles, much of the distance being covered on foot. They started from Bombay last March.

LEOPOLD FACES MURDER CHARGE

Convicts Who Killed Joliet Guard Say He Was Leader.

SIX CONCERNED.

JOLIET, Ill., Feb. 11—"Just a bit of corroboration," and Nathan F. Leopold, Jr., will be charged with his second murder, States Attorney Hjalmar Rehn of Will County, said yesterday.

The six convicts who escaped from the State Penitentiary a year ago after killing Deputy Warden Peter N. Klein, have made statements that Leopold was their leader and that he originated and worked out the plot. They were captured, tried and sentenced to death for their deed and were to have been hanged yesterday. But on Wednesday they were given a stay and it was then they accused Leopold.

"It has become my duty to question those convicts because of their statements," States Attorney Rehn said. "I will do so, and if I can obtain any corroboration at all I will ask the death penalty for Leopold."

Massey-Harris Up 5 Points Seagram Is Close Second

TORONTO, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press).—Spectacular trading in Massey-Harris and Seagram issues featured the trading in this morning's session on the Toronto Stock Exchange. The former stock was the active leader and soared up five points to 92 1-4, it receded, however, under heavy selling pressure to 87, but firmed back again to 92 1-4 under persistent inquiry.

Seagram was second in activity and sold upwards to 24 7-8, a gain of seven-eighths.

Industrial Alcohol, British Columbia Fishing, and International Nickel were other stocks to figure prominently in the trading. Industrial Alcohol displayed firm tendency, advancing 1 1-4 points to 26 7-8. British Columbia Fishing sold up 1 3-4 to 91 3-4. International Nickel was also a strong spot selling up 1 3-4 to 41 3-4.

Stocks Remain Steady During Much Heavy Selling

TORONTO, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press).—Heavy selling was in evidence at this morning's session on the Standard Mining Exchange with transactions totalling 503,048 shares. The majority of stocks were steady, though Castle Trethewey was an exception to the general trend, selling off two points at 108. Victory Silver lost ½ in active trading to 10½. Barry Hollinger, Area, Dome Mines and Laval-Quebec were strong features, these stocks scoring advances ranging from 1½ to 5 cents.

Pre-Holiday Dullness On Chicago Exchange

CHICAGO, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press)—For the most part, wheat traders marked time early to-day, apparently disinclined to take a decided stand in the face of the holiday tomorrow. Owing to the absence of any striking new incentive, scattered commission house absorption sufficed to hold prices. Starting unchanged to 1-4 cent off, wheat soon rallied and swung within about a half cent range. Corn, oats, and provisions also were firm, corn opening 1-8 cent to 5-8 cent higher and subsequently keeping near to initial figures.

Rails Reach High Level General Upward Movement

Rails reach high matvoice3e ser

NEW YORK, Feb. 11. C. P. — Resumption in the upward movement in to-days stock market, was accompanied by a revival of speculative interest in the rails shares. Some sluggishness developed in the early trading but by afternoon the entire market was headed upward with over 20 issues elevated to their highest prices in years. General Motors was slow in responding to the raising of the annual dividend from $7 to $8, opening fractionally lower, and then mounting 3 points as large buying orders poured into the market for that issue. Reports that large traders were again active in the market coupled with the decision of W. C. Durant, prominent operator, to cancel his contemplated trip to Italy this month, stimulated pool activity in many stocks. Official denial of reports that Chairman Gary of the United States Steel Corporation, would resign this year, also were well received in financial district.

New York Central and New Haven shared the leadership of the rail group, each climbing 3 or more points on large buying orders. Wheeling and Lake Erie common sensational of markets earlier in the week did not appear on the tape until after noon, and then sold at 70, a drop of 15 points below the previous transactions.

VERY IMPORTANT TO-NIGHT'S GAME

Petes Must Win To Be Sure of Play-off.

The standing of the teams in the local senior group is as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	T.	Pts.
Grads	9	0	0	18
Peterborough	6	3	1	13
Marlboros	5	5	0	10
T. C. C.	2	6	1	5
North Toronto	1	9	0	2

After to-night's fixture the Petes and Marlboros have but one game each each to play, the Petes meeting Varsity and the Dukes clashing with Toronto Canoe Club. The importance of to-night's game is seen in the fact that if Marlboros won and then beat T. C. C. the Petes would have to win from the Grads in Toronto to hold second place. On the other hand, a Peterborough win would put the Petes five points ahead of Marlboros.

THE TELEPHONE KIWANIS SUBJECT

K. J. Dunstan Addresses Members at Regular Weekly Luncheon.

K. J. Dunstan, vice president of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada, was the special speaker at the Kiwanis luncheon today, and he took for his subject "The Telephone."

Not actuated by a desire for fame or for gold, but to help that unfortunate class who are born deaf and thus unable to speak. Professor Graham Bell and his father before him made a study of the vibration of the vocal chords and the transmission of speech. In carying out these experiments, Professor Bell discovered the telephone accidentally in his desire to help others.

Professor Bell was born in Edinburgh and educated in London University. After graduation he taught deaf mutes for several years, when his health broke down, and at the age of 23 he came to Canada with his parents. They came to Paris and later settled on the Bell homestead near Brantford. By coming to Canada, Professor Bell regained his health, and he went to Boston to teach in a deaf and dumb institution, but he spent his holidays at Brantford. While on his holidays he was always working on the problem of transmitting speech and in 1874 the idea of the telephone came to him, and later on in that year it was invented in Boston. As the telephone was conceived in Canada and born in the United States both countries can claim credit for this great achievement.

The speaker gave a brief survey of early experiments which had been carried out by French and German scientists as early as 1854. These scientists were able to have pitch transmitted, but not speech. Prof. Bell's great problem was to get a current of electricity which varied in density as air does in density.

In 1874 the first telephone exchange was put into operation in New Haven, and the first commersializing of the telephone was done in the city of Hamilton in 1877. Establishing the telephone was a hard, uphill job, and it was classed as a toy, a freak, and people had no faith in it. The transmission was very weak and many were the difficulties which had to be surmonnted by Professor Bell and his little group of workers.

Mr. Dunstan said "It was in the early stages of the telephone that the system was decidedly based on an exchange plan whereby any person could talk to whoever he wanted to, rather than have a lot of private lines. To-day a person has a choice of between 17 and 18 million subscribers. It has always been the idea of the company to furnish a universal service and in North America this has been possible. In Europe, where there are different nations, and various languages, the telephone has come under political influence, which has jeopardized the system.

"In the United States to-day there are 16,000,000 telephones and in Canada 1,500,000. The United States heads the world with 14 telephones per 100 of population and Canada is second with 11.6 per 100.

In North America there are on an average 75,000,000 messages a day, and over $400,000,000 is paid out annually in salaries. Toronto has 165,000 telephones or one in every four of population. There are 1,500,000 daily calls.

With the discovery of the telephone has followed many other important discoveries. Radio is the hand maiden of the telephone. All kinds of detectors have been invented and loud speakers are now used whereby thousands of people can hear the same speech. Photographs can be transmitted and an automatic system is coming into use.

In discussing the latter system the speaker said it was very expensive, and it only could be used in cities with more than two exchanges. At the present time it is financially impossible for a one exchange city. This automatic exchange was forced on the company, as in every large city exchange operators were becoming scarce.

"Professor Bell has given the world a wonderful invention and in conclusion I am sure that it has had a great effect on our pleasure and joy in life and you will agree with me that there was never a more notable immigrant come to Canada."

BAND WEEK END.

Special Services To Be Given Under Auspices of S. A. Band.

A special series of services, under the direction of the local Salvation Army Band, have been arranged for this week-end.

Brigadier Pinchen of Montreal, has been secured as the special preacher for these services. The first of the series will take place on Saturday night at 8 p.m., in the Salfation Army Temple, and each of the five special gatherings will be held in this building.

The last of the series will be a special Band Concert. This event is being eagerly looked forward to, especially in view of the fact that the Salvation Army Band is in splendid condition at the present time. The programme arranged for this occasion is a varied one, and possibly the most interesting items will be the selections by the Saxaphone Band. It is not generally known that the Peterborough Band contains within itself a saxophone band of fifteen pieces. Brigadier Pinchen will also preside at this festival.

Canadian Skating Champion Breaks World's Record

PROTESTS DISQUALIFICATION AT AMATEUR SKATING TOURNEY

Gorman Was Outstanding Star of Yesterday's Performance.

IS FAVORITE

Logan, Youthful Contender, Furnishes Surprise of Programme.

SARANAC LAKE, N.Y., Feb. 11 (Canadian Press).—In the second day's events of the international amateur outdoor speed skating championships on Pontiac rink yesterday, Charles Gorman, of St. John, N.B., Canadian champion, divided honors with O'Neil Farrell, of Chicago; Valentine Bialis, of Lake Placid, defending champion; and William Logan, of St. John, each scored thirty points. In the total point standing Gorman and Farrell are tied with eighty markers each.

Gorman furnished the biggest thrill of the day when he broke the world's record in the semi-final of the one-sixth mile. The Canadian champion skated the distance in :24 4-5.

He won the final heat impressively.

Bialis took first honors in the hard three mile grind, the other senior event by outlasting the crest of the pack and by saving just enough to win at the tape. The race was hotly contested through the last laps. Irving Olsen, of Chicago, won the lap prize.

Gorman, who finished third in the event, was disqualified for fouling. He made a vigorous protest to the officials without avail.

"Willis" Logan, youthful Canadian, provided the day's upset by taking a second and third place.

The officials announced that the remaining events of the unfinished tional championships, started at Detroit, will be completed here Monday. The distances will be four and five miles.

Gorman was the outstanding star in yesterday's performance. The St. John man was the great favorite, and he received much sympathy because of his disqualification in the three miles. The ten points he lost in this race because of the official ruling would have broken his tie on points with Farrell.

Logan's skating astonished the dopesters, who did not look upon the youthful Canadian as a serious contender. His defeat of Farrell and Bialis in the sixth-mile was the most complete surprise of the programme. In the three miles it was Gorman's disqualification which allowed Logan to show. In both races the youngster skated like a veteran.

Last night Gorman was the favorite to win the international title.

The skaters have left for Lake Placid, where concluding events will be staged today and Saturday.

Could Have Filled Stadium Tex Says Of Delaney Bout

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Every seat in Madison Square Garden for the Delaney-Maloney bout, has been applied for and as many more applications have been turned down, according to Promoter Tex Rickard, who says the demand has exceeded that of any indoor bout in the past.

"My only regret is that I did not hold the bout off for the outdoor season, for I could have sold out the Yankee Stadium for this battle," said Rickard yesterday.

Rickard already has begun the task of refunding checks and money orders with rejected applications.

ST. PATS LOSE EARLY MARGIN

Outscore Rangers in First Period, But Are Finally Defeated.

TORONTO, Feb. 11. — Once again St. Patrick's failed to hold a first period lead and as a result they were defeated by the New York Rangers, 3 to 2, in the final appearance of the American group leaders here this season, after the Irish had outscored the visitors 2 to 0 in the initial twenty minutes. The reverse was a bitter pill for the local players and supporters to swallow but they can make the most out of the sugar coating that the Rangers are easily the best team in their group, and on the play deserved to win. There are two main reasons for the locals' defeat: the absence of Bill Carson at centre ice, and the lack of reserve strength. Carson was sent into the fray for a couple of minutes in the opening stanza but was not allowed on the ice again. Patterson the recruit from Hamilton, also showed his wares for a few minutes in the initial chapter but he also was kept on the bench for the remainder of the game. In Carson's case it was good policy but there is some doubt of the wisdom of the move regarding Patterson.

The Rangers are well equipped in the matter of man power, and in their first couple of substitutions sent in five men to replace those doing duty, but Stan Brown who started on the defence with Taffy Abel, tore the ligaments in his shoulder early in the game, and Bourgeault gave Abel and Ching Johnson strength of the Rangers that decided the victory. They always had fresh men on the ice, while the Irish original starting line, Day, Bailey and Keeling worked themselves almost into exhaustion, while Brydge and McCaffrey went out a rest until the closing minutes.

Ruth Asks Increase For Baseball Services

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press).—Rather than accept $52,000 for playing baseball in 1927, "Babe" Ruth announced yesterday he will enter the business world by opening a string of gymnasiums and starting a correspondence course on how to keep fit physically and how to play baseball.

George Herman Ruth is asking Colonel Jacob Ruppert of the New York Yankees for a salary increase.

TOWN LEAGUE CAMPBELLFORD

Hydro Defeats Menie in Fastest Game of Season.

OVERTIME

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 11. — The Hydro added to their list of victories in the Town Hockey League, defeating Menie, 5 to 1, at Covert's Arena, Wednesday night. Menie played an improved game over their last appearance and held the Hydro on practically even terms for the first two periods. They had as much of the play but just lacked the finish when in close, and Saunders performed brilliantly in the Hydro net.

It was one of the best games of the season; the team cutting out a fast pace from the start and maintaining it till well on the last period, when Menie showed signs of weakening, and the Hydro ran in three goals.

Ken Shillinglaw and Rannie played great hockey for Menie and worked hard to keep the country boys in the running, but against the fine goal-tending of Saunders and fast work by Johnston and Cowell their efforts were fruitless.

There was more heavy checking than in any previous game, the players making free use of the body at every opportunity. The first period score was 1 to 0, Watt scoring for the Hydro.

Brunnelle made it 2 to 0 for the Hydro in the second period.

Johnston bagged two for the Hydro in the third period, and Cowell one, while Rannie scored the only Menie marker in this period.

It took the Elks ten minutes overtime to beat the Tigers, 1 to 0, in the Midget game. Lambert scoring the only goal of the game. The win puts the Elks and Tigers on even terms in the league race.

The line-ups were as follow:

Hydro.—Goal, Saunders; defence, Beatty and Nesbitt; centre, Cowell; wings, Johnston and Watt; sub., Brunelle.

Menie.—Goal, Ted Owens; defence, Shillinglaw and Hay; centre, Rannie; wings, Lynn and Kerr; subs, Coulter, W. Owens, Daniels.

Referee—Chas. Holmes.

Elks.—Goal, Heptonsall; defence, Garrison and Lambert; centre, Hendy; wings, Grills and Dooher.

Tigers.—Goal, Reynolds; defence, Cubbitt and Linton; centre, Blute; wings, Stocker and Wilks.

Referee—T. Stewart.

BASKETBALL GOSSIP.

There will be a practice for the junior basketball team at the Y.M.C.A. to-night, commencing at 8 o'clock sharp. The following are asked to be present:

R. Sturgeon, A. Grayston, K. Goheen, H. Dormer, F. Taylor, C. McLeish, N. Hamilton, K. Copping, C. Ruth, J. Mitchell, K. Hardill, W. Ecobichon.

ST. PATS FACE DAMAGE SUIT

Saskatoon Hockey Club Files Writ at Osgoode Hall.

BREACH OF CONTRACT

TORONTO, Feb. 11. — The Saskatoon Hockey Club, Ltd, has filed a writ at Osgoode Hall asking for an injunction to restrain Corbett C. Dennenay from rendering services as a hockey player to St. Patrick's Professional Hockey Club, Ltd. St. Pats Club and Dennenay are made defendants to the action. Plaintiff's claim to bar Dennenay rendering services as a hockey player to anyone in breach of the contract for employment made between the plaintiff and Dennenay, dated 19th March, 1926.

Damages Claimed.

Plaintiffs also claim damages from St. Patrick's Club for interfering with the contractual relations existing between the plaintiff and Dennenay, and for enticing him from the employ of the plaintiff, and depriving plaintiff of the services of the defendant.

GAME ASSOCIATION SEEKS AMENDMENTS

C. G. Graham is Elected a Director of the Ontario Protective Body.

TORONTO, Feb. 11.—Several amendments to the Ontario game laws, each being aimed at further preservation of fish and game, were asked by members of the Ontario Hunters' Game and Fish Protective Association, who gathered for their annual meeting in the King Edward Hotel.

To Conserve Fish.

After thorough discussion, the hunters formulated resolutions asking the absolute prohibition of the sale of deer and moose, and prevention of fishing in most of the lakes of the Province until July 1 each year, this being thought the most effective means of conserving the stocks of pickerel, bass and lunge.

Limitation to 15 ducks per day of duck hunters, and only 120 for the season, instead of 200 as at present; restrainment of duck hunters from having more than one gun each in any boat or blind, and a closed season on bear and fox, the dates being adjusted in accordance with the conditions of each district, were also asked in resolutions.

Officers Re-elected.

The 1926 officers were re-elected for 1927, and are again as follows: Honorary President, G. G. Green, Bradford; President, W. J. Moody, Kitchener; First Vice-President, H. W. Hunsberry, Jordan Station; Second Vice-President, Dr. N. A. Powell, Toronto. Executive Committee—F. W. Watson, Hamilton; William Pears, Toronto; Christopher Graham, Peterborough; Albert Hergott, Waterloo; E. Devitt, Novar; J. S. McDowell, Midland; Aubrey Davis, Newmarket; C. M. Mundy, Oshawa; Dr. R. N. Walters, Toronto; W. R. Griner, Aldershot; W. F. McMahon, Port Hope; Frank Smith, Orillia; E. Robertson, Toronto; William Filman, Aldershot; R. M. Effrick, Niagara Falls. Secretary-Treasurer, J. C. Richardson, Toronto.

The 13th National Recreation Congress will be held at Atlantic City the week of October 18 under the auspices of the Playground and Recreation Association of America.

LESS THAN SEVEN MINUTES DIVIDES LEADERS IN DOG DERBY

Favorites Came to Fore in First Leg of Race.

NO PENALTIES

Drivers Stand Grind Despite Unreasonably Warm Weather.

ASHLAND, N.H., Feb. 11 (Canadian Press).—The favorites came to the fore with a rush yesterday on the first leg of the New England sled dog club's second annual point-to-point race through the hills of Central New Hampshire.

Less than seven minutes separated the three leaders when clapsed times had been figured last night for the 36¾ miles uphill grind from Wolfeboro, starting and finishing point of the 133½-mile race.

Francois Dupuis, picturesque veteran of the racing trail and winner of last year's international derby at Quebec, was a scant four minutes ahead of Leonhard Seppala, hero of the serum run to Nome two years ago, when the dogs pulled in last night. Dupuis, running a good half of the distance, crooning and chuckling to his seven big mongrels, brought a laugh to more than one town with his famous hand-stand method of driving on the back of his sled. He mushed into town here in three hours 12 minutes 46 seconds.

Seppala, whose racing ability has brought victory in three Alaska sweepstakes, finished second in three hours 16 minutes 45 seconds.

In third place, only three minutes behind Seppala, was Emil St. Goddard, 19-year-old youth from The Pas, Manitoba, where a month ago he won his third derby against the pick of the Canadian north-west drivers. His time was three hours 19 minutes 30 seconds.

Arthur T. Walden, of Wonolancet, N.H., another racing veteran and "father of sled dog racing in New England," was in fourth place with a time of 3:34:30.

The rest of the field finished in the following order:

Hiram Mason, Tamworth, N.H., 3:43:20.

Walter Channing, Boston, 3:49:45.

Joseph Dupuis, driving for Price brothers of Quebec, 3:53:20.

Victor Lavigne, driving for Price brothers, 3:53:30.

Phillip Molloy, Berlin, N.H., 3:59:05.

Theodore Kingmak, driving Seppala's second team, 4:08:55.

Despite unseasonably warm weather, dogs and drivers stood the grind well. Not a penalty was chalked up for poor condition, and every dog was in harness at the end of the run. Several drivers, however, may be forced to take out an animal or two to-day, as defects may show up between the finish last night and the start on to-day's leg. With the exception of Molloy, who started with six huskies, all the men are driving seven-dog teams.

HOCKEY RESULTS.

Hockey games played last night resulted as follows:

National Hockey League.

N.Y. Rangers 3, Toronto 2.

Montreal 1, Pittsburgh 0.

Intermediate O.H.A.

Newmarket 3, Bracebridge 2. Newmarket wins round, 6 to 3.

Reds And Robins Both Say They Have Signed Meusel

NEW YORK, Feb. 11.—Two National League clubs, the Reds and Robins, announced Wednesday that they had signed Irish Meusel, outfielder, who was unconditionally released by the Giants at the end of last season. Jack Hendricks of the Reds said he had signed Irish, but at the same time Uncle Wilbert Robinson made it known that Meusel had sent him a telegram on Tuesday accepting the Brooklyn club's terms. Wednesday came word that Irish was forwarding the Robins a signed contract.

Curlers Return Home

MILLBROOK, Feb. 11.—The two rinks of local curlers who were in Toronto this week competing in the district cup winners' group of games, returned home on Thursday.

They missed the Governor-General's Trophy by only two shots, and were down only four shots from being in the finals for the Mail and Empire trophy.

The Collins-Ball-Sayles-Edmunds rink never had a defeat, winning out from Toronto, Bala, Guelph, and Agincourt by a total of 65 shots; the competition, however, is on a double rink basis, and this eliminated them from being in the final games.

The rink skipped by R. H. Edmunds has had six straight wins to its credit in the district cup series, twice in Peterborough when the cup was won, and four times in Toronto in the series of games just concluded.

SWIMMER ACQUITTED

Faces Charge of Theft of Violin in Boston Court.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 11.—(Canadian Press).—Eva Morrison, well known swimmer, who came here from Nova Scotia a few years ago, was acquitted in the municipal court yesterday on a charge of larceny of a violin from Peter Baltzerson, a Boston dealer. Baltzerson testified that in July, 1924, she obtained a violin valued at $223 on trial and never paid for it. Miss Morrison told the court that Baltzerson had informed her that the violin was a gift to her from a Providence collector of violins named Coggeshall, whom he had introduced to her.

Babe Ruth's total of 47 home runs during the season just closed brings his all-time total to 356. His record performance for one season, that of 59 home runs, still stands, however. During the last two weeks of the season the Boston Braves won two out of three with Pittsburgh, three out of four games with the champion St. Louis Cardinals, three straight from Cincinnati and Chicago. Truly a remarkable showing for a tail-end outfit.

MOST IMPORTANT GAME OF YEAR HERE TO-NIGHT

Win For Petes Over Marlboros Will Cinch Second Place.

VOSS TO PLAY.

Queen's Rugby Star To Wear Duke's Uniform To-night.

The final local O. H. A. game of the season in the group, will be played at Brock street rink to-night when Marlboros and Peterboro meet in the most important game of the season. A win for the local boys will cinch second place, and the right to play Varsity "Grads" for the group championship.

The Marlboros will bring up a strong line-up and a number of supporters to cheer them on to victory. Coach Frank Selke, of the Toronto team, is confident of winning to-night's contest. In their last appearance Peterboro won 5-4, and the winning goal was a disputed one, Marlboros claiming that it was not in the net, and they will be here to revenge that defeat.

Voss to Play.

Carl Voss, the Queens' Rugby star, and last year's Kingston O.H.A. junior defence man will be in the Dukes line-up. It was Voss's work on the defence that helped to defeat the local boys in Toronto earlier in the season when Marlboros won 1-0; Voss was with the Marlboro Juniors and was moved up to the Seniors. His game against North Toronto was sensational on Monday night. This is his first appearance on this ice, and a large crowd of fans will be out to see this star in action.

This will be the last appearance of several of the Marlboros, as it is stated that a number of the lads will turn Pro. at the end of the season.

Judging by the advance sale of tickets, one of the largest crowds of the season is expected out to witness the game, which looks like the tidbit fixture of the year.

The Petes will be at full strength, and there is every confidence in the local boys.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

If Your's is a Renting Problem—Try This

"My want-ad in last Saturday's Examiner pulled just a little too fast," reports a south-end resident. She was unprepared for the results she got. She rented her apartment to the first people who offered her $40. Among the other 27 who answered the ad were some who offered as much as $50 for the place.

But at that the advertiser is well pleased.

DRY OFFICIALS OUTWIT RUNNERS

Seize Large Quantity of Liquor in Five Boats at Detroit.

CATCH ONE MAN.

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 11.—Five fast rum-runner craft and $20,000 worth of beer and whisky were seized and one man was arrested early yesterday when Federal prohibition agents frustrated a highly organized bootlegging attempt near River Rouge. The agents outwitted the rum-runners by a successful ruse, but the late arrival of agents who were to have arrested the operators when they made their landing resulted in the escape of all but one of the boatmen. The drivers of approximately 30 automobiles which were waiting at the river bank to carry the liquor away drove off without interference.

The man arrested, Joseph Trudeau, was in charge of the last boat to land. The others abandoned their craft when they saw the Federal car. Trudeau is to be arraigned to-day on a charge of violating tariff laws.

For a month prohibition patrol agents, apprised of activities of the rum-runners by officials of the Ford Motor Company, have been watching the Ford Turn Basin. Before attempting to send a cargo, 12 automobiles patrolled an area of about 14 square miles to be certain no officers were near. A trick impelled the bootleggers to make the attempt. James N. Nevins and George E. Marcia, who were aboard the patrol tug, stopped the engines and began to move about as if they were making repairs. While the tug lay still on the water, another prohibition boat lying inshore, moved out and took it in tow. When the two craft had moved off a distance considered safe by the watchers on the American shore, the five motor boats left the Canadian side. An agent stationed at Zug Island signalled the tug, and when the boats were well on their way the tug swung about and cut off their retreat. In the meantime the flyer crew was notified, but the agents arrived too late to arrest any but Trudeau.

COOLIDGE ASKS NEW NAVY CUT BY POWERS

LEAGUE OF NATIONS' POSITIONS IS STRENGTHENED BY COOLIDGE PROPOSAL IS BELIEF EXPRESSED

Agrees To Accept Ratio as Far as Cruisers Are Concerned.

FAVORABLE COMMENT.

French Cabinet Will Discuss Matter at Meeting To-day.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press).—President Coolidge has every expectation of a favorable consideration by the Washington naval treaty powers of his suggestion for a further extension of that treaty through a conference to be held at Geneva.

The expectation is based, it was said yesterday at the White House, upon the reasonableness of the American proposal and the fact that it proposes only to apply further a formula for naval limitation already worked out and accepted by the Washington treaty powers.

It was emphasized that President Coolidge does not know specifically what reply will be made by Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan. He feels, however, that inasmuch as difficulty has been uncovered during the Geneva preparatory disarmament conference as to which branch of armament should first be taken up in an effort to formulate a comprehensive plan for reduction of air, land or sea forces, the American suggestion to proceed with naval limitation under the Washington treaty formula affords an escape.

If that process should be followed and the delegations of the Washington treaty signatories meeting at Geneva are successful in extending naval ratio agreements to cruisers, destroyers and submarines, President Coolidge feels that the disposition of this aspect of the armament problem would make it easier to deal with the other elements, particularly if naval armaments were considered as having a direct relation to the land and air armament questions.

Pending word from some official quarter as to how the four other Washington treaty powers may react to the American suggestion, made public Thursday, officials here declined to comment upon the first reports of editorial reception of the plan in London, Paris, Rome or Tokio. There seems little doubt, however, that official attention is focused particularly upon Paris, as the point from which a final answer must come if the treaty is to be extended as President Coolidge has suggested.

Unless the French Government is willing now to undertake the more limit negotiations President Coolidge has suggested, modifying the position its delegates maintained at Geneva to that extent, admittedly no supplemental five power conference to fix tonnage limits for auxiliary naval craft would be possible.

BUDGET NEXT IN LEGISLATURE

Expected Now That Government Control Bill Will End Sitting.

CABINET MEETS.

TORONTO, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press) — Departmental estimates and preparation of the budget were under discussion by the Ontario cabinet in council this morning. No attention was given to the bill for government control of the sale of liquor, according to Premier Howard Ferguson, and it now becomes apparent that the government intends to postpone introduction of the legislation until after the conclusion of the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne and consideration is given the budget by the House.

It is said that the debate on the address will wind up before the end of next week and then the budget will be brought down.

Premier Ferguson to-day refused to "make a guess" as to when the liquor bill would be introduced but the action of the cabinet in "clearing the decks" of minor legislation and hastening the budget indicates that the measure will wind up the session of the legislature.

It is estimated that 100 banks are built to one church every year.

The highest airdrome in the world is being completed at Vent, near Innsbruck, Austria, at an altitude of 623 feet, as a landing place for planes among the peaks of the Alps.

Giving Women Voter's Ages Not Men's, Angers Women

HOLDEN, Mass., Feb. 12 (AP) — Women voters of this town are going about with fire in their eyes. They have just discovered that in the printed list of voters posted on the bulletin board in the Town Hall the age of every woman voter is given. The ages of men voters are omitted.

The District Tax Supervisor ordered the list printed with the ages of both men and women. Who was responsible for the discrimination is what the women would like to know.

MARX COALITION GOVERNMENT WITHSTANDS TWO ASSAULTS

Opponents Insist Victories Were Indecisive Since They Lacked Numbers.

NON CONFIDENCE.

One Party May Split on Labor Legislation.

BERLIN, Feb. 12 (Canadian Government). — Chancellor Marx' coalition government withstood two more assaults in the Reichstag yesterday, when two motions of non-confidence in the National Minister of the Interior, Walter Von Keudell, were defeated by comfortable margins.

A non-confidence motion, introduced by the Democrats, was defeated by a vote of 217 to 161, and another by the Communists and Socialists was rejected by 218 to 163. Critics of Von Keudell charged that he was connected with the Kapp Putsch of 1920.

Opponents of the government, however, insist that yesterday's victories were indecisive because there were more than a hundred absentees, mostly from the opposition parties of the left. They say the showdown has been postponed until the Cabinet has shown what it proposes to do in the way of Labor and educational legislation, which is being urgently demanded from all sides.

Ex-Chancellor Wirth, who represents the Labor faction in the Centrist party, again bolted his party yesterday, and voted against Von Keudell. This is taken to mean that the 'Centrists, of whom Chancellor Marx is the leader, may split on Labor legislation.

ORANGE SPEAKER WILL VISIT CITY

Rev. Capt. W. C. Riddiford To Lecture in Victoria Hall.

Captain W. C. Riddiford, former pastor of Park Street Baptist Church, and lately a lecturer for the Orange Order, is coming to this city on Thursday next, under the auspices of the Orange Order, to deliver his lecture: "The Orange Order, Its Birth, Its Beliefs, and Its Battles." The lecture will commence at 8.00 in Victoria Hall. Captain Riddiford, after leaving this city, went overseas, and served during the Great War. Since returning, he has carried on Orange work in Western Ontario. He is a strong, forcible speaker and many of his old friends will be glad to welcome him back to the city. On the Sunday following, he will occupy the pulpit of Park Street Baptist Church.

A load of two tons can be carried by a full grown elephant.

Pardon Granted Aviator On Flight Anniversary

MADRID, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press). — Commander France, who was found guilty of having sent an improper message to the Spanish Ambassador to Argentina, and who later was notified he would not have to serve the sentence of military imprisonment, was pardoned because the day he was to begin the sentence was the anniversary of the completion of his trans-Atlantic flight from Palos, Spain, to Buenos Aires. He landed in the Argentine capital in the "Plus Ultra" February 10, 1926, 19 days after leaving Palos.

PLOT TO PLACE DUKE ON THRONE

Hungary Alarmed By Reports of Attempt To Crown Albrecht.

RIVAL OF OTTO.

BUDAPEST, Feb. 12 (United Press).—Hungary today was in a state of consternation following publication by the newspaper Estikurier of the details of a new Monarchist plot, promoted as a rival to the claims of the ex-Empress Zita for her young son, Otto.

The newspaper charges that agencies are at work to establish the Archduke Albrecht on the Hungarian throne. The newspaper adds that in preparation for his son's assumption of the Kingship, the Archduke Fredrich, father of Albrecht, has ordered several hundred court costumes and livery for at least every retainer.

Ritualistic Dancing Starts Again Sunday

NEW YORK, N.Y., Feb. 12. —(United Press.)— Ritualistic dancing will be resumed tomorrow in St. Mark's, in the Bowery, the church of which the Rev. William Norman Guthrie is rector. It was stopped two years after Bishop William T. Manning had denounced church dancing.

"The girls we had then were getting too self conscious because of all the publicity," said Rev. Guthrie. "We had to train a new group."

Soup is stated by some doctors to be the best appetizer before a meal, with tea and coffee as a second and third choice.

Froth-Blowers' Anthem Adopted As Marching Song; New Ditty Threatens To Rival Popularity Of Tipperary

LONDON, Feb. 12 (United Press)—The British defense forces in China already have chosen their campaign song, known as the Froth-blowers' Anthem. Here is the chorus:

"The more we are together, together, together,
The more we are together, the merrier we'll be,
For your friends are my friends,
And my friends are your friends,
And the more we are together the merrier we'll be."

The song is as contagious as "Tipperary" and promises to become as popular as the world war marching song was in 1914.

It has all the swing of a drinking song. Troops leaving for service in China now invariably depart singing the Froth-blowers' Anthem.

CHANG EXPLAINS NEW ATTITUDE TOWARD BRITAIN

Concessions Proposed Not What Northerners Expected, He Says.

LACK SINCERITY.

Cantonese Decide Not To Reply To Shanghai Neutrality Suggestions.

LONDON, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press).—Marshal Chang Tso Lin, War Lord of the Chinese Northern armies, replying to an inquiry sent to him by the Daily Express as to the reason for his reported change of attitude toward the British proposals communicated by Miles Lampson, British Minister, says as a whole the suggestions are indefinite and in some respects indicate lack of sincerity. The concessions proposed, he contends, are not exactly what the Northern Government expected.

Americans Safe.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press).—Americans in Shanghai are believed to be in no great danger, in view of the latest Chinese civil war developments, but United States naval vessels and marines will be maintained off that port, it is officially announced here, until all possible danger is past.

Cantonese Won't Reply.

HANKOW, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press).—It was understood here today that the Nationalist Government would not reply to the proposals of the United States for exemption of Shanghai from the battle area on the eastern battlefront. The position was said to have been taken by the Cantonese on the ground that the American proposal had been improperly addressed.

Christians Hopeful.

SHANGHAI, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press).—The Executive Committee of the National Christian Council, an organization representing nearly all the Protestant missionary organizations in China and the great majority of Protestant churches, is "hopeful" for the future of Christianity in China, in spite of the present anti-foreign situation.

Concluding the convention here to-day, the Executive Committee issued a statement declaring that in reviewing in their wider significance the effects of recent events and their present tendencies on the Chinese Christian movement, the Council regards the situation hopefully.

SLIGHT QUAKE AT CALEXICO

Damage Done on New Year's Day is Accentuated To-day.

CORNICES SHAKEN.

CALEXICA, Calif., Feb. 12. — (Canadian Press).—This Imperial Valley city, victim of last New Year's Day of a series of damaging earthquakes, suffered further, although nominal, damage, from a trembler lasting about thirty seconds to-day. The 'quake was of sufficient force to shake down the cornices of buildings damaged by January 1 disturbances. Many small towns in Imperial Valley felt shocks.

Paralyzed Man Puzzles St. Thomas Jail Officials

ST. THOMAS, Feb. 11—Convicted by Magistrate Maxwell in county Police Court of two infractions of the Ontario Temperance Act, one of selling liquor, and the other of having liquor in a place where liquor could not legally be kept, Lawrence Crawford, 30-year-old paralytic, of Port Burwell, was permitted to return to his home for a week in order that the court officials may decide just what punishment shall be imposed on him. His counsel, Hugh C. Cameron, vouched for his reappearance next Thursday.

Crawford's case has given the Court a problem. He has served two sentences on liquor charges. On the first occasion a special turnkey had to be retained to act as valet to Crawford, while the second time one of the prisoners was made his attendant by special permission of the Attorney-General. Crawford cannot even feed himself. In fact, he is almost as helpless as a baby.

STUDENTS FIGHT WITH POLICEMEN AT CAMBRIDGE

Two Officers and Five Students Injured in Battle.

42 UNDER ARREST.

Harvard Students Roused By Rumour of Student's Arrest.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 12 (Canadian Press). — Five hundred Harvard students and others battled thirty policemen in Harvard Square today, and when the field of action had cleared two policemen had been seriously hurt, at least five students had been treated for varying injuries, and forty-two more had been arrested on charges of disturbing the peace.

Accounts of the origin of the trouble differed, but witnesses said a free-for-all was started when several hundred students poured into the street after attending a midnight vaudeville performance at the University Theatre. A lone policeman on duty sent in a riot call and as wagonloads of officers arrived, the students and others were augmented by crowds which surged from dormitories in the Harvard Yard.

Police used their sticks freely, with the result that the crowd was gradually pushed back into the yard where their forces were dissuaded from entering by college police. In the meantime, however, a shower of varied missiles rained down from dormintory windows on the heads of the besieging force. Patrolman Joseph O'Connor was badly kicked and taken to the Cambridge City Hospital in a serious condition. At least five students were treated at the same institution and placed under arrest.

All accounts agreed that there had been considerable good natured raillery at the performance and that actors had been greeted by vegetables as well as verbal bouquets. The managements denied, however, that it had any complaint to make. One version said the primary cause of the disturbance was a rumor that the police were attempting to arrest a student for disorderly conduct.

BIBLE SOCIETY SPEAKERS HERE

Will Preach in Many Peterborough Churches To-morrow.

ANNUAL FIELD DAY.

The Upper Canada Bible Society, which is an auxiliary of the Canadian Bible Society, which is in turn an auxiliary to the British and Foreign Bible Society, is holding the annual field day in Peterborough churches on Sunday, when representatives from headquarters will preach in most of the local churches.

The Bible Society presents the ideal conception of Church Union as no less than 40 different missionary societies co-operate in distributing and using the Bibles translated and published by the Bible Society. A new language is used by the society on an average of every six weeks, and by the close of the year 1926 the Scriptures were available in 560 different languages, of which 110 are used in Canada.

In aiding the various missionary societies it supplies the Scriptures to the Anglican Church in 185 versions; to the Presbyterian churches it supplies 153 versions; to the Methodist churches, 107 versions, and to the Baptist church 65 versions. In ministering to the blind, 40 different languages are used in raised type, and all together there goes out from the Bible House over 10 million volumes a year.

Wherever people can buy a copy of the Scriptures at cost it is the policy of the Society to sell the Bible, but in many cases at home and in many lands abroad, the cost is far beyond the means of the people, and in that copies are either given free of charge or a charge is put on the books which is within the means of the people to pay.

The Peterborough branch raises a large sum of money each year, which helps to provide these underprivileged nations with the Word of God in their own language. Special collections will be asked for in the churches and the response should be not less generous than in former years.

Hears Music By Ear 'Phones As Surgeons Operate On Him

NEW YORK, Feb. 12—Louis Mang, 76 years old, is recovering in Grenville Hospital, Jersey City, from a major abdominal operation performed Wednesday under a local anesthetic. During the operation he listened to an orchestra over the radio through ear phones. A program broadcast from Jersey City pleased him immensely and he ridiculed suggestions by several present that he might be annoyed.

"Let it play, I like it," he said. The surgeons worked for eighteen minutes. Hospital officials said that the aged man did not once complain.

Mr. Mang, who lives at 200 Danforth Ave., Jersey City, had undergone an operation a short time before and surgeons thought it inadvisable to use a general anesthetic.

Last night Mr. Mang was reported resting comfortably.

HOMUTH ADVOCATES REDUCTION IN EXCISE TAX ON ALL LIQUORS

Declares It To Be Only Way of Getting Rid of Bootlegger.

PREMIER SPEAKS.

States Object Is To Ensure Success of Government Control.

TORONTO, Feb. 12. — K. K. Homuth (Waterloo South) seconded by W. G. Weichel (Waterloo North) yesterday moved his resolution as follows:

"That in the opinion of this House a very substantial reduction should be made in the excise tax and duty on all malt and spirituous liquors by the Dominion Government, in order that there may be a substantial cut in the retail price, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to the Dominion Government and to the Government of each province that has inaugurated the Government sale of spirituous and malt liquors, namely, British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Quebec."

Chase Bootleggers

"We are not going to get rid of bootleggers if we don't get rid of this profit," stated Mr. Homuth. "There is only way to get rid of him—cut down the price of liquors imported to Ontario, and he will go out of business. Illegal sale will be wiped out if we get a substantial reduction on this tax."

"At the present time liquor is being made in back alleys out of filthy ingredients and in places unfit for human habitation," stated Mr. Homuth. "I think that the Minister of Customs will have no hesitation in remedying this evil by wiping out, or reducing the tax."

Mr. Homuth stated that his sole object in moving the resolution was to foster the success of Government control. He called on all members of the House to support the resolution unanimously.

"Even those who are opposed to Government control should vote for it to make Government control a success," he concluded.

W. G. Wiechel, seconding the resolution, stated that the reduction in the tax would go farther than anything to stop bootleggng.

"The rich man could always get good liquor. It was the poor man who suffered through the cheap noxious poison of the bootlegger," he stated. He was sure that Alberta and Ontario would reduce liquor prices on a scale that would eliminate the bootlegger if the tax was taken off.

"We will not be able to cut out bootlegging if the tax is not taken off," he concluded.

Premier Ferguson stated that the resolution went to the bottom of the whole situation.

Figures Talk

Supporting the resolution, Premier Ferguson pointed out that the excise revenue for all Canada last year was $38,000,000. Of this amount $8,000,000 was taxation on liquor, of

There was the largest farmers' market this morning so far this year. An abundance of meat, eggs, butter and wood was for sale.

On the square pork was selling at from 18c to 21c per pound, according to the age. Beef, which did not appear to be in demand, was selling at 11c and 13c. Wood sold at from 9.50 to $12.00 per cord. Mixed dry, 18 inches, was $9.50 and four foot good body green hardwood sold at $12. No hay was on the market; $1.75 and $2 was asked for potatoes. The market opened with butter and eggs selling at 48c, but as more came on the price dropped to 45c. Fowl was scarce, and there was a wide range in the prices asked.

MINISTER OF IMMIGRATION INTRODUCES RESOLUTION ON SOLDIERS' SETTLEMENT LANDS

Asked For His Interpretations Of One Clause Quoted.

REPEATS QUESTION.

Bill Will Be Introduced at a Later Date.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 12. — A resolution preliminary to a bill authorizing the revaluation of soldiers' settlements lands, was introduced in the House yesterday by the Hon. Robert Forke Minister of Immigration.

One of the provisions mentioned in the resolution sets out that the depreciation to be determined "shall be the diminution in the present value of the land and the improvements sold to the settler, as compared with the price of which the settler agreed to purchase the said lands and improvements from the land."

Mr. Forke was immediately questioned by J. A. Clark (Conservative-Vancouver-Burrard) who asked the Minister what was his interpretation of the clause above quoted.

"It means what it states," replied Mr. Forke.

A bill would be introduced at a later date and full information would be available for the members.

General Clark again asked for the Minister's interpretation of the clause. "This is one of the most extraordinary exhibitions I have seen given by a Minister in this House," said General Clark, complaining that the Minister should give the House an interpretation of the clause.

"I do not think it is difficult to understand," replied Mr. Forke, who proceeded to read piecemeal, the clause in question.

The resolution was still under consideration when the House rose for the dinner recess.

At the evening session Hon. H. H. Stevens (Conservative - Vancouver Centre) pointed out that last year the whole House had engaged in redrafting this particular bill. It had been one of the worst constructed pieces of legislation the Government had attempted to introduce and as the resolution preceding the bill now stood on the order paper. It had no sense at all. It would have to be changed to have any value.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, Minister of Justice said that Mr. Stevens would be wasting his time endeavoring to change the wording of the resolution. He should wait until the bill itself was before the House.

Manchester Worries Gets Less Sunshine

MANCHESTER, Feb. 12.—(Canadian Press).—Manchester is getting worried about its continually decreasing portion of sunshine. Last year's total of 826 hours fell 200 hours short of the past 20 years' average, says W. Jenkins of the Godlee observatory here. "It always rains in Manchester,' is a common saying, but observations tend to show, on the other hand, that this busy English industrial centre is becoming a drier, if gloomier, city.

Twice-Declared Dead, Bristol Woman Finally Succumbs; Relatives Refuse To Bury Her Until Arteries Are Cut

BRISTOL, England, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press)—After thirty one operations and having been twice declared dead, Mrs. Shrive, wife of a local tradesman, has finally been buried. She was 55 years old.

Thirty years ago she was pronounced dead and carried to a mortuary. On the way the bearers stumbled and she was seen to be alive. Two years later she was again pronounced dead, but regained consciousness to interrupt her relatives' mourning.

Finally she succumbed to a malignant cancer from which she had been suffering for years but before her relatives would permit burial they insisted on having two of her arteries cut.

DOES PROTECTION OF COURT GIVE IMMUNITY FROM PERJURY?

Judge Roland Miller Has a Problem To Solve in Hill Case.

STOLEN GOODS.

Claim Protected Witness Perjured Himself While in Box.

HULL, Que., Feb. 12 (Canadian Press).—Whether the protection of a criminal court extended to a witness renders him immune from a charge of perjury growing out of his evidence is a point which Judge Roland Miller has to solve in connection with a case in Hull court.

Eugene Leblanc was arrested with Eugene Lavergne, another Hull man, on a charge of receiving stolen goods. The charge against Leblanc was withdrawn by the Crown when he testified against Lavergne, who was subsequently committed for trial. Leblanc's testimony was given under the court's promise of protection. Now, however, Lavergne charges Leblanc with perjuring himself in the witness box.

When the case came before Judge Miller yesterday counsel for Leblanc claimed the court's intervention between his client and the charge, on the grounds that Leblanc was under protection. Judge Miller and others expressed the opinion the court protection did not save a witness from the result of giving false testimony. The case was adjourned for a week to give defence counsel an opportunity to consult the authorities.

HOMUTH ADVOCATES

which Ontario contributed $4,500,000 and Quebec $2,500,000.

"It would seem that Ontario, on the basis of these figures, consumed more spirituous liquors than Quebec even under our restrictions of today," stated the Premier. "I do not think that the loss of revenue would be particularly great to the Dominion Government. I would not suggest that the tax be wiped out altogether, but that it be reduced. The high taxation puts a premium on illicit sale. It makes the cost so high that a man can afford to smuggle and manufacture liquor and still have plenty of salvage even if he is caught once in a while."

The Premier pointed out that the Interprovincial conference has urged the Dominion Government to reduce the tax and he felt that Ottawa was sympathetic and suggested that Mr. Homuth's motion be amended to make it apply to liquors that were imported or purchased by the Provincial Governments for distribution through their stores. Mr. Homuth accepted the amendment and it was incorporated with his original motion.

"I am sure that a reduction in the excise tax will reduce the illicit traffic and will be a great factor in bringing about improved conditions," concluded the Premier.

"We have at Ottawa a government quite capable of looking after its own affairs," stated Mr. Sinclair.

Rich and Poor Alike

Continuing, Mr. Sinclair stated he could not see how the reduction would eliminate bootlegging. The poor man who could not afford a bottle would get it by the glass just the same, he said.

Answering a question by Mr. Sinclair, Mr. Weichel stated that he expected there would still be a certain amount of bootlegging.

"It is astounding to hear a Government supporter say that," stated Mr. Sinclair. "The Premier stated during the campaign that Government control would eliminate it."

Premier Ferguson: "I never said that. But are you taking a position that you would help to reduce bootlegging?"

Mr. Sinclair: "You are anxious to know my position. I am not telling it. We waited or years to find out what was your position."

Mr. Ferguson: "May I ask if the reduction in taxation would reduce bootlegging?"

Opposition is Mum

Mr. Sinclair: "I am not gong to say."

Mr. Calder (West Kent): "Are you opposed to a reduction in the excise taxation?"

Mr. Sinclair endeavored to hedge a direct reply, but finally amid the laughter of the Conservative side of the House, he stated: "I do not see why I should be asked to express an opinion on Federal matters."

Mr. Calder: "I did not expect you would answer."

Mr. Calder stated that he had to leave the House to catch a train.

Mr. Sinclair: "You had time enough to interrupt, but not to listen to my remarks."

Mr. Calder stated that he would be pleased to listen to the Liberal leader on some future occasion, "when he would no doubt be as clear in his language and as polite as usual."

Is Whiskey a Drug?

Col. Price, Attorney-General, stated that at the present time the Federal Government received a revenue of $2,500,000 out of Ontario liquor sales while Ontario got less than $1,000,000.

"I think," he stated, "that something can be done here to eliminate much bootlegging. Let us get together on that behalf.

A. Belanger stated that he would support the resolution if it were worded as in support of the Interprovincial Conference resolution and not direct to the Dominion Government.

B. Miller (Elgin East), stated that he was opposed to anything that had anything to do with whiskey which he termed a drug. He would, he said, protect the young manhood of Ontario by putting the tax up to $40.000 a gallon.

The resolution was carried without division.

The House then adjourned.

MODERN TREND IS ADVANCING

Six Nations Council Decides Against Indian Name For Willingdon.

SOME OPPOSITION.

BRANTFORD, Feb. 12.—The modernization of the Six Nations of the Tuscarora Reserve here continues, even while the faction which believes not only in preserving all the old-time traditions, habits and customs, is continuing. And strange contrasts are being offered. Thursday, for example, a letter was received from Lord Willingdon congratulating the Indians on their modern trend; Thursday night the reactionaries, centering in the Six Nations Agricultural Society, refused Government recognition, held a banquet at Ohsweken, at which the speakers held out for a return to the old customs.

The letter from Lord Willingdon was in reply to one sent by the elected Council of Chiefs, which after extending a cordial welcome to the Dominion, invited Their Excellencies to visit the reserve, pointing out that His Majesty the King himself, Lord Lorne and Princess Louise, the Duke of Connaught, the Prince of Wales and Lord Lansdowne were among those who, in the past, had so honored them. The letter continued that the elective Council recently instituted by Order-in-Council under Lord Byng, his illustrious predecessor, brought with it progress and a desire to substitute modern habits and customs for the picturesque ceremonies of their fathers. For this reason the Council did not, as in the past, offer him an Indian name or call him brother, but their loyalty to the King, whose personal representative he was, and to the flag, under which they were proud to reside, would ensure none the less enthusiastic reception.

HILL APPEAL ALLOWED.

Conviction Before Magistrate Langley Set Aside By Judge.

His Honor Judge J. E. McGlade has given judgment in connection with the appeal brought by May Hill, of Dummer Township, who was convicted before His Worship County Police Magistrate Langley on a charge of unlawfully selling liquor at the Township of Dummer on the 17th day of October, 1926, contrary to The Ontario Temperance Act, when the accused was fined $300.00 and sentenced to one month in gaol.

His Honor Judge McGlade has now allowed the appeal and set aside the judgment reading as follows:

"Without casting any reflection whatever upon evidence of the young men McCracken and Spiers, and without expressing any opinion as to the guilt or innocence of the Appelant, I feel that I must follow the well established practice and hold that the Appelant should not have been convicted on what seems to me the uncorroborated evidence of the accomplices, the young men I have named.

"I therefore allow the appeal, but in the circumstances without costs, and I make any order necessary for the protection of the Magistrate.

SAYS POLICE ASSURED HIM HE WOULD OBTAIN IMMUNITY

Confessed Smuggler Demonstrates For Information of Mounties.

CROSS EXAMINATION.

Claims He Was Promised Ticket of Leave If Sentenced.

MONTREAL, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press)-Benjamin J. Cohen, wealthy self-confessed silk and cotton smuggler, still expects to obtain immunity in regard to the two smuggling charges on which he is due to be tried before the court of king's bench next week, according to his statements under cross examination yesterday morning, testifying in the case of O. Bessette.

If not, and he is sentenced, the R.C.M.P. had promised to help him to get an early ticket-of-leave, he stated.

Bessette is charged with harboring smuggled goods, and Cohen is the chief witness for the crown.

Under cross-examination by N. K. Laflamme, K.C., for the defence, Cohen declared that he had first made a confession to the authorities in Ottawa, revealing how his smuggling operations had been carried out. He had sworn to this confession, in the hope that thereby he might obtain clemency.

Demonstrated His System

When the R.C.M.P. approached him with a copy of his sworn statement, and discussed the question of his smuggling some more goods in so as to demonstrate his system to them, witness said he assumed that his petition for clemency was granted. The R.C.M.P. seemed also to be taking this for granted, he said.

In recent months, he had again approached the R.C.M.P. men regarding his hopes of immunity, and they had told him they were not sure on that point, but had added, that if he went to trial in spite of his co-operation, and were sentenced to a term of imprisonment, they would help him to get an early ticket-of-leave.

At the oening of the hearing yesterday morning he was asked if he had discussed his case with the R.C.M.P. in recent months)

"Yes, sir," he answered.

"And do you still expect immunity regarding your case?" "I do."

"You know your case has been fixed for next week?" "Yes."

"And in spite of that you still expect immunity?" Yes."

"Did you ever offer to pay a fine of $30,000 to get out of this?" "I did not, sir."

"You remember asking for a speedy trial?"

"Yes, sir."

"That was in February, 1926?" "Yes, sir."

"And at the same time as you were asking for speedy justice, you were struggling to stop the case?" No answer.

Mr. Laflamme took the witness in detail over the history of his application for a rogatory commission to take evidence in New York, and his appeal in this connection, which was only disposed of in the appeal court last month. Then he returned to the question of immunity.

"What did you say to the Mounties when they said they were not sure of your immunity? "I said I would go ahead, anyway."

"Did you discus a project whereby you were to get a ticket of leave as early as possible and be freed, and the public would know nothing about it?" "I will answer 'yes' to that, except the words 'and the public would know nothing about it'."

Relates Interview With Police

"Tell us all about that part of the interview." "They said they would try to get a ticket of leave for me, if I were convicted."

"Who told you that?" "Sergeant Salt."

"Were you led to understand that Sergeant Salt would help you to get your ticket of leave?" "Yes, sir."

Ivan M. Harper, of the American Railway Express identfied a number of express shipipng documents regarding the smuggled goods alleged to have been handled by the accused.

Corporal Kyle, of the R.C.M.P. gave corroborative evidence regarding the arrangement he had carried out with Cohen, when he went to New York and furnished the money to buy silks and cottons to be smuggled into Canada later.

At Thursday afternoon's hearing Cohen admitted that he had been engaged in smuggling operations himself from early 1924 until late in 1925. The case is continuing.

ST. JOHN'S CALLS REV. E. HARSTON

Woodville Pastor Asked To Come to Campbellford Church.

ACCEPTS OFFER.

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 12. — The congregation of St. John's United church held a meeting on Thursday evening in the auditorium for the purpose of nominating a minister for the ensuing year. The Rev. W. Elliott was appointed chairman for the evening and Mr. S. A. Maguire was chosen as secretary. Mr. Maguire read the recommendation passed by the board at their meeting on Feb. 1, that voting be done by ballot, but in lieu of several names being withdrawn, Mr. Kingston moved that candidates be nominated and a vote taken. It was moved by Mr. D. W. Douglas and seconded by Dr. H. O. Richardson, that Rev. E. Harston, of Woodville, be called, and Dr. Longmore and Mr. C. Davidson moved that nominations be closed and the congregation approved unanimously.

A motion was then carried that Rev. E. Harston be asked to supply the pulpit of St. John's with a stipend of $2500 for the year and with the usual provisions made for holidays, etc. A resolution, moved by G. A. Kingston and seconded by R. McKelvie, at the recent board meeting was that the secretary instruct the prebytery when a minister has been called and has accepted. Mr. Maguire, the secretary, then gave an account of the standing of the local expenses and the amount given toward St. John's allocation of the maintenance and extension fund.

Rev. Mr. Elliott dismissed the meeting with the benediction.

After the congregational meeting on Thursday evening, when Rev. E. Harston was unanimously invited by the congregation to act as their pastor, Rev. Mr. Harston immediately sent word that he would be pleased to accept the charge and become pastor of St. John's.

London's Oldest Parrot Has Only Tail Feathers

LONDON, Feb. 11. (AP)—Pete, London's oldest parrot, is becoming so bald that his owner has decided to have little jackets made for him to take the place of the long-lost feathers. Colonel W. B. Ferris of Philbeach Gardens, S.W., who has had the bird for fifty-five years, has records which show that the parrot is known to have existed in 1801.

The records show that Pete was captured by a British soldier in India 126 years ago after a battle between the English and forces of the Rajah of Satara of which the parrot had been the tribal mascot. Later the bird became a pet of the Maharajah of Kolhapur, who in 1844 presented him to Colonel Ferris, who was once Governor of Aden.

Pete began to show bald spots in 1872 and now is devoid of all feathers on his breast and back. He still retains red tail feathers. The older Pete gets the more he talks, and he eats almost anything, particularly nuts, dates, bananas and other indigestibles from which centenarians usually refrain.

MARX COALITION GOVERNMENT

Will Discuss.

PARIS, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press) President Coolidge's new naval disarmament proposal will be discussed by the French Cabinet at its regular weekly meeting to-day, after which the first official comment may be forthcoming. Thus far the only comment in authorized quarters is that the American plan, as now understood, runs counter to the programme of the French Government.

The best informed newspaper comment indicates that the decision of the Government will be either frankly unfavorable or will be surrounded with so many precautionary conditions as hardly to fit in with the scheme outlined in President Coolidge's memorandum.

A semi-official statement given out last night regarding the condition of the French navy indicates that it is considerably below the maximum quotas fixed at Washington for capital ships and airplane crriers.

Foreign Minister Briand himself is represented as now being far less compromising with respect to limitation of smaller warships than he was regarding capital ships at the time of the Washington conference. Furthermore, Ministers Barthou, Tardieu and Marin, representing moderate and conservative elements in the present Government, are not likely to welcome any additional disarmament measures that would put France in a position of inferiority to any other power.

Voice Satisfaction.

GENEVA, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press).—Belief that President Coolidge's proposals for further reduction in naval armaments has strengthened rather than weakened the position of the League of Nations on the disarmament problem was expressed in League circles yesterday.

Profound satisfaction with the President's proposals was voiced last night by the Secretariat of the League immediately after the complete text of the note became available.

Far from being designed, as it has been hinted in some quarters, as a torpedo against an eventual general conference on the reduction of armaments, League officials expressed the opinion that the American document effectively destroyed the fear of a separate conference, because it specifically links any special naval accord with the general Geneva pour parlers. It is felt that it even commits the United States to full collaboration in the preparation of the agenda of the final general conference.

"President Coolidge has now finally removed the naval conference from Washington to Geneva," said one official to the correspondent last night, "and more than that, he has put new life into the disarmament preliminaries by agreeing to accept the 5—5—3 ratio regarding the United States, Great Britain and Japan for cruisers, torpedo boats and submarines."

So expectant is the secretariat that a naval discussion will at least be initiated at Geneva, that it already is planning to utilize some of the funds allotted for a final general conference for specific naval pour parlers.

Whether Great Britain would accept the 5—5—3 ratio as far as cruisers are concerned, however, is open to doubt in the view of experts at Geneva, who believe that Great Britain certainly would want to know how many torpedo boats and submarines France and Italy would build before accepting any ratio whatsoever for herself.

LONDON, Feb. 11 (Canadian Press).—President Coolidge's suggestion of further limitation of naval armament evoked a wave of approval in the British press which has been taken up by the government and the public. Officials gave assurance yesterday that Anglo-American cooperation such as existed at the time of the Washington conference on the reduction of armament will be in evidence when preliminary disarmament discussions are resumed at Geneva in March.

At the Foreign Office The Associated Press was told yesterday that the British Government heartily endorses the principles of the President's memorandum: "The general favorable press on the President's note voices both the public and official opinion of Great Britain," said an official.

It is authoritatively forecast that Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, as British delegate to the Geneva conference, will play the role enacted at the Washington meeting by the Earl of Balfour, who sounded the note which helped to carry that historic conference to success. Officials here are inclined to think that the real test of the American plan will come from Continental Europe and possibly from Japan.

Soldiers and Police Are Still Rounding Up Rebels.

REVOLUTION.

Hope Expressed That Government Victories Will Bring It To An End.

LISBON, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press).—Hundreds of thousands of persons thronged the streets of Lisbon yesterday to see the scenes of destruction wrought by the artillery during the insurrection which was crushed Wednesday night after 56 hours of fighting.

Troops are patrolling the capital and soldiers and police are still rounding up rebels here and there. All the leaders, with the exception of Commander Joao de Carvalho, who led the besieged rebel force in the naval arsenal, have surrendered or have been captured. De Carvalho escaped in a motor boat.

The Government has ordered the streets cleared by six o'clock each evening to facilitate the search for members of the civilian organization which, supplied with bombs, aided the rebels. All civilians found armed will be shot.

Only one warship, the cruiser Carvalhao, supported the revolutionaries, and this was silenced by the fortress' guns after firing nine broadsides.

Both the army and navy are apparently loyal, and President Carmona, in an interview, has declared that the Government now feels better able to cope with the problems of reconstruction.

Hope is expressed that the decisive Government victories both at Oporto and here will end the cycle of revolutionary movements with which Portugal has been torn.

The three days of fighting which preceded the surrender of the revolutionists in Lisbon was marked by an almost unintermittent of heavy fire. Occasionally it would cease in the centre of the city, but then would start up again while occasional shrapnel shells would burst. One shell struck in the main square in front of the railroad station without causing great damage, while another one hit the Hotel Angleterre, smashing the coping.

For a time civilians in their homes were without food, while even in the big hotels, where advance provision is always made for emergencies, the supply of bread ran out. Wednesday morning a supply of game was smuggled through the fighting line.

Individuals here and there showed remarkable indifference to the fighting. In one case a solitary civilian made his way along an avenue in the midst of an intense fire against him and calmly disappeared without being hurt.

On another occasion a woman strolled down the centre of a street toward a Government barricade in the midst of rifle fire against her. Eventually she reached the barricade without being hit, and explained that she had come to get something to eat.

LAKE REBUSHED.

New Path Marked Out Following Appearance of Crack.

HIAWATHA, Feb. 12.—At a meeting of the Hamilton Township Council held the week after the bad crack appeared it was decided to change the bushing to a safer place on Rice Lake. This has been done. At the present time sleighs, cars, and pedestrians are crossing. Those wishing to cross to Harwood from this side should go west from the Lake Shore House to Mrs Madden Howard's, a distance of three quarters of a mile. Then they will be able to see the little cedars placed there to guide them.

NEW U. S. MINISTER AND FAMILY

William Phillips, U.S. minister to Canada, his wife and three little members of his family. The new minister to Canada from the United States drops the title of ambassador and also loses some of salary in accepting the post at Ottawa. Mr. Phillips will move to Ottawa some time this month. Mrs. Phillips comes to Canada with a reputation as a charming and tactful hostess. The new minister is a Harvard man, and independently wealthy. His last post was United States' ambassador to Belgium. The picture of Mrs. Phillips and the children was taken several years ago.

MUSINGS AT A MANSE WINDOW

MY FRIEND, Doctor Stough, visited the manse recently and left some food for thought. It was not the most palatable! Indeed I know lots of folks who would absolutely refuse to have anything to do with it. But, my friend, the doctor is a man of wide experience, and, in all fairness, could not be called narrow or bigoted—consequently, his words are worth weighing well before we decide to disagree with them. After a most interesting and informing talk on the theatre he switched over to games of various kinds. I began to wonder what he was driving at. We were both agreed that the wholesale denunciation of the so-called popular amusements has always brought antagonism from those who have indulged and never been able to see the harm. This antagonism has been aroused because such denunciation has frequently failed to be discerning, discriminating and sympathetic. The evil in some things is so wedded to the good that it very often takes the name of the good.

THE CURSE OF CARDS

Games should never be classified together and then denounced together. All games are not harmful. Many are wholesome, helpful, and recreative. Certain ones, as baseball, tennis, golf, bowling, etc., are pre-eminent in giving needed physical exercise and should be encouraged. Others are mentally stimulating and afford splendid training to the intellectual faculties. Such games are checkers and chess. Still others train the eye, the muscle, and the nerve, like billiards and pool. To denounce any of these in the same breath with cards is to show a lack of careful thought, and to do a great injustice to those who enjoy real recreative games. Games of skill should not be classed with games of chance. There are elements in games of skill which make for stronger bodies and richer minds. Games of chance, on the other hand, have most of the elements of the games of skill plus the element of chance, without which they would not be games. It is solely th element of chance that makes these games morally, mentally, and spiritually dangerous. And, said the doctor, "It is upon this fact that I base my argument against them." To games of chance belong all card games, all dice games, and all domino games. Of these, however, the euchre deck is the most baneful in its influence. This is due to the innumerable combinations of odds of chance which the deck offers.

CARDS AND CULTURE

It seems a sad commentary upon our modern social life that socially inclined people have deteriorated to that level that they cannot amuse themselves without resorting to one of three so-called popular amusements. I say "deteriorated" advisedly, for the mania for card-playing is not a mark of culture refinement, nor even of average intellectual attainments. Whether card-playing is the cause, or the result, it is a recognized fact that the fine art of conversation through which people may sharpen their wits and develop their brain power, as well as increase their range of knowledge, has almost disappeared. Dr. Leslie W. Sprague, lecturer of the Brooklyn Ethical Society, once said: "It is the deck of cards that has made conversation the dead art in America." Francis Browne, editor of the "Dial," added, "There is not a doubt of it. We look in vain for any such charm and stimulation as men like Dr. Johnson, for instance, could impart to their talk. Our comment on most subjects is limited to a few words. We look askance on the prospect of a long talk. We dive to the point in one sentence, and then we have said all we have to say. The same is true of letter-writing as an art. Where will you find now-a-days any such long, rambling, delightful letters as were indited with such pleasure a century or two ago?"

ENTERTAINING CHEAPLY

To entertain at cards is the cheapest and easiest way to spend an evening. All that need be prepared are the card decks, the tables, and the refreshments.

After greeting her guests any hostess could easily retire to her room, set the alarm, sleep from eight to midnight, then come down and serve the refreshments. There is little probability that she would have been missed at all, for from the time the guests began their playing, until they finished, there would not have been a single intelligent idea expressed (except about the game) all the long eveing. One is not permitted to talk, for it will spoil the game. The less disposed one is to talk, the less distracting will be his ideas to others, and the more popular he will be.

It is, therefore, no mark of refinement nor culture nor any special recommendation of modern society, that it has gone card crazy. It indicates a distinct deterioration of grey matter. Expert card-playing as the passport to any set, least of all 'the exclusive set' is a sorry reflection upon boasted and much coveted society.

CARDS ARE COSTLY

The attributes of the rational, the moral, and the volitional man are the intellect, the conscience, and the will. These three, all and always, operate conjunctively. In the normal man they never act separately. Every act of our lives must be submitted to these three psychological forces. Art, science, commerce, religion, are regions over which these faculties can and should preside. But in the realm of chance they are instantly crippled and become ineffective. This it is that makes cards so very dangerous to the players. In every game of cards the element of chance exists. It cannot be eliminated.

Every nerve is on edge, the breath comes short and fast, the blood rushes to the brain, the temper is frequently heated and unloosed; the desire to win becomes a passion; conscience becomes feverish; barriers go down; advantage is frequently taken; dishonesty is committed; and there ensues a general psychological riot. There has really happened to the mental powers exactly what happens to the physical when alcohol is taken into the system. The reigning powers are gradually deteriorated—at first by mild stimulation, then by intoxication, finally, if long indulged, by inebriation. Intellect, conscience, and will reel and totter under the drugging of chance and remain so until the stimulation is over, and they sober up like a drunken man. But the appetite is created and soon asserts itself, demanding, as alcohol, another spree.

This abnormal stimulation accounts for the card craze of modern society. It is the insidious charm of the serpent chance, as it wraps its coils about the intellectual, moral, and volitional life, leashing them, then strangling the soul and spirit, injecting into the life a poison deadlier than that of the rattlesnake, disguising it in the sweet nectar of desire to win as alcohol hides in the flavor of liquors.

BUT, DOCTOR!

Having unburdened himself to this extent, he said: "I'll have to be off now, as others are waiting to see me; but, think over what I have been saying, and I feel sure you will see the truth and feel the force of my words."

And I have been thinking a great deal! If it is possible to be card-crazy, then the place in which I live is card-crazy. It is not the 'common people—God forgive me for speaking of any section of humanity as the 'common people—but it is 'the upper ten' who spend most of their afternoons and nights in playing cards. Nice folks, most of them are—although some of them would never shine where brains are needed—and very delightful to meet. Now I am wondering if any of them will read these words, and if so, what they will think of the doctor!

A KILL-JOY

Some will conclude that he is one of the old school. That, of course, will be the truth; but why should it be anything against him? Is it not possible to belong to the old school and be right? It seems to me that when the old school is compared with the new it is always to the advantage of the old. They did more than shuffle cards and curse under their breath when they got the worst end of the deal. Others will say that my friend is a kill-joy and is not fit to associate with modern society. And in that they may be right, especially in that part which is related to modern society. But then that fact may be less to the credit of modern society than to this doctor of the old school.

KNAVES AND ACES

And now to bring my musings to a close for another week I might add that if I agree with what the doctor has said it is not because I am ignorant of games of chance, more especially with cards. I know that something is wrong somewhere if you have a hand with five aces. And I know that in a pack of cards there are knaves as well as kings or aces; and any simpleton can tell a knave from a king or an ace, when it has to do with the game of cards.

But in the game of life—which is not a game of chance—it is not always easy, even for the wise, to distinguish the knaves from the kings and the aces. And this much more I might add by way of comparing the game of cards with the game of life—success does not depend so much in holding a good hand as in playing well a bad one.

Amusements

I TREMBLE to think of the myriad ministers to vice and degradation, to destruction of heart, soul, body and the health of coming generations who infest and infect our great cities; and at the coarse, garish, unlovely, ignoble, and often hateful character of the chosen public amusements of a great class of our young men.

What Think Ye of Christ?

I CAN almost dream what Socrates would say to any man who said that there was no difference between Jesus and him. But how shall we state the difference? One is divine and human; the other is human only. One is Redeemer; the other is philosopher. One is inspired; and the other questions. One reveals; and the other argues. . . . Socrates brings an argument to meet an objection; Jesus brings a whole being which truth has filled with strength, to meet another whole being which error has filled with feebleness.

Is the Bible Infallible?

REV. J. RAE of Aberdeen has recently said: "But if you ask, What was the Bible given to bring us? you find an answer which leaves untouch its full authority. It was given to bring us a knowledge of God, and that is what it does bring us. If I were to look at my watch to find the day of the week or the temperature of the room in which I am writing you would regard my conduct as insufficiently intelligent. It was made to tell the time and for no other purpose. Why, then, look in the Bible for what it was not given to provide? . . . It was meant to give us a knowledge of God for our salvation. And that is what it does give, infallibly and without fail. This is its authority. This is what separates it from all other literature. And if we regard it from this point of view how impressive are its promises and how profound its insight into the needs and desires of man!"

A Lamp and a Light.

THE late Dr. Jowett, in his work, "Life in the Heights," wrote: "I remember that I was once appointed to preach at Saddleworth. It was a supply of our college list. I stayed with an old farmer. After the afternoon service, I put up at his house until the time of the evening train.

"The darkness fell: and the quiet day turned to a very stormy night. Soon the rutty roads were living streams. When the time for my train was getting near my friend gave me a farm lantern, 'just to help you see where you are going and keep you out of the ditch.'

"Well, that was something, but he added something that made it better.

"'Do you see that glimmer of light yonder?'

"'No, where?'

"And then he trained my eyes to catch a far-off gleam that looked miles away.

"'That is Saddleworth Station: make for that!'

"The two things gave me what I needed. The old, worn-out lantern gave me light for my feet, and each step became clear, and that glimmer of the distant scene gave me cheer and appointed the course of my journey."

Surely no man can ask more than this of life, that he shall have a light for his feet and a guiding light ahead to indicate the goal to which he may direct his steps.

These two things are always at the service of everyone. The Psalmist refers to the one, and the Apostle Paul, backed by the whole content of the Bible, refers to the other.

The Psalmist says: "Thy Word is a lamp unto my feet, and a light unto my path," while Paul speaks of "The prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus" towards which he was always pressing forward.

Straight Talking.

SPEAKING on the topic, "College Men Can Still Believe," Rev. Clarence E. Macartney, former moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly, U. S. A., in his own church on a recent Sunday, said:

"A great believer once defined faith as the 'evidence of things not seen.' If a great deal of what we read and hear to-day is true, then faith is impossible, for the claim is made that the only evidence is for the things seen, and that for things unseen no evidence can be presented. This contemptuous dismissal of the evidence of the unseen is one of the besetting temptations of the college man or woman, and in this attitude they are sometimes encouraged by their instructors and even by religious teachers who seem to take the ground that when one talks to college men one must come down from the great altitude and mysteries of Christian faith and deal only with the low level of prudential ethics.

"There could be no greater mistake than this to offer to the youth of our generation, the great army of young men and young women in our colleges a diluted Gospel or a half-way Christ. From much that one hears one would get the impression that about the year 1900 or 1905 A. D., there was born in America a race of men totally different from all the generations which had preceded them; that this new race received at its birth a wholesale inoculation of the virus of unbelief, so that the doctrines of the Christian religion which have inspired the conduct, held the intellectual admiration, and buoyed the hopes of the men of past ages, cannot make the slightest appeal to this new race, which is made up of the young men and young women of our day. Therefore it is idle to talk to them about sin, atonement, incarnation, resurrection, regeneration, and eternal retribution. All that we can do, so we are told, is to talk to them not only in a new language, but to present to them what is virtually a new religion (certainly not the Christian) a religion which has no place for the supernatural and no room for incarnation, atonement and judgment.

"The fact is the youth of this day are just the same as those of any other day, just as liable to shipwreck and ruin, and just as capable of noble living and triumphant faith. Instead of patronising them, instead of giving them the impression that when we speak of them we are addressing a new and a superior order of beings, we ought to call them up and out of the morass of worldliness and mind-worship and hedonism unto the mountain heights of fellowship with Jesus Christ and veneration and adoration of the sublime truths of the Christian revelation which are the only foundation for high living and the only hope for the uncharted territory which lies beyond the sombre gates of death."

Dean Inge Again.

THE Dean of St. Paul's objects to people picking out his gravest misgivings and prefacing them with the familiar nickname of which he had hoped the public was getting tired. "It is always a pleasure," he says, "to be argued out of 'gloomy' apprehensions. But the optimist is generally a rather foolish person, the kind of man who would buy from a Jew and sell to a Scot and expect to make a profit." If it amuses the public to call him a pessmist, the dean says, he cannot help it. "But why do my critics say I look at society from the point of view of an aristocrat? Every Englishman likes to be called an aristocrat; but I should have thought that all my likes and dislikes were essentially middle class. It is the middle class, not the aristocracy, which praises hard work and thrift, which resents attacks on private property, which believes in domesticity and a pure family life. I am almost a Quaker, and the Quakers are not an aristocratic sect." Dean Inge confesses that an occasional lunge at social wreckers, bigoted anti-Protestants and others whom he does not love is a relief to his feelings. The friends of labor are naturally indignant because he says in his book on England that the Labor leader is "sometimes a drunken blackguard." Admitting that this was "too impolite," he apologizes thus: "The rowdies from the Clyde who 'turn the House of Commons into a bear-garden,' 'his own phrase] are, I am now told, teetotallers to a man. I apologize for having libelled them, especially as the only possible excuse for their bad manners is thus taken away." He goes on to say that there is one thing that elderly men ought to remember and sometimes forget: "If there is a way out of our troubles, the middle-aged must find it, and the young must take it." Having quoted the Greek proverb, "The deeds of the young, the counsels of the middle-aged, and the prayers of the old," Dr. Inge confesses that he is reluctant to admit (who would not be?) that he has reached the age when he ought to be relegated to class three. He has turned sixty-six, but looks younger. He concludes: "The old fellow will persist in giving good advice ("It consoles him," said a Frenchman, "for being no longer able to give a bad example") as long as people will listen to him, and a little longer." Everybody, including those who differ from him most, hopes that the caustic dean will go on giving us advice for many years to come—so long as he does not expect us to take it quite all.

An Enemy's Book

THE late W. Robertson Nicoll, an authority on books, an able critic, one of the foremost editors of his time, and a writer of outstanding ability once said:

"No man of honour will ever allow himself to criticise a book by a man who is a personal antagonist. Let him seek refuge if he must in a Salvation Army shelter; anything rather than run the risk of indulging personal rancour by an apparently honest and candid criticism."

Children's Corner — TELL US A STORY

ONCE upon a time there was a young fish that had heard other fishes talking about the sea. One day it thought, "I shall go and find the sea." So it set forth to find the sea. It searched for a long time, but could not find it. Then it met another fish, and asked, "Can you tell me where I may find the sea?" And the other fish said: "No, I have often wished to see it, for I have heard much about it, but I do not know where to look." The young fish met another fish, an old and wise fish, and asked, "Can you tell me where I may find the sea?" And the old fish said, "Why, this is the sea; you are swimming in the sea; you have been in it all the time." So do we look for God, thinking that He is far from us and difficult to find, when "in Him we live and move and have our being." God is all around us, so near us that He hears our tiniest thought.

IT IS a time of war, surely, for I see the glint of sunshine on spear and shield as the sentries are relieved, and sometimes the sound of a trumpet or the neighing of a trooper's horse falls upon the ear. It cannot be only a review—things look too serious for any make-believe fighting.

Moreover, look at those groups of men watching their military visitors, their faces are pallid with anxiety, verging on despair; judging by their conversation hope has deserted them and ruin stares them in the face; business of all kinds is at a standstill, of course, for who cares to buy and sell when loss of property and a terrible death are close at hand? Did I say that business of all kinds was suspended?—what a great mistake! See, here in these gloomy precincts, with but little light and air to cheer them, is a group of men engaged in a brisk property sale!

Two cousins are transacting the business, the salesman finds a ready purchaser, the chink of money is heard, and the buzz of voices discussing the transaction; both buyer and seller seem equally pleased, yet, as the distant sound of the trumpet finds its way even into this secluded spot, it strikes one forcibly that the transfer of land at such a time and place is most inexplicable!

Active at Eighty-Four

LATELY I looked over a crowd of men and women in the prime of life. They all called themselves Christians; but I felt ashamed of them—heartily ashamed. It was a season of revival. Much was needed to be done, and searching out the workers, real workers, I found one dear old lady who was eighty-four years old, and she was doing more than any half dozen of the rest. Active, prayerful, zealous, faithful. At it all the while, and often awake at nights thinking and praying for the salvation of others. I hope if I live to reach that ripe old age I'll be as worth-while a Christian as she is.

Fortune will call at the smiling gate.

Why should a true and sincere appreciation be termed flattery, and degraded to the level of insincere praise? Why should an individual be accused of acting from base and selfish policy because he feels the glow and warmth of social response?

THE CLASS WHICH PAYS.

Among the factors that are causing a demand for the abolition of the income tax is the fact that the levy, through the way it works out, falls heaviest upon one particular class in the community, the salaried man.

He alone has little chance to escape, for the details of his income must be reported by his employer.

Other people may succeed in covering up their incomes and thus avoid taxation, but the man on salary must rig down into his pocket each year to make his contribution to the Dominion treasury.

The latest figures show that out of some 9,000,000 Canadians only 231,730 pay Federal income tax.

And of this number 168,894 are employees whose salaries are reported to Ottawa by their firms.

In other words about three out of every four persons who have to pay income tax are salaried employees.

SELECTING THE KEY MEN.

The Ontario Government has started its liquor control policy well by selecting a commission strong enough to win the approval even of those who are opposed to government sale of liquor.

Further gains in public approval can be made in the first place by bringing down a well-considered and workable act and secondly by due care in the selection of subordinate officials.

In so far as the latter are concerned the responsibility rests primarily upon the elected government members and the defeated Conservative standard-bearers as the case may be, as undoubtedly their recommendations will be followed in the appointing of vendors.

As The Examiner pointed out some time ago, the vendor is the key man of the whole system.

With men in charge of the Government stores who could be counted upon to see that the law is rigidly lived up to and who command the confidence of the public, and with the administration of the Act in charge of D. B. Hanna the new policy would be launched under conditions that would give hope of successful results.

Those who are responsible for the appointments should see to it that the scheme is not hampered at its inception by placing weaklings in positions that call for business ability and backbone.

THE TEACHING OF FRENCH.

Action to prevent the teaching of French as an optional subject in the higher grades of the Windsor public schools will strikes most people as ill-advised.

The Windsor experiment, which has received the official sanction of Premier Ferguson, is an enterprising move and its results would be of interest, not only to educationists, but generally.

The proposed French classes, it is understood, would not interfere with other school work.

They would simply offer an opportunity to learn conversational French at a period in the pupil's life when instruction along any line is more completely and easily absorbed.

French is one of the two official languages of Canada.

It is self evident that a child capable of talking both French and English is much better equipped than the pupil who knows only one.

Instead of throwing obstacles in the way we should appreciate the fact that we would be in a much more enviable position if more of our English speaking people had some knowledge of French.

Our fellow Canadians in Quebec, many of them put us to shame in the faculty with which they speak English and there is not the least doubt that if there was equal ability as bilingualists shown by other Canadians the relationship between the two great races that make up the country's population would be infinitely happier.

DOMINION TAX REDUCTIONS.

Chief interest in the present session of Parliament centres in the measures of tax reduction that may be found in the Budget proposals of Hon. J. A. Robb.

In this connection the Citizens' Research Institute lists some of the suggestions that have been made.

1.—The abolition of stamp taxes on cheques, notes, etc.

2.—(a) The exemption of dividends of companies, the income of which has already been taxed; (b) The exemption of charitable gifts from income tax; (c) A reduction of the income tax rates to the level of the United States income tax; (d) Abolition of the income tax.

3.—(a) A reduction in the rates of the sales staff; (b) The abolition of the sales tax, or the extension of exemptions to further articles.

Studying these suggestions, the Institute thinks that the Government must continue to derive considerable revenue from the income and sales taxes, and that the abolition of these levies is not practicable for a few years at least.

As to the stamp tax it is condemned as an irritating time loser in the conduct of business.

The suggestion that dividends of a company, the income of which has already been taxed, should be exempted is in a measure approved on the ground that it is good business to encourage investment.

The Institute favours a reduction in the rate of sales tax, pointing out that this Canadian taxation experiment differs materially from the income tax.

Whatever the criticisms of the latter may be, it must at least be "Income" before it is subject to taxation; it must be "coming" to the taxpayer before the tax operates.

The sales tax, however, while theoretically passed along to the ultimate consumer, frequently, because of trade conditions or excessive competition, has to be absorbed by the manufacturer. Also payment thereof may be called for before payment for goods on which the tax is levied has been received.

This forces the manufacturer to absorb the sales tax on bad debts.

These factors may result in the "sales" tax becoming a "capital" levy in a bad year, or at least such factors result in the lowering of the manufacturer's income, with a resultant loss in the revenue derived by the Government from "income tax."

Without going into details, it may be said that the sales tax is a handicap to some Canadian firms in competing with those of other countries, particularly in the open markets of the world.

Such a loss of business in turn reacts on the "income" which might be earned by the firm and by the employees and be liable to taxation as such.

A reduction in the rate of sales tax should, therefore, tend to increase the revenue from the income tax, and, if the experience of the Government from the results of increasing the sales tax can be taken as any criterion, a decrease in the rate of the sales tax should not result in a corresponding reduction in revenue from such a source.

WOLFE AND THE ELEGY.

In the interests of historical truth, one of the biographers of Wolfe has challenged the authenticity of the familiar story which picturesquely represents the hero of Quebec reciting a verse of Gray's "Elegy" as he drifted down the St. Lawrence at the head of his troops to attack the enemy. It is a romantic story which has come to be inseparably associated with the crowning achievement of the immortal soldier, and ,as the recent centenary celebrations demonstrated, one that never fails to impress when opportunely repeated.

That the generally accepted version of the episode is open to question cannot be doubted. Hardly two historians agree in the form in which it is narrated, and one has only to trace the evolution of the story to realize that in the process of transmission it has been subjected to some embellishment or distortion. The result has been to create in the minds of the sceptics a confusion as to the facts that renders much of their criticism superfluous.

Much ink has been wasted, for instance, in an effort to prove that Wolfe could not have recited the lines attributed to him while on his way to the landing. It is argued, reasonably enough, that having issued orders enjoining absolute silence on the part of his troops, he was not likely to violate them himself by breaking into poetry. Nor is it probable, say the seekers after historical truth, that when his officers needed all the inspiration and encouragement they could get for the task ahead of them, their leader would so far forget his duty at the most critical moment as to express a wish that he had written a poem rather than have the glory of winning a great victory.

But if those who reason thus had studied the facts and the documents as closely as they claim to have done, they would know that they were really tilting at a myth of their own making. For while it is true that Sir Walter Scott, in a letter to Southey 71 years after the event, represented that Wolfe pulled the "Elegy" out of his pocket and read, or quoted from it, "on the night that he crossed the river with his small army," that distinguished author was not, as Mr. Edward Salmon assumes, the first to tell the story.

As Dr. Doughty points out in his monumental and invaluable history of the siege of Quebec, the incident of the recital of Gray's lines was first mentioned in a sketch of Wolfe's life published a few years after the victory, but it was not until more than half a century later (in 1918, to be exact) that there appeared the account which is historically regarded as the source of all other versions. And in that account, attributed to Dr. John Robison, an Edinburgh professor who had been at the taking of Quebec, not as a midshipman, as many historians state, but as a tutor to a midshipman, it is distinctly set forth that the recital took place while Wolfe was visiting some of his posts "the night before the battle."

But, after all, the question of when or where the incident occurred is not of so much historical importance as the question of whether it happened at all. Examination of the various versions of the story, and of the circumstances that gave rise to it, certainly reveals some curious discrepancies which would seem to merit more serious inquiry than the comparatively trivial point so unnecessarily stressed by Mr. Salmon and other doubting Thomases. Yet it is safe to predict that after the historical Goths have done their worst, the romantic story of how Wolfe in, or near, the hour of victory recited the lines, ending with "The paths of glory lead but to the grave," will continue to be cherished and repeated by all who love the picturesque in history.—Ottawa Journal.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

TORONTO, Feb. 12—There was little change in general marketing conditions this week. Exporters took about the same number of cattle as last week, and at steady prices. Choice finished butcher-steers and heifers held steady to firm all week, but the trade could not absorb the too large number of rough green steers. There was a heavy holdover of this class dragging on the market all week, finally clearing at substantial declines.

Export buyers took 400 finished steers at prices ranging from $7.25 to $7.60, bulls at $3 to $5.25. They report orders next week for 500 finished steers and will take a few heavy heifers, but not any bulls.

Choice handy weight butcher steers and heifers met with good steady trading at from $7 to $7.50. An over supply of green steers, selling slowly at from $6 to $6.50.

Choice fat cows held steady at $5 to $5.25, with a few heiferish cows up to $5.75. Good cows, $4.25 to $4.75; medium cows not quite so active at $3.25 to $4. Choice baby beeves met with strong trading, tops selling at $10 to $10.50; good, $8 to $9; medium not wanted except at butchers prices. Choice butchers bulls sold readily at from $5 to $5.50; rough to heavy bulls, $3 to $4.25.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press).—The only business worked with foreign buyers on the Montreal grain market yesterday was the sale of a few loads of Manitoba Spring wheat to the United Kingdom and New York.

The trade in the domestic market continued quiet, but prices were unchanged.

Extreme dullness marked the local and export trade in Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour, but values ruled steady.

The demand for all lines of millfeed slackened off somewhat but the undertone was firm. The market for standard grades of rolled oats was inactive but steady.

An active business was done in fresh and storage eggs and prices were unchanged. The receipts were 780 cases.

Only a small volume of business was done in potatoes and values were firm. Car lots of Prince Edward Island Green Mountains were quoted at $1.75 to $1.80 per bag of 90 pounds, and Quebec White stock at $1.30 to $1.35 per bag of 90 pounds in bulk.

Prices for all grades of butter were well maintained under a quiet demand. The receipts were 131 packages.

The cheese market continues quiet but firm. The receipts were 176 boxes.

Hogs 28,000; closed active; late market mostly 25c lower than Thursday's low time; bulk desirable hogs 210 to 310 pounds, $11.55 to $11.65; top $12.20 paid for selected 150 pound weights, most packing sows $10.50 to $10.75; lightweights upward to $11.00; bulk slaughter pigs $11.50 to $11.75; strong weights $12.00; shippers took 12,000; estimated holdover 6,000.

Sheep 14,000; fat lambs steady to strong; spots 15c higher; heavy lambs $12.60 to $12.90; 105 to 110 pound kinds $11.75 to $12.00; wooled culls $10.00 to $10.50; sheep steady; fat ewes $7.50 to $8.50; top $8.75; desirable yearling wethers $11.25 to $11.50; desirable feeding lambs unchanged, $12.50 to $13.00; medium kinds at $12.00 to $12.20.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, Feb. 12 (Canadian Press). Nearly as motionless as the traditional painted ship upon a painted ocean, the wheat market yesterday devoted itself chiefly to preholiday adjustment of accounts. With all United States exchanges closed today, few traders cared to take on any immediate new risks looking either toward higher or lower prices. Wheat finished easy, unchanged to 1-4c down; corn unchanged to 1-2c up; oats unchanged to 1-8c advance, and provisions varying from 15 cents decline to a rise of 2 cents.

So narrow were fluctuations in wheat values here that the extreme range for the day amounted to only 5-8c a bushel. One of the causes of this was unusual steadiness of Liverpool quotations, despite increased shipments from Argentina, totalling 6,834,000 bushels for the week, against only 3,368,000 bushels a year ago. Australian shipments though, were smaller. Another feature was that hard winter wheat at the Gulf of Mexico stood at about the lowest level of the season as compared with May delivery in Chicago, but on the other hand the crop movement southwest was reported as falling off.

Unseasonable mild weather with a shrinkage of receipts and terminals gave firmness to the corn market. Oats sympathized with corn.

Packers selling, together with a downturn in hog values, had a bearish effect on provisions.

A Thought For To-day

THEN THEY SLOW DOWN.

As soon as your services are worth more, some one in your organization or in some other organization will discover you and pay you more.

But so many lack the patience to wait a little time that they may be discovered. If they are not promptly recognized and promptly rewarded they begin to slow down in service. They say what's the use of earning more than you get.

The result is, they then begin to earn less than they get, and here is a situation that will soon be discovered, the management will do one of two things, and I am sorry to say that the thing usually done is very disagreeable.

ROOSTERS IN COURT.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Feb. 11.—The Superior Court had some unique witnesses the other day. Two roosters were brought in as part of the testimony against a man charged with training birds for fighting.

A ROYAL QUARREL

(By Dr. Frank Crane.)

It is said that Queen Marie and Prince Carol had a falling out recently.

They were at the house of the Queen's friend in Paris and the Queen met the Prince by appointment there.

The Queen said that Madame Lupescu must go just as Zizi Lambrino had disappeared. The Bucharest court would not stand for a king not living with his legal wife.

She told Carol that his private feelings must be overruled by his knightly dignity. He retorted:

"Do you think it is queenly to have your hair shingled in a Los Angeles bob?"

So they had a falling out over the cut of the Queen's hair.

This would not be of much importance, but it is over such small things that revolutions and the like occur.

To think of men killing each other by wholesale because two people fall out over the way a woman should cut her hair is rather startling.

It shows how much the lives of the common people are worth compared with royal foibles.

Unfortunately, wars do not occur over major differences or about things worth while, but it is often some little spark that lights them.

The fact that millions of men lose their lives and millions of dollars' worth of property were destroyed because an insignificant duke was killed in Saraveja was appalling.

If the people were the ones who decided when they should go to war there would be no more wars, but the trouble is that wars grow out of the quarrels of their betters and they are often about insignificant trifles.

The question as to how Queen Marie shall bob her hair and whether Prince Carol shall renounce his soul mate or not may be an interesting one from a family point of view, but it is nothing for a whole population to go to war about.

The causes of war may lie deep in national prejudices and popular feeling, but the immediate causes of war are often furnished by trivial differences of rulers.

BILE POISONING

The liver is a spongy organ for the production of liquids necessary to digestion, which are made from waste products of the body, and are thrown out through the liver into the intestines to aid in digesting food at the same time as they are expelled.

When the skin becomes a yellow sallow color, the tongue coated, and headaches persist, these are indications that bile is being stored up in the liver and not sufficiently eliminated. One in this condition is being literally poisoned by bile which in the right quantity is helpful and necessary to digestion.

A frequent cause of this retention of bile, is the stoppage of the bile ducts by catarrhal inflammation of the ducts, causing stricture by pressure of tumors or feces in the hepatic flexture of the colon, also the pressure caused by pregnancy, and the lodgement of gall stones which stop the flow.

Constipation may also exist, and produce intestinal toxemia by the re-absorption of poisons, which have not been expelled rapidly enough.

There may be no sign of an organic disease of the liver, but just an inability to function well enough to take care of the unnatural burden placed upon this organic function, by one who is eating more food of every kind than the body can use and make a part of the cell structure.

Often there is an inability to take care of even a normal amount of food, because the body is enervated by bad habits other than eating, which waste the energy that should be used by the liver. A sedentary life, late hours, and excesses of every kind produce a condition which cannot really be completely overcome, even by the most judicious dieting.

After understanding these causes it is not difficult to formulate the necessary method of cure. Bad habits must be overcome which cause this unwholesome retention. Unquestionably the entire elimination of the starches, sugars, and fats for a considerable period of time will bring about very satisfactory results, but the cure is more rapid if a fruit fast is strictly adhered to for a few days, followed by careful dieting, until the liver is able to do a reasonable amount of work, and all bilious habits are corrected.

Do not expect to accomplish all of this by dieting alone, for if not enough exercise is taken, it will be almost impossible to eat such a small amount of food, as to make metabolism well-balanced, whereas, if vigorous physical culture exercises are indulged in each day, one does not have to be so careful in balancing the proper quantity and quality of food. Long walks in the open air, with deep breathing will bring about astonishing results in correcting faulty metabolism, and adjusting the manufacture of bile, so that no excess bile is accumulated in the liver or gall bladder.

If one has been over-burdened with bile for a long period of time, they must not expect an instantaneous re-adjustment, but if proper health rules are followed conscientiously, I can assure you that a permanent cure can be achieved in a reasonably short length of time.

No matter how bad your state of mental depression is, if you will get rid of the cause of your biliousness, you will soon find that you will not longer be upset with attacks of "The Blues."

LURE OF UNKNOWN CALLS TO EVEREST

Men of British Expedition Were Following Great Adventure.

The "Spirit of Adventue" is reflected in the amazing pictures of Mount Everest Expedition and the dramatic story to be told here on the evening of Friday, February 25, at St. Paul's Church, by Captain J. B. Noel, official photographer of the expedition, under arrangements being made by the Kiwanis Club of Peterborough.

Perhaps the Divine Sculptor carved Mount Everest as a Temple to Human Inspiration. What more appropriate monument to the will of Man? The lure of the Unknown! The will-o'-the-wisp of the Great Beyond! The indefinable force that has spelled progress throughout the ages! Such is the inspiration back of Brain and Brawn to hurdle the Insurmountable! Such is the inspiration back of the attempts to scale the dizzy heights of Mount Everest, the unconquerable!

Everest—the Roof of the World! Everest—the majestic—where skies caress the ice and snow; where zero gales sweep by a hundred miles an hour; where man, so far, has proved himself a giant among his fellowmen—yet a feeble ant in the great Plan of things. How the Gods on old Olympus must have smiled at man's tragic efforts to reach heights far beyond their throne. For Olympus is but a footstool to the highest mountain in the world.

The crowning glory of the Himalayas lies on the frontiers of Nepal and Tibet. The trail, even to the base of Everest, has ever been a trial of tragedy. Yet men has decreed that some day he will walk on the very top of the world. And he will!

The climax came in 1924 when two of the party of British exporers, Mallory and Irvine, with oxygen tanks strapped to their packs, reached a point 800 feet below the top—to disappear forever! Undaunted? The Spirit of Adventurous Achievement bows not. Already plans are under way for a new attempt that may accomplish what so far the many expeditions have failed to do.

Captain Noel was the official photographer for the expedition of 1924 and his "movies" and still photos are declared to be a real work of art. His story—told as the pictures are run—is a tale of absorbing adventure and courageous achievement that is unrivalled in the realm of exploration.

SAILORS' MISSION ON INLAND WATERS

Good Work Done By Tract Society in Past 50 Years.

For over half a century the Tract Society has ministered to the thousands of sailors on the great inland waters of Canada. It was in 1868 that the Rev. Thomas Bone inaugurated this beneficient work; and for 38 years he might have been seen any day on the Welland Canal during navigation, carrying on his much loved work. Under the superintendency of Mr. James S. Potter the work received a great impetus, and now operates from Quebec City to Port Arthur. Mr. Potter was well known locally, and many residents recall with pleasure his annual visits to Peterborough. His son, the Rev. James G. Potter, M.A., was for years minister at St. Andrew's Church.

Under Mr. Potter the society founded its sailor institutes at Kingston and Port Arthur.

For years, largely through the generosity of the pupils attending the Public and High Schools in the Province, some thousands of selected books have been sent to military hospitals and convalescent homes, all over the Dominion. The following testimony—a sample of many received—tells that these books have been, and are, greatly appreciated:

How little we realize sometimes that Canada is linked up to the British Isles and other parts of the Empire by water. Being so, lighthouses play a considerable part in our maritime life. For years the Upper Canada Tract Society has supplied the lonely "keepers of the lights" with choice books. Nearly one hundred lighthouses on the great inland waters and nearly as many on the Atlantic and Pacific seaboards have been supplied. Dozens of letters are received every year from the lonely keepers setting forth the value of the books.

Nor are children in hospitals neglected. Every year at Christmas time some hundreds of appropriate books are sent to the children's hospitals in most of the larger cities in the Dominion. Much more in this connection should be done, and the society looks forward to increased interest and assistance from the schools and general public to make this possible. The organization is one of the oldest in Canada, having been established in 1832. Miss Caroline Davidson, Field Secretary, is at present in our midst and is meeting with good success among the many friends of the work in Peterborough.

BRIEF SESSION IS POSSIBILITY

First Intimation Given in the House of Commons Last Night.

SPIRIT OF COURTESY.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 12 (Canadian Press)—The first intimation of the possibility of a brief session was given in the House of Commons last night by Hon. H. H. Stevens (Conservative, Vancouver Centre) who said: "If we have a response from the ministry, such as we have had during the past few days, I think I can assure them of reasonable co-operation."

Mr. Stevens in the course of a few remarks preliminary to the criticism of a resolution before the House said:

"During the last week I think this House has witnessed a spirit of courtesy and co-operation which in my opinion has been unparalleled during my 17 sessions in Parliament. We have expedited the passing of various measures. I might instance the fact that this afternoon we advanced several important bills for the minister of finance with scarcely any comment ,and I must say that the ministry has been very prompt in making brief statements and explanations. I am exceedingly anxious that we should expedite the business of the session. We have had a couple of years of pretty hard parliamentary duty and I think both country and parliament will be better for a little surcease from bitterness and controversy. I can say on behalf of my colleagues on this side of the house that we have tendered to the house our hearty co-operation."

ALMANAC ISSUED.

Dr. Chase's Handy Book Sent Out To 1,700,000 Homes.

Dr. A. W. Chase's Calendar Almanac for 1927, the latest edition of the cheerful little book, with the "Hang Me Up" sign on its cover, has just been mailed to practically every home in Canada. The total issue is 1,700,000 copies. Those who desire to have a copy are requested to notify the Dr. A. W. Chase Medicine Company, Limited, at the corner of Adelaide and Duncan streets, Toronto.

In the rural sections of Ontario, Dr. Chase's Almanac has practically a hundred per cent. distribution, which means that you will find a copy hung up by a string in the great majority of homes in which it is received. This is partly due to the information it contains, and also to the fact that a great number of people have become accustomed to use the memorandum spaces on the pages to keep records of dates of paying out money, times of planting and harvesting, and other useful items.

The useful little volume contains detailed information with regard to festival and anniversary dates, eclipses, etc., a calendar for each month, recipes for many kinds of foods and beverages, information regarding food values, household hints, with formulas for such things as preserving eggs, and other helps for busy housewives, a table of weights and measures, and much valuable information with regard to treating diseases. Finally, it contains also a number of jokes that serve to lighten the more serious subject matter, and are doubtless read with great interest by both the senior and junior members of the family.

THEATRE

AT THE CAPITOL

"NEW YORK" PACKED WITH PUNCH SCENES

Paramount's Latest Shapes Up as Thrilling Tale of Metropolitan Life.

Imagine the situation in which a young man sits down at a piano and remains there all night composing a love ballad to his sweetheart — not knowing that in a room less than ten feet away lies the body of a friend who has been murdered!

That's one of the punch situations contained in Paramount's latest production, "New York," which arrives at the Capitol Theatre on Monday. Ricardo Cortez is the musician; Lois Wilson, his fiancee; and Estelle Taylor, the victim.

Briefly, the story is that of four Bowery boys who have evinced a "gang spirit" since childhood. All four attain maturity and branch out to make their own way in the world. One becomes a politician, two join a jazz band and the fourth develops into a professional gangster. Then a shadow in the form of a woman comes between them. Miss Taylor finds it hard to hide her love for Cortez, but his mind is enraptured by a society belle. Cortez spurning her, she marries William Powell so that she may stay near his friend.

One night, the girl determines to make a last attempt to win Cortez. She goes to his apartment and telephones her husband. Powell arrives there first and in a jealous tirade shoots her. He sticks the body in a neighboring room—

Sounds thrilling, doesn't it? From what we hear, "New York" shapes up as a great entertainment. Luther Reed directed. Forrest Halsey adapted an original screen story by Barbara Chambers and Beck Gardiner.

Paramount officials are congratulating themselves on a new screen "discovery." The "find" this time is no ingenue from the Follies' chorus but a well known musical comedy star who makes his screen debut in Luther Reed's production, "New York."

He is Richard "Skeets" Gallagher, late of "Rose Marie," "No No Nanette" and "The City Chap." His role in "New York" is that of Buck, piano player in a Bowery "honky-tonk."

"I am convinced that Gallagher has a great future in pictures," Mr. Reed said. "He is a born comedian, and has a fine personality which projects perfectly on the screen."

AT THE GRAND

"ABIE'S IRISH ROSE"

The mere announcement that Anne Nichols' perennial idyl, "Abie's Irish Rose," will be offered to the patrons of the Grand Opera House for an engagment of one performance only, Monday, February 21, at 8.30, will no doubt be welcome news to the theatregoers of Peterborough and vicinity, who have waited for the coming of this wonder play of the age, which has taken the whole country by storm.

"Abie" is justly termed the phenomenon of the speaking stage, for since its premiere, now something nearly six years ago, it has broken all world's records for lengthy runs and financial returns, and established more precedents than any other play ever written, not excepting those of the immortal Bard, since the passing of the Marionette Theatre or Puppet show, a matter of some five hundred years back.

Originally produced in Los Angeles, California, in 1920, where it ran in one theatre 42 weeks, it has since played 32 weeks consecutively in San Francisco, after which Miss Nichols brought the play East, its premiere in the Metropolis having been on May 22nd, 1922, where it is still playing to uniformly large business at the Republic Theatre.

Since then, the celebrated author-producer has had five other companies playing in different parts of the country continuously, the runs being; 58 weeks in Chicago, 32 weeks in Boston, 26 weeks in Pittsburgh, 28 weeks in Cleveland, 26 weeks in Detroit, 17 weeks in Cincinnati, 17 weeks in Toronto, Ont., Canada, 15 weeks in St. Louis 14 weeks in Kansas City, 14 weeks in Columbus, 11 weeks in Buffalo, 10 weeks in Montreal, 8 weeks in Rochester, 6 weeks in Syracuse, 7 weeks in Atlantic City, 8 weeks in Birmingham, 5 weeks in Providence, 4 weeks in Utica, 4 weeks in Scranton, 3 weeks in Hartford, and to say nothing of the numerous places in which it has been played three nights or a week.

The sale of seats will open at the box office on Friday, Feb. 18th at 10 o'clock. Mail orders now.

HILARITY THE RULE IN EVERY SCENE OF "THE NERVOUS WRECK"

Laughs in New Christie Comedy Supplied By Four Noted Screen Comedians—Film Packed With Thrills.

Hilarity distinguishes "The Nervous Wreck," Al Christie's latest laugh special featuring Harrison Ford, Phyllis Haver, Chester Conklin, Mack Swain and Hobart Bosworth, which will be on view at the Regent theatre next Monday.

Mr. Ford, well known romantic leading man, proved himself a fine comedian by his performance in "Up in Mabel's Room." This was one of Ford's first opportunities at comedy, and it is said it offered him only a small part of the comedy possibilities contained in the title role offf "The Nervous Wreck."

Phyllis Haver, a graduate from the Sennett comedy school, is one of the brightest feminine lights in the feature comedy field, and the names of Chester Conklin and Mack Swain are synonymous with laughter.

Scott Sidney, director of "The Nervous Wreck" has directed practically all of the Christie feature comedy hits, including "Charlie's Aunt," and the scenarist for "The Nervous Wreck," F. McGrew Willis, has likewise written the scrips for such Christie features as "Up in Mabel's Room" and "Charley's Aunt."

PLEASANT CONCERT GIVEN AT APSLEY

Ladies Raise Substantial Sum for Red Cross Hospital.

APSLEY, Feb. 12.—A charming evening's entertainment was staged at St. George's Institute on Saturday evening by the Ladies' Committee of the Red Cross Outpost, in aid of the Purchase Fund, and was well attended, proceeds amounting to $18.50. The chief feature of the programme was a talk on Bermuda by Mrs. Barnes, who is well remembered here as Miss Myrtle McFadden, whose parental home is near Apsley, but who has for a number of years resided in Bermuda. Reeve D. Brown was chairman for the occasion. Mrs. Barnes held the interest of the audience while she told in entertaining style of the outstanding features of her adopted country and convinced her hearers that Bermuda, except for the high cost of living, is a most desireable place to live in. The following interesting facts were gathered from her address: Bermuda has a population of about 24,000 of whom about two thirds are colored, and from the number of places of worship should be highly moral, there being eleven each of Anglican and Methodist churches, two Presbyterian, besides Baptist, Roman Catholic, Salvation Army, Seventh Day Adventists and Pentecostals.

Although "dry" in one sense, there being no wells, and the only drinking water being obtained from rain water, the open bar is in operation and the hotels do a big trade. Referring to the H.C.L. the speaker said butter sold at 60 cents a pound, meat about the same (all imported), milk 24 cents per quart, and clothing correspondingly high. There are no railways and no motor cars in Bermuda. There were cars ten years ago, but owing to the number of accidents due to the narrow roads they were abolished. Two freight motor trucks are allowed to operate inside the town limits.

Bermuda is a land of flowers. All the trees bear flowers except the palms while the profusion of roses and lilies cause it to be designated the land of the lily and the rose. The export of Bermuda Easter lilies bulbs is a source of considerable revenue, one grower told the speaker that last year he shipped 100 barrels of bulbs, at a price of 35 cents a bulb. There are no wild animals and no snakes but flies, mosquitoes and ants are a pest. Cricket and football are the chief outdoor sports. A great many ships call at the island for oil and fuel, and it is claimed that Bermuda has the largest floating dry dock in the world. The speaker stressed the point that contrary to general opinion Bermuda is not part of the West Indies. It isa group of islands entirely separated from the rest of the world being 666 miles from New York City and the same distance from Canada as from the West Indies. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Barnes on motion of Mr. Spence, and a pleasant evening concluded with the serving of refreshments by the Ladies' Committee. The following is the full programme:

CAMPBELLFORD HIGH SCHOOL COMMENCEMENT FINE SUCCESS

Diplomas and Prizes Distributed To Outstanding Students.

A CAPACITY CROWD.

Programme Pleasingly Varied—Staff Warmly Complimented.

(Special Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Feb. 12.—The dispersal of Campbellford High School's 1926 graduating class of thirty students, who, a few months ago, were bound together in a temporary fraternity of youth, was sketched briefly by Dr. O. C. Watson, chairman of the Board of Education, at last night's commencement exercises. Twenty-three of them have entered a university, college or normal school, four are in business and three are nurses-in-training. Some of them came from distant homes as far, for example, as Bancroft and Ennismore township, and after a happy association of a few years they have now passed on separating in their individual ways to Queen's University at Kingston, Albert College, Belleville, Toronto University, the Normal School at Peterboro', and others at once assuming the immediate responsibilities they have chosen. And their successors, juniors and seniors both, echoed after them last night the chorus that never lacks for new voices, "We'll Always Love You, Dear Old High."

The High School assembly hall was crowded with an audience that had snapped up the tickets within a few hours on the day they were offered for sale, and their eagerness was rewarded with entertainment as pleasing as they had expected. The presentation of diplomas and prizes was interspersed with choruses, gymnastics, a pageant, entitled, "The Dream of the Months," orchestra selections, and concluded with a two-act comedy, "A Perplexing Situation," smoothly presented by a talented and well-balanced cast. The entire programme was smartly produced and added new laurels to the reputation of the High School and its capable staff under the principalship of Mr. E. H. Greig, B.A.

The "Grads" of 1926.

Dr. Watson paid a warm tribute to the teachers and the students in presenting the graduation diplomas. He also remarked that the graduates of 1926 were crossing the threshold of life, were actually commencing their careers and would put into practice the habits of study and industry which they had acquired during their High School course. He recalled that 90 per cent of the students who wrote their examinations last year had been successful, an accomplishment that has been most gratifying to the Board of Education.

A number of the graduates were unable to return to receive the accolade of their High School, but the list of names on the diplomas was called, perhaps for he last time, as follows: Ward Baker, Leslie Clegg, Jean Craighead, Ruby Mae Emerson, Nettie Luella Forde, Jack Haig, Mildred Heagle, Mable Inkster, Wm. R. Johnston, Emma Massie, Margaret L. Milne, Douglas McComb, Helen McDonald, Garnet McGee, Ferne McCarthy, Gibson McNamara, James Newson, Wilena Nelson, Janet Nelson, Le Roy Newman, Agnes O'Sullivan, Mary A. Peake, Lugo Mae Reynolds, Winnie Saunders, Loretta Sarginson, Gladys M. Spencer, Reginald J. Townsend, Hilda Thomson, Everett Thomas, Robert J. Young.

The Scholarships.

Mr. George O'Sullivan presented the Board of Education scholarships to the students of the lower forms who scored the highest marks at the midsummer examinations. The first prize was a cheque for $15 and the second, $10, offered, Mr. O'Sullivan said, to encourage a friendly and studious rivalry in those classes. The winners were: I to II form—1st, Lawrence Marriott; 2nd, Muriel Thomson; II to III form—1st, Irene Dunk; 2nd, Dorothy Longmuir.

Mrs. R. Weston presented the I. O. D. E. scholarships as follows: British history, Ferne McCarthy; English, Helen Breckenridge; French, Cherrie Turner.

The medal given by Dr. S. A. Peake of St. Louis to the pupil standing highest in the Middle school was won by Margery Ackerman; and the Mabel Hay prize to the pupil in the Upper school with the highest marks, who goes to Normal, was won by Helen McDonald.

Dr. H. B. Longmore presented thes prizes.

Field Day Trophies.

Dr. H. O. Richardson distributed the Field Day silver cups as follows:

Senior girls' championship — Mary Phillips.
Junior girls' championship — Marion Clapper.
The F. J. Smith cup to the champion senior boy—Thornton Ibey.
Intermediate boys' championship — Roy Barnum.
Junior boys' championship — Stuart Anderson.

The Cadet Medals.

Dr. Richardson also presented the Strathcona Trust gold medal for the best shot in the school to Cadet Garnet McGee; and the medal for the best dressed cadet at the annual inspection, donated by E. H. Greig and E. Stephens, was awarded to Jack Bygott, Jr.

The boys who took part in the gymnastics were: Tumbling—W. Brennan, A. Phillips, E. Bush, R. Poulton, Ivan Whalen, G. Smith; and on the bars—E. Blute, E. Darling, C. Irwin, D. Kidd and A. Little.

A Young Houdini.

The mantle of the late Harry Houdini may not have fallen upon Staunton Archer but his illusive tricks were cleverly performed, mystifying the audience with disappearing balls and flags and finally freeing himself from a bag into which he had been tied. He was assisted by E. Douglas in diverting comedy repartee.

The chorus of boys and girls deserved a word of commendation, the precision of their singing being a special feature. Their numbers included "Alouette," the French song that rings in Parliament when the Quebec members give voice to an exuberant mood.

"The Dream of the Months."

The pageant was a pretty personification of the months, the pages of the calendar vivified in their chief features and events, appearing to little Betty and Billy under the magic of the Sandman. The characters in the order of their appearance were as follows:

Sandman—Roy Barnum.
Betty and Billy—Ivy Ray and Gerald Cochrane.
Usher—Tom Lazier.
January—Dolmas Montgomery.
Jack Frost—Lester Henson.
Snow—Elsie Connor.
February—Irving Clemens.
Valentines—Hyacinthe Collinson, Jessie Graham, Helen Lynch, Effie Burleigh.
March—Gerald Coveney.
March Hare—Bernard Crosson.
Paddy and Wife—Bernard Blute and Kathleen Crosson.
April Fool—Stuart Anderson.
Easter Angel—Marion Comrie.
May—Mary Fowlds.
May Girls—Monica Blute, Enid Richardson, Lucille Abar, Georgina Clark.
June Bride and Groom — Marjorie Booth and Gerald Bailey.
July—Katharine Irwin.
Scouts—James Bush, Lawrence Marriott, Basil Linton, Ralph Sperry.
August—Frances Jones.
September—Clyta Abernethy.
School Boy—Maynard Watson.
October—Jean Nelson.
Goblins—Leo O'Connor, Lorne Scott, Willie Craighead, Donald Myers.
November—Howard Davidson and Marion Haig.
Holly—Grace Irwin.
Mistletoe—Emma Allen.
December—Grant Thain.

Of this galaxy of youth and beauty the most appealing was perhaps the charming childishness of Ivy Ray and Gerald Cochrane as Betty and Billy.

The Household Comedy.

The play entitled "A Perplexing Situation," was a comedy based on a stingy man's wager with the women folks of his house that they could not keep silent for one day.

The consequent complications convulsed the audience. The students handled their roles with pleasing freshness and without the semblance of a hitch. Incidentally the goddess that apportions pulchritude to mortals obviously favored the Middleton women and their niece. And Percy Honey as "Uncle Ep" provided a perfect foil to the winsome Middletons, their friends and neighbors.

Cast of Characters'

Mr. Middleton—Sho is inclined to be miserly, Stuart Carr.
Mrs. Middleton—His patient wife, Margery Ackerman.
Tom Middleton—His son, Sam Peake.
Jessie Middleton — His eldest daughter, Irene Dunk.
Sue Middleton—His second daughter, Thelma Hall.
Lucy Fair—A niece, Irene Stephens.
Maud—A friend, Bernice Farrell.
Mrs. Nosie—A neighbor, Reta Palliser.
Alex. Wilson—Jessie's young man, Jack McAvoy.
Mary—The Irish servant, Rosina Clark.
Fritz—The man-of-all-work, Jack Bygott.
Uncle Epitumas, Percy Honey.
Health Officer, Kenneth Godden.

Commencement night ended with a dance for the students and their friends. Last night's attendance included a number of visitors from the country and also from Hastings.

The High School staff who merited so much congratulation for this new success is composed as follows:

E. H. Greig, B.A., Principal and Teacher of Science.
Miss K. O'Shaughnessy, B.A., Teacher of Moderns.
Miss K. Ferris, B.A., Teacher of English.
E. Stephens, B.A., Teacher of Mathematics.
Miss L. Stafford, B.A., Teacher of Classics.
Miss M. Wheadon, B.A., Teacher of Commercial Work.

NO carbon troubles . . . No valve grinding . . . Lower upkeep cost . . . No periodic lay-ups . . . 4 great advantages . . . The Willys-Knight sleeve-valve engine ensures them all!

The sleeve-valve motor of the Willys-Knight is an exclusive feature which other manufacturers would pay millions to get . . . but it is protected by patent.

Instead of gradually losing in power and efficiency, in smoothness and silence, as do all cars of poppet-valve design, the sleeve-valve-engined Willys-Knight actually improves with use. It grows quieter, more powerful and more efficient with every mile.

And now—Belflex Shackles—still another new and exclusive Willys-Knight feature—Belflex eliminate the metal shackles and provide that the sprung parts of the car are insulated from the unsprung parts with a noiseless, flexible fabric—shock absorbing, rubberized—thereby giving permanent chassis silence and diminishing wear at every point of the car.

FARM NEWS AND PROBLEMS

MANY SCIENTIFIC ACHIEVEMENTS IN RECORD OF DAIRY INDUSTRY

Cream Separator Practically Revolutionized the Creamery Business.

BABCOCK TEST.

Many Questions Remain To Be Answered in Dairy Research.

"This is an age of science. The nation that neglects scientific research, that does not stand prepared to take advantage of the opportunities which science holds out for it, is simply inviting its own loss and stagnation." The foregoing quotation was given by Prof. H. H. Dean, Professor of Dairying at Guelph, at the annual convention of Western Ontario Dairymen at London.

Continuing, he stated that practically all large manufacturers have a laboratory where scientific tests are applied to the various processes carried on in the factory. The paper manufacturers of Canada employ a large number of well trained scientific workers to enable them to increase production at lower costs, and are gradually gaining control of the paper industry of North America. The Canadian salt companies have laboratories where skilled chemists are employed to give direction to salt makers, so that improved salt may be obtained for table use and for the manufacture of Canadian cheese and butter, and as a consequence we now have no need to go outside Canada to purchase the finest salt made anywhere.

The dairy industry has to its credit a number of scientific achievements among which may be mentioned: the cream separator—one of the most wonderful machines ever built, and one which has practically revolutionized the creamery industry; the Babcock tester for milk and cream fat determinations, a long step in advance over previous methods of ascertaining relative values in raw material for dairy manufacturing; the modern pasteurizer for milk and cream that enables the milk-dealer to deliver a safe food to his customers and the butter manufacturer to improve the quality of his goods, not only when fresh, but also after storing for six months; mechanical refrigeration that has placed the dairy business at the very front of modern manufacturers; the condensing and drying of milk that has enabled dairymen to place their products in all parts of the world, thus spreading the benefits of milk to people in lands who otherwise would never have known of the life-giving and life-sustaining properties of milk, and so on with an almost endless list of benefits derived by dairymen from scientific investigation and research.

Work Not Completed.

But the work is not completed. It is still true that "Hills peep o'er hills and Alps on Alps arise" in the world of dairy investigation and research. Briefly, some of the lines of research needing the attention of investigators are:

1. The scientific application of cultures, commonly called "starters" in the preparation of milk drinks. Do these have the wonderful effects claimed for them, or is it a fad? In the manufacture of butter and cheese, do we know all there is to be known about cultures and their application to butter and cheesemaking? Have Ontario butter makers made a mistake in abandoning the practice of cream ripening? Would a combination of cultures give better results than a more or less pure lactic organism?

2. What is the best "neutralizer" for sour cream? Some use lime, some soda compounds, some a mixture of these two and some use none at all. Which is right? All this affects the quality of Ontario butter, and tends to lack of uniformity in the product made by creamery butter manufacturers. Is it not time that we ascertained the best? Then all buttermakers should use similar neutralizers until the time comes when all cream delivered at creameries shall be sweet, when neutralizing will be a thing of the past.

Pasteurization temperatures are varied. This, too, needs standardizing, which can be brought about only as the result of investigations covering a wide variety of kinds of cream under many conditions.

3. One of the greatest fields for investigations is that of drying the by-products of dairy manufacturers—skim-milk, buttermilk and whey. Little is known in Canada regarding the science of this growing industry. It is altogether likely that when we understand the drying of dairy by-products and are able to secure a market for them, there will be as much money made from the sale of by-products as is now got for the whole milk used in manufacturing. Skim-milk and buttermilk contain some of the most valuable food constituents known, yet these are largely wasted. When fed to animals not more than ten to twenty-five per cent of the human food value is recovered.

4. One other phase may be mentioned, that of flavor in dairy products. Who can describe what flavor is? Yet it is the subtle quality which largely gives value to foods for human consumption. One authority says that flavor is the result of a definite chemical compound, or of two or more compounds. A few of the objectionable flavors have been isolated such as ammonia in old cheese and butyric acid in rancid butter, but of the good flavors we know very little. Is it possible to analyse these, find their sources and how to conserve them? The man or woman who can do this will have conferred a great benefit on the dairy industry.

The National Creamery Buttermakers' Association in the U.S. at their annual meeting held recently, passed a resolution which "approved the operation and establishment of college creameries for research work and the training of extension workers, inspectors and technical advisers."

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

PROTEIN PROBLEMS.

Farmer May Increase Protein Fed To Cows in Three Ways.

The dairyman has at least three ways of increasing the quantity of protein fed to his cows: First, by using high-protein concentrates; second, by using leguminous roughage; and third, by feeding relatively large quantities of concentrates and leguminous dry forage and at the same time feeding relatively less of silage and other non-leguminous dry forage. The amount of protein necessary in the ration of a cow, however, depends on a number of factors; among which are the quantity and quality of the protein used in the roughage fed, the kinds of concentrates used, the stage of lactation of the cow, the prices of roughages, concentrates and the price of milk; and the general care of the animal, such as stabling, watering and feeding practice. Of 25 New York State farmers feeding concentrates with less than 12 per cent of protein, only one had an average production of more than 6,000 pounds, while of the 36 farmers who fed concentrates with 17 per cent or more of protein, there were 15 who had an average production per cow of 6,000 pounds of milk or more. Not only is the average production less with low-protein concentrates, but the possibility of good production is more limited by their use.

POTATO PRODUCTION SHOWS BIG INCREASE

But Crop Was Greatly Below Average For Term of Years.

Potato production for the present season in the Dominion is about two million hundredweights above that of last year but still six millions below the average over a term of years. It is not surprising therefore that prices are holding steady and there is little anxiety over getting the crop to market in time. Over the international boundary the crop has been short though the demand from that quarter will not be so insistent as last season. With an expanding acreage of early potatoes in the southern states the scarcity will be relieved in the course of five months or so. Equipped with hardy grown seed from the Northern States and Eastern Canada, the acreage in the Southern Atlantic coast region is increasing, with the result that the new season crop becomes a factor in May and June, instead of late in July, which was the case when this country had to depend on local supplies only. Across the water, however, conditions are rather serious. In every poor home in Europe the potato is a staple food, and in times of industrial distress, such as many countries are experiencing at present, this vegetable forms almost the sole diet. The International Institute of Agriculture reports an expected yield of 1,780,000 centals for Europe, exclusive of Soviet Russia. This is about 25 per cent below last year, and close to ten per cent below the 1920-24 average, and 15 per cent below the pre-war average. In practically all cases mentioned there was no material difference in the acreage in the two year under review, the difference in size of crops being caused altogether by the weather. Potatoes are a bulky and perishable product and for that reason could only be moved with difficulty in the old days when there might be a farmer in one district and an abundance of potatoes a few hundred miles away. Even yet it is extremely doubtful whether they would be moved across the Atlantic unless the crop was plentiful and therefore cheap on one side and very scarce on the other.

Voice Of The People.

THE SOIL—OUR GREATEST FUNDAMENTAL ASSET

To the Editor, The Examiner.

Dear Sir: Would you kindly allow me to present a few thoughts through your columns that would be of interest to your farmer readers.

Because we lead the world in so many things, we may think that we lead in agriculture. The following table of 10-year averages, however, shows that America is far from being the leading country in yield per acre:

Average Yield Per Acre in Bushels.

	England	Germany	America
Wheat	32.6	28.4	13.9
Oats	44.7	49.3	29.8
Rye	26.7	24.6	15.8
Potatoes	230.0	224.0	96.0

What is the reason for these higher crop yields in the old countries? Ours has been comparatively virgin soil, while they have been farming their land centuries longer than we have—yet their production practically doubles ours.

Quite true, while we don't stand first in yields per acre, we do excel all other countries in soil exhaustion. Gone are the rich virgin soils of our forefathers, but, present in increasing numbers are the abandoned acres, the soil too poor to return even the seed. These facts place the responsibility upon the shoulders of every American farmer, and so the main thought I wish to focus the attention of the farmer is better soil management. We seem to know little or nothing about our soil, and yet the human race is entirely dependent upon it for its greatest needs. We must therefore give serious consideration to this, our national problem for soil depletion cannot continue much longer.

The purpose of my thought is not so much to tell people exactly how to enrich the soil as it is to rightly direct their thoughts and investigations that they may help themselves to solve the soil problem.

A farmer becomes a soil robber when he does not each year put back into the soil more organic matter than he farmed out of it.

Soil is as jealous as a lover. Neglect or mistreat it and its bounty is withdrawn. Caress and feed it, and it yields a hundredfold. Thanking you, I remain, yours, &c.

—W. H. Merrell.

BUSY SEED TESTING.

Dominion Laboratories Are Being Rushed These Days.

Fine seed-testing laboratories are maintained by the seed branch of the Dominion department of agriculture. Two of these are in the west at Calgary and Winnipeg, and three are located in the east, at Ottawa, Quebec and Toronto.

During the year ending March 31, 1926, a total of 66,457 samples of seeds were examined for purity or germination. Toronto led in numbers with 18,911 with Calgary second, 14,110 samples. As explained in the annual report of the minister of agriculture, the western laboratories are doing more germination work than purity work, while the contrary is the case with the eastern laboratories. The importance of seed-testing work in Western Canada is particularly apparent in years with early frosts when the germination capacity of cereals grains is often greatly impaired.

BEST BREEDERS ADVISE AGAINST CROSSING HERDS

Scrub Cow of Present Day is Result of Indiscriminate Crossing.

BETTER BULLS.

Improvement of Herd By Selection is Fundamental Principle To Success.

By G. W. Muir
Assistant Dominion Animal Husbandman, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

One of the questions we receive as often as any other is: "Would you advise crossing this and that breed?"—and invariably the answer is "No!" The best breeders of three continents have spent years of time and mints of money in the improvement of the breeds we have to-day, and why should we undo their work? The scrub cows of the present day are, in effect, the result of indiscriminate crossing, and I am sure you will agree with me that we have a sufficiency now without creating more.

The safest, surest and sanest way of improving the dairy herd is by the grading up process through the use of better bulls of the same breed, for generation after generation. This applies equally well whether breeding pure-breds or grades. I use the term "better" bulls advisedly, for if improvement of the herd is to continue, each successive bull must not only be good, but he must be better than the last. This is a fundamental principle of improvement by selection, and is the reason why greater care must be exercised in the selection of a herd sire for an already highly improved herd than is the case when selecting a herd sire for use on a scrub herd, though even in the latter case, the better the sire, the more rapid the improvement.

A feature of dairy herd management often forcibly brought to our attention is the indifference displayed in the selection of the herd sire. Fortunately, this condition is passing fairly quickly, but you may still go into many barnyards and on inquiry the owner is unable to give you the breeding, much less the records of production, back of his herd sire, largely because he can lay claim to neither. In other words, he has a cross-bred, grade or scrub pure-bred sire, any one of which will ruin any herd. Such a condition is pitiful enough where the results affect only the immediate owner, but it amounts to a crime against the public when, as is often the case, the owner poses as a breeder and sells his surplus stock to his unsuspecting neighbors.

There was a time when there was some excuse for such conditions, but with the advent of the Canadian Record of Performance for pure-bred dairy cattle and the Advanced Registration of pure-bred dairy bulls, the latter being based on a combination of type in the individual and production in the ancestry, there is no longer any excuse. These two agencies will, in my opinion, work wonders in the improvement of our dairy cattle. Where formerly pure breeding was the only guaranteed factor when purchasing a pure-bred dairy bull, now, as a result of these agencies, the prospective buyer can demand and get pure breeding and milk record backing, plus a fair degree (at least a seventy-five per cent score) of breed type; and the beauty of it is that so long as he insists on both the pedigree certificate and the Advanced Registration certificate accompanying the animal, he can safely buy by mail, for he is secure in the knowledge that the animal has been passed upon by a fully qualified, disinterested inspector. As the animal must be at least eight months of age before he can be inspected, the purchaser has the additional satisfaction of knowing that the animal has got over the critical as well as expensive stage in his development and will soon be ready for service, so that, even though such a bull may cost him more in the first instance, he is sure to prove the cheapest in the long run. Our advice, therefore, is to improve your herds by the use of "better" bulls, and insure getting better bulls by insisting on Advanced Registry bulls.

HATCHING EGGS

Eggs for the incubators will be gathered soon. For breeding stock select the best hens and cockerels in the flock. "Like begets like" in poultry just as it does in other livestock. Eggs from strong, healthy hens will incubate better and produce more healthy chicks.

AMERICAN CATTLE OWNERS REQUEST PROHIBITIVE DUTY

Embargo on All Butter and Milk Imported Into United States.

BEING SOUGHT.

Higher Tariff of Protection on Meats Also Requested.

American dairymen are working for an embargo on all milk and cream imported into the United States, and dairymen of this country are watching with interest the developments in the case, which has now reached the officials of the country.

The Lenroot-Taber milk and cream bill will seriously curtail shipments of milk to the States it is believed, but it is also thought that the protests from New York, Boston and other large American cities will prevent drastic action. The dairymen want the American market exclusively and they have been fighting for some time to get entire possession of the home trade. On the other hand, there has been opposition from some of the large consuming areas, and it is fortunate for Canadian shippers that there has been, for it is not likely that the lawmakers would have hesitated to grant the requests of the American dairymen had these objections not been presented.

High Tariffs.

During the debate on the bill it was brought out that the dairymen are asking for a duty of 50 per cent. on all milk and cream imported by the States. If such a regulation is adopted it will shut the door to Canadian products. The American cattle owners are looking after their own interests in the matter.

It is interesting to note the demands being advanced by the agriculturists of the States. For many years the producers here have been agitating for protection, especially the fruit and vegetable growers of the Niagara peninsula. The demands of the Americans show that the little assistance which the Canadian land owners ask is not unreasonable.

Meats, Too.

Since the first of January no importations of fresh meat have been allowed to enter the U.S.A. from countries where foot-and-mouth disease prevails. As the ban includes chilled meat from the Argentine, this cuts off most of the outside sources of meat for U.S. consumers except Canada. Commenting upon this fact, the Producer, published by the United States National Live Stock association, apparently almost regrets that Canada cannot be placed in this category, for it says: "Canada, however, does not come under this ban, and cannot very well be brought under it, being singularly free from contagious live stock diseases." The Producer does, however, propose to bar Canadian beef through the tariff, as it joins with the three beef cattle breeders' associations of the United States which in December passed a resolution asking the president to "exercise his discretionary powers, under the Tariff act, to increase the import duty on beef 50 per cent." This would mean a duty of 4½ cents a pound compared to the present duty of 3 cents. To make the wall entirely "meat proof," they also ask that the duty be raised on canned and cured meats, which at present is about two cents a pound. Figures of imports for the last year are given as 9,975,000 pounds of fresh meat, 9,156,000 pounds of which came from Canada. If the U.S. cattle breeders have their way they will take about twenty-nine million pounds of imported meats off their home market.

GREY COUNTY LEADS IN WOOL SHIPMENTS

More Sheep Are Found in Northern Ontario and Corn Borer Belt.

Grey again leads all Ontario counties in co-operative wool shipments for the year just closed, with Simcoe in second place, followed by York, Peel, Haldimand and Ontario. In 1925 the same County was at the top, but York was in second place, being less than a couple of hundred pounds ahead of Simcoe. The year previous to that saw Simcoe in first place, being followed by Grey, Wellington, Ontario and York.

Judging by the figures, which have just been compiled by the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers, there ha been a remarkable expansion in sheep breeding in many Ontario counties during the past few years. Grey alone increased wool shipments from 44,127 pounds in 1925, to 49,555 in 1926, at the same time reporting an increase of 19 shippers. Simcoe and York did almost as well, while Peel showed the remarkable gain of over 20 per cent in a single season having shipped 29,250 pounds in 1925, against 36,200 in 1926.

Hastings County comes seventh, with 18,612 pounds of wool shipped in 1926, an increase of 3000 pounds over 1925. Durham is twentieth, with 16,388 pounds for 1926, an increase of 1000 pounds over 1925.

Victoria County twenty-third, with 14,490 in 1926, an increase of 4000 pounds over 1925. Peterborough County twenty-fourth with 12,710, a decrease of 500 pounds over 1925, and Northumberland County twenty-eighth 9,935, a decrease of 700 pounds over 1925.

There is a very gratifying increase in shipments from the newer districts of the Province where agricultural authorities predict an enormous sheep population in the near future. In the Rainy River section, where Agricultural Representative J. A. Garner reports the importation of four cars of breeding ewes last fall, shipments now total almost 10,000 pounds against less than 3,500 two years ago, and Temiskaming, Haliburton, Muskoka, Parry Sound, Manitoulin, Hastings, Victoria, Algoma and Nipissing all report very substantial growth in the past few years.

Apparently, too, the sheep is playing a part in the readjustment of agriculture in southwestern Ontario following the wholesale spread of the corn borer. Evidently farmers on the high-priced land of Essex and Kent, and adjacent counties, find that wool and lamb make profitable side lines, as both these counties report remarkable increases in wool shipments since 1924, Essex contributing 80 per cent more to the Ontario pool last season than two years ago.

SHEEP INDUSTRY ENTERS NEW ERA

Flocks Are Found Upon a Thousand Farms in Southern Alberta.

SALES INCREASE.

The sheep industry in Southern Alberta is undergoing a radical change. The time was that the only sheep to be found in the country were attached to the big range outfits, except for the odd farmer here and there. Today that condition has changed, and on scores of farms in Southern Alberta, one will find small flocks running all the way from 25 to 300 head. It looks like the transitional period, that passage from the era of the great range band to the era of the small band on the mixed farm.

The Southern Alberta Sheep Breeders' Association now counts its members by hundreds. It has some 350 all told about sixty, 5 years ago. And all of them ship some wool. Southern Alberta alone consigned upwards of 1,750,000 pounds of wool to the big Canadian "pool," the Canadian Co-operative at Toronto, this year, and private sales to dealers probably boosted that amount to 2,000,000 pounds. This is a good-sized clip, although in comparison with the State of Utah, for instance, with a much more restricted sheep area, it is small indeed, for Utah sells around 15,000,000 pounds of wool annually. Utah has more sheep than the whole of Canada which, in 1924, had slightly more than 2,600,000 head. Alberta should have 3,000,000 sheep itself; it could support such a sheep population. The value of Canada's wool crop the same year was $3,771,000.00. Thus it will be seen what broad possibilities the sheep industry holds.

With irrigation extending in the south, more feed and roughage are being grown, and this is leading many irrigation farmers to buy breeding ewes as a foundation for permanent flocks. Dry land farmers are also adding sheep, for they find that sheep keep their farms clean. In southeastern Alberta, those farmers who intend to stick with their holdings are gradually putting sheep on their lands, believing that sheep are likely to prove the salvation of the drought area. Sweet clover is being planted extensively for both pasture and stacked feed. It will thrive, experience shows, in the dry areas where the rainfall is extremely light, and this crop with green grain and corn that can be grown, even if not matured, ought to supply the farmer-rancher operating a section or more with abundant feed for sheep and cattle.

But the marked trend in sheep-raising in Southern Alberta today is toward the small farm flock. There are Southern Alberta ranchers who are raising some of the best rams in America, a fact recognized this fall, when both rams and breeding ewes from this Province were secured for placement on the Government experimental farms in British Columbia. The lamb feeding industry is also increasing with a new feed now available in limited quantities—sugar beet pulp. With the expansion of the sugar industry, this lucrative branch of the sheep industry is bound to thrive.

RABBIT DRIVES

Preparations are being made at Taber, Alta., for rabbit drives under the auspices of the local branch of the U. F. A. Last winter a drive was held over the territory between Medicine Hat and Taber. The work is being taken up this winter where the former campaign left off. Meantime, however, many coyotes have been hunted down in the southeast, while the jacks are to be found in droves said to be as high as a thousand in each.

JEWISH FARMERS

Eight out of the fourteen Jewish farm colonies established in Canada are located in Saskatchewan, at Wapella, Hirsch, Lipton, Cupar, Tribune, Edenbridge, Eyre and Gravelbourg. Saskatchewan has a bigger proportion of farmers among its Jewish population than any province or State in the world, with nearly 1,500 permanently settled on farms out of a total Jewish population of 5,400. In 1925 they marketed approximately 500,000 bushels of wheat.

Canadians last year consumed 256,248,609 pounds of butter, or an average of 27.36 pounds per capita. Canada thus ranks among the highest butter consuming countries of the world.

First Haying Of Season Recorded In Welland County

An unseasonable performance was witnessed in Stamford Township, Welland County, when a farmer made hay. Because of the unseasonable weather of last Fall, a farmer could not cut a crop of lucerne. It being a bright, sunny day, he ran the mower across the field and will gather it at the first opportunity. Last Fall this farmer lost ten acres of valuable hay on account of the wet weather.

Cost is an important factor in the matter of rations for dairy animals. The successful dairyman figures his costs carefully and feeds the best balanced ration that can be prepared most economically.

IMPROVEMENT SHOWN IN LIVE STOCK CLASSES

Pure-bred Horses Have Increased 50 Per Cent. in Past Ten Years.

PRIZES PRESENTED.

Minister Says Past Season Was Disappointing To Ontario Agriculturists.

TORONTO.—In the last ten years purebred horses have increased fifty per cent and purebred cattle a hundred and fifty per cent, said Hon. John S. Martin, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, at the dinner held recently of Canadian National Exhibition to Ontario livestock breeders, here for their annual conventions. Value of Canadian livestock is $750,000,000 and of this Ontario owns one third. Like improvement, said Mr. Martin, was shown in sheep and hogs, United States exhibitors coming to Ontario for their winning animals. Two of the most successful Ontario hog breeders were at the dinner beside him, the Lieutenant Governor, Hon. W. D. Ross, who goes in for Tamworths, and Premier Ferguson, who breeds Yorkshires. It was gratifying to note that Canadian bacon had never stood higher in the British market and was rapidly equalling the best.

Ontario agriculturists had had a disappointing season, Mr. Martin pointed out. Rain starting on August 1 had not let up till December 1 when it froze up, with the result that in Western Ontario much crop went ungarnered, little winter wheat was sown and farmers were behind with their plowing. In Eastern Ontario conditions were better, and winter wheat had been a good catch.

John J. Dixon, president of the Canadian National Exhibition, presided, and a popular feature of the evening was the presentation of the Toronto girls' track relay team, world champions, one of whose members held the world records for girls at 100 and 200 yards.

GRAIN MEN DENY HAMPERING POOLS

Wheat Pool Has Failed To Get Best Average Price.

Western grain trade men and elevator operators have issued a statement setting forth their attitude towards the wheat pool. They say:

"Everyone will agree that the pool system of marketing was an experiment. If this experiment was to be given a thorough test as against the open market system it was necessary at the inception of the pools that the grain trade should place all their facilities at the disposal of the pool executive. This the grain trade willingly di under a contract whereby pool grain was handled as the pool executive desired, and at a remuneration less than it should have been, taking into consideration the capital investment. Pool officials have admitted from time to time that the elevator operators have carried out the terms of their contract in a very satisfactory manner indeed.

"In addition to handling the grain for pool account, the elevator operators financed all pool grain passing through their elevators as well, which was of great assistance to the pools, as at the beginning the pools had neither capital nor reserves.

"Notwithstanding the fact that, largely because of the great practical assistance of the elevator operators, the pool system of marketing has had every opportunity to fully develop itself as against the open market system, the pool system has not succeeded in its main aims and has not been able to secure a return equal to the average price in the open market. Pool theories and declared objects have not been accomplished and are one by one being abandoned by the pool leaders.

"The elevators have not hampered in any way the pool executives in their operations up to date. If the pools have failed to secure average prices, as compared to the open market system, it is fault of the pool system and not of the grain trade."

Not so many years ago there was a much smaller quantity of creamery butter manufactured in Canada than was made at home in the farm dairies. In 1925, however, it was estimated that 100,000,000 pounds was manufactured as farm dairy butter, and that 169,494,967 pounds of creamery butter was manufactured in this country.

POULTRY HOUSES.

Cotton Fronts Are Not Approved For Climate of Northern Countries.

E. R. Gross, professor of agricultural engineering at the New Jersey agricultural station, does not believe that the open-front or cotton front poultry houses are suitable for northern climates. Better results, he says, according to experiments, are obtained where the houses are closed up tight in winter weather, with glass or glass substitute provided. The prime necessity is a warm, dry, pure air, along with plenty of light. The moisture from the hens must be carried out of the house before it has a chance to make the litter damp, and to do this the ventilation must be such as to carry if off quickly.

CANADIANS IN 1926 BOUGHT 160,000 NEW MOTOR CARS

Ontario Leads, With Prairie Provinces Second in Number of Autos.

890,000 REGISTERED.

Basis of Per Capita Expenditure Otulay is Over $12.

Growth of the partial payment plan of purchase and the increasing demand for closed models, were salient features of the automobile industry activities during the past year. The former has been chiefly responsible for the excellent showing made in the past eighteen months and while this method of financing has been criticized as being an artificial stimulation of demand and one which will ultimately react to the disadvantage of the industry, the concensus of opinion among leading men in the industry is that instalment buying, properly controlled, is to be encouraged. A careful check on this method of financing has shown that the percentage of loss due to non-fulfilment of contract to have been exceedingly small, amounting to less than one per cent of the total transacted business.

The growing public appreciation of the superiority of the closed-model car has made it a best seller. It is particularly suitable to the Canadian climate, more so than the open type, which often is put in storage for several months of the year. Production of this model has been greatly increased in order to cope with the demand and during the past year, manufacture of this type was in excess of any other make.

Furthermore, rapid development of surfaced highways has resulted in stimulating the use of automobiles, both for pleasure and business. The Dominion government has been active in fostering the construction of additional highways and surfacing, existing gravel and dirt roads. In this connection both the Dominion and provincial highway departments have spent several millions of dollars and plans have been drawn up for additional work to be carried out during the next year or so.

Industry Ranks High.

In comparison with other industries, the manufacture of automobiles ranks fifth or sixth in importance from the standpoint of value of production. At present there are eleven plants in operation, in which the capital invested amounts to nearly $75,000,000. These plants give employment to over 10,000 workers, to whom salaries and wages are paid totalling $17,000,000. Moreover, there are a number of activities associated with the industry, such as the manufacture of accessories, dealers, garages, etc., which lend added importance to this phase of industrial operations.

During the past year, a new high production record for all time was established. While a normal increase over the preceding year was to be expected in view of the more prosperous conditions in the country and consequent increase in buying power of the individual, results achieved were better than anticipated. In the eleven months ended November last, cumulative production of motor vehicles totalled 197,364, as compared with an output of 161,970 units for the whole of the preceding year. The value of cars made based on selling price, f.o.b. plant, was $120,008,584, as against $98,532, 591,the final figures for 1925. Production figures for December, as yet unavailable, will further increase the difference both in quantity and value over the previous high mark.

Spent $115,000,000 on Autos.

It is estimated that of the total production for the past year, approximately 160,000 were marketed in Canada. This means that Canadians spent on automobiles last year about $115,000,000. On the basis of per capita expenditure, the outlay in this connection was over $12. It is doubtful if there is any other country in the world which spent so much per head of population on automobiles.

Registrations Total 890,000.

By adding the number of cars in use at the end of 1925 to the apparent consumption for 1926, after allowing for cars withdrawn from service, it is estimated that the number of automobile registrations in Canada at the end of last year totalled 890,000. Ontario had the greatest density of motor vehicles per 100 of population during 1925. The Western Provinces show a much greater density than Quebec and the Maritime provinces, owing to the more general use of automobiles by farmers. The following table shows the registration of motor vehicles in the Dominion, by provinces, at the end of 1925, the latest year for which complete statistics are available:

Canada	723,882
P. E. Island	2,947
Nova Scotia	22,745
New Brunswick	18,863
Quebec	97,418
Ontario	342,390
Manitoba	50,916
Saskatchewan	78,120
Alberta	53,996
British Columbia	56,375
Yukon	112

Saturation Point Distant.

The experience of the motor car industry in the United States would seem to indicate that Canada is still a long way from reaching the saturation point in consumption. Returns of the bureau of statistics show that since 1920, the apparent consumption has steadily increased from year to year. Nearly 80,000 vehicles were marketed in the Dominion in 1920. The number increased to 88,666 in 1923 and again jumped to 102,110 in 1925, while for the past year, as previously mentioned, consumption was about 160,000. Despite this remarkable showing, Canada is still behind the United States in the number of automobiles per 100 population and till such time as ratio approaches that of the other country, there is little likelihood of over-production in the Dominion.

Generally speaking, it will be found most economical to feed all the grain the cow can make use of for the first six months of her lactation period. So long as she will return from three to four pounds of milk for each pound of grain fed, it will be profitable to feed it.

MARL VALUABLE FOR HEAVY CLAY

Corrects Sourness, Promotes Notrification, and Aids Plant Nutrition.

SOURCE OF LIME.

Marl or shell marl is a naturally-occurring deposit consisting essentially of carbonate of lime mixed with varying amounts of clay, sand or other inert material. Deposits of marl are found in nearly all the provinces of Canada, occurring as a rule in beds from a few inches to several feet on old lake bottoms and frequently overlaid by peat or muck. Marl is an important and valuable source of lime for land treatment.

Some marls are almost pure carbonate of lime, others are more or less impure from the presence of clay, sand, organic matter, etc., as already noted and these, of course, are of less value agriculturally. A marl containing from 80 to 90 per cent of carbonate of lime may be considered of good average quality.

Usually, as found, marls are soft and pasty in consistency, frequently showing many small shells. On air-drying by simple exposure they are found to be readily friable breaking down to a coarse powder which easily permit of uniform distribution on the land. It is seldom that the air-dried material will require any preliminary crushing; it therefore constitutes a very cheap and desirable source of lime, as not infrequently marl may be had for the cost of digging and hauling.

"Indurated" marl is a hard rock-like material with a honey-combed structure. It occurs by deposition from the waters of streams and springs which are rich in carbonate of lime. Large deposits of this material occur in many of the valleys of British Columbia and are composed almost entirely of pure carbonate of lime. A certain amount of crushing is necessary before this type of marl can be used satisfactorily as a soil dressing.

Marl may be used on both heavy clay and light sandy loams and is especially valuable for the former. As a supplier of lime it corrects acidity or sourness, furnishes an element for plant nutrition and promotes nitrification and hence assists in rendering available the soil's store of inert nitrogen. Full advantage should be taken of this cheap and satisfactory source of lime, especially where the deposits occur in the neighbourhood of the farm.

Good quality marl may be known by giving a brisk effervescence on the addition of a few drops of strong vinegar or weak acid.

Before exploiting a deposit of marl, an analysis of the material may be desirable and this may be obtained by submitting a representative sample to the Division of Chemistry, Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

NUT TREES MAKE GOOD INVESTMENT

Prove To Be Revenue Producers and Protection To Crops.

The value of a tree depends very much upon its location and also upon the particular use that may be made of it. Trees in a ten acre woodlot or forming a shelter belt along the west or north side of a farm are direct revenue producers, are a protection to crops and add to the attractiveness of the property. Trees in the middle of cultivated fields may prove to be the worst kind of weeds, taking moisture and nourishment from the crops and interfering with the plough. When new plantings are made it is well to keep in mind that the rough knolls and banks of streams are the most suitable places for tree growth. Also that the hard woods and the pines are most likely to prove valuable in the coming years. One of the best to plant is the native walnut, the demand for which has been increasing for the past fifty years. During the war great quantities were bought for making rifle stocks. On the chance that the war would last a year longer, great quantities of this timber were secured, so that when the war suddenly ended, immense stocks were left on hand. Sales of this timber were held up until this stock could be disposed of. Now it is well worked off, and prices are rising. Black walnut is called "one of the two finest cabinet woods in the world," and its use in making furniture seems to be increasing. As a nut, too, the black walnut is popular. It seems safe to say that nuts planted now on waste land, and given reasonable care, would prove an insurance for comparatively young men and a good investment for men of middle age.

OPTIMISM SEEN IN ALL BRANCHES OF CANADA'S TRADE, REPORTS SAY

Bankers' Addresses and Annual Reviews Encourage Feeling.

CAR LOADING UP.

Railways Report Great Increase in All Commodity Classes.

Following are extracts from the business summary issued by the Bank of Montreal:

The year began with tempered optimism in nearly all branches of trade, encouraged and strengthened by the confident note struck in addresses of bankers and in the annual reviews of newspapers. A slowing down of retail business after an active holiday turnover is in the course of things, but the movement of merchandise exceeds that of twelve months ago and of any like period since the collapse of the post-war boom. Car-loadings, which had increased every month in 1926 save September, as compared with a year ago, were larger by 4,957 carloads in the first week in January than in the corresponding week in 1926, and by 8,343 carloads than in 1925. Reflection of better business is found, too, in railway gross earnings in the first two weeks of January. Canadian Pacific Railway Company receipts rising $721,000, and Canadian National Railways $514,000. This gain was spread over all commodity classes. Bank debits tell the same tale, having been nearly 20 per cent. larger in 1926 than in the preceding year. While all provinces participated in the improved state of business, not excepting the Maritimes, British Columbia seems to have been highly favoured, having had large production of minerals, fisheries, pulp and paper and farm products, and extensive building operations.

Building permits authorized by the sixty-three principal cities last month totalled the highest value for December since the records were begun in 1920, $11,472,000, as compared with $7,363,000 in December, 1925. Commodity prices have not undergone other than seasonal fluctuation, the Dominion Bureau index number on December 31st being 150.5, a variation of only one point as compared with November. At the end of December, 1925, the index number was 163.5.

Prospects of prosperity are enhanced by slowly ameliorating conditions in Europe. Despite the handicaps of heavy taxation, serious unemployment, shrinkage of exports, and losses occasioned by the coal strike, business in Britain is picking up and confidence returning; while France, Germany, Belgium and Italy have taken or are taking steps to stabilize currency and put public finances in order. In the United States trade last year reached so high a peak that a breathing spell is not unlikely, although no signs of reaction or disturbing portents have appeared. This situation abroad favours favourable markets for Canadian exports.

Pulp and paper production has moved in to the front rank of Canada's industries. Working in 1926 at 96.9 per cent. of rated capacity, Canadian mills turned out 1,881,737 tons of newsprint, about 205,000 tons more than were produced in the United States and more than double the output of 1921; while consumption was so constant that mill stocks at the end of the year were equivalent to only two days' production. This year additional mills will be in operation, and it is estimated that within twelve months the production capacity of Canadian plants will reach a daily newsprint output of 8,500 tons, as compared with an output at the close of 1926 of 7,300 tons per day. There is, then, some danger of supply overrunning demand, a condition incurable by price cutting, in view of which fact the recently announced conservation policy of the Government of Quebec is of the highest importance. The announcement made in the Speech from the Throne on January 11th was as follows:—

"The success of the pulp and paper industry in Quebec has brought hither the establishment of great mills which made considerable demand on our forest resources. The Government intends to protect these mills by following up actively its policy of safeguarding the forest, replanting, wise exploiting of the new Quebec reserves and the inventory of our forests, an inventory now completed over an extent of eleven millions of acres. At the same time it thinks that before favouring the establishment of additional mills, it would be wise to see that there is an abundant forest reserve for the mills already in existence or the construction of which has been decided upon, except, however, in those new regions where such mills might become the source of unlooked-for activities."

The figures of Canada's foreign trade in December follow the trend of recent months, and while the balance of trade continues favourable to the Dominion, imports are up $4,857,000 and exports down $37,134,000. In the nine months ending December 31st the increase in imports was $81,000,000, and the decrease in exports $46,773,000, compared with the corresponding period in 1925. In a broad way this tendency is ascribable, on the one side, to the fall in the price of wheat and to smaller shipments of that cereal, as well as to diminished exports of animals and dairy produce, and on the other to the improved state of domestic trade, involving expansion of imports.

In the foreign exchange the usual seasonal demand for New York funds carried the rate to 11-64 per cent premium, and resulted in a movement of gold from Canada to New York to the extent of some $20,000,000. Sterling cables, after dropping to 4.85 in the middle of December are firm and have held within the narrow range of 4.85 1-4 to 3-8. Francs appear to be under strict control and have held between 3.97 and 3.98. The Spanish peseta, which is now practically the only currency in Europe upon which speculators can operate, rose sharply after the turn of the year and reached cents 16.33 on January 18th, a rise of over one cent during the past month.

High grade securities have been in excellent demand, and substantial new provincial and municipal loans offered at comparatively high prices in the Canadian and American markets have been well absorbed.

Quebec.—Business, both wholesale and retail, is experiencing the usual seasonal slackness, after a good holiday trade. Manufacturers of men's wear are busy on Spring orders, which are reported to be in fair volume; the larger manufacturers of ladies' wear have had a good year on the whole, but the smaller manufacturers in some instances have had difficulty in disposing of their merchandise. The boot and shoe industry continues to show improvement; the leather business for this time of the year is good and the prices hold firm; the market for domestic hides is stronger. Sugar refineries report business as being fair. Textile mills are operating at capacity. The domestic demand for structural steel and machinery for water-power development is good. Logging operations are proceeding satisfactorily; the lumber market is quiet, and while there appears to be an improved demand for white pine, B. C. fir is still a factor in the eastern market. The demand for pulpwood continues strong, with prices about the same. Shipments of newsprint are going forward in good volume, with prices firm. Cattle are wintering well. The mining camps in the northwest part of the Province are busy on prospecting work, and with the advent of Spring great activity is expected.

Ontario.—Wholesale trade has been fair, while retail merchants report seasonal quietness following the best holiday trade in many years. Industrial production continues on a steady basis and manufacturers are closing their year with confidence. Automobile manufacturers have resumed volume production and are planning for greater output than last year. Iron and steel trades are well employed and boot and shoe manufacturers report continued improvement in demand. Manufacturers of furniture are holding their annual exhibits in different parts of the Province. Tire companies report seasonal decline in sales. The gold mining industry in Northern Ontario is in a prosperous condition. Nearly all producing gold mines have increased production plans under way, and prospects for 1927 as regards tonnage are excellent. Sufficient snow has fallen to make good sleighing and provide protection for pastures and Fall wheat. Cattle are wintering well. Cold weather has prevailed and conditions have been ideal for woods operations.

Prairie Provinces.—Wholesale and retail trade is quiet; stock-taking is general and special sales are being conducted. Collections are fair. Wheat price fluctuations have been within a narrow range since the holidays. Cash wheat on 20th January closed at 136 5-8 as compared with 133 1-8 on 20th ultimo and 148 3-4 on December 20th, 1925. Out of 248,000,000 bushels of wheat inspected to 14th January, 44.4 per cent. graded contract as contrasted with the usual yearly average of about 75 per cent. The estimated value of livestock handled through stockyards at Winnipeg, St. Boniface, Moose Jaw, Edmonton and Calgary during 1926 was $54,871,000, as compared with $52,392,000 in 1925 and $31,445,000 in 1923. Over 1,000,000 acres of land was homesteaded in the four Western Provinces in 1926 against 635,320 acres in 1925. Three oil wells in the Turner Valley field, Alberta, are producing 735 barrels of naptha and 33,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas daily. In 1926 there were in use in the three Prairie Provinces over 218,000 automobiles, an increase over 1925 of 33,000.

British Columbia.—The holiday trade of retail merchants was about the same as last year, while departmental stores enjoyed a satisfactory increase. Wholesalers report business steady. Collections are fairly good. A number of lumber mills have shut down for the annual overhaul customary at this season, resulting in curtailment of production to about 50 per cent.; mills are short of orders, market conditions unsatisfactory, and prices weak. Lumber shipments from all British Columbia ports during 1925 were 43 per cent. greater in volume than those in 1925. Salmon canners expect to dispose of the remaining stocks during the next few months and are preparing for this year's pack; market conditions are reported promising. Herring fishing has been poor. Mineral production for the year exceeded all records. Apples are moving more freely and prices are somewhat firmer. Building permits in Vancouver during December were $408,175, a slight decrease compared with December, 1925. Vancouver bank clearings in 1926 were the largest on record.

Maritime Provinces.—Wholesale business is up to average, with collections slightly better. While the American demand for potatoes continues, shipments are restricted by the scarcity of heated cars. The British apple markets continue strong. Fish is going out fairly satisfactorily. Lumber stocks continue to move slowly, but logging has been carried on under good weather conditions. General manufacturing conditions are satisfactory, especially in textiles and footwear. In the mills at Yarmouth there has been installed what is said to be the largest cotton loom in the world, with a width of 304 inches, fed from 25,000 spools. As coal mining continues at capacity and the Dominion Iron & Steel Company has work in prospect until May, Cape Breton conditions have greatly improved.

HOW TO RELIEVE CHILDREN'S COLDS

Avoid Serious Results By Using Baby's Own Tablets.

When a child shows the first symptoms of a cold, such as sneezing, redness of the eyes, clogged or running nose, prompt measures for relief may avert serious results. Mothers should always have on hand some simple, safe and effective remedy for immediate use.

Baby's Own Tablets act quickly, contain no opiates or narcotics, are tasteless and harmless. Mrs. Joseph Cadieux, Holyoke, Mass., says:—"I have used Baby's Own Tablets for my children and find them a very satisfactory medicine. When my little boy had a cold I gave him the Tablets at night and he was well next day. I give them to the children for constipation and they always do good. I think Baby's Own Tablets are much easier to give a child than liquid medicine. I recommend the Tablets to all mothers who have small children and believe they should always be kept on hand."

Baby's Own Tablets are sold by al medicine dealers or will be sent by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

UNEMPLOYMENT AMONG IMMIGRANTS

Woodsworth Says C. N. R. Agents Guarantee Work and Leave Men Destitute.

OTTAWA Ont., Feb. 12 (Canadian Press. — In the House yesterday J. S. Woodsworth (Labor-Winnipeg, North Centre) complained that there was unemployment among immigrants in Canada.

Agents of the Canadian National Railways he said, had been guaranteeing employment to immigrants to this country. Some of these immigrants were now destitute here.

Hon. Robert Forke, Minister of Immigration, replied that agents of the C.N.R. did undertake to find employment for immigrants which they were bringing out here.

He had heard there was unemployment in certain towns; one of which complaints had come from was Calgary. The nature of the complaint was that a certain number of immigrants had been landed there by the C.N.R. and were now destitute. Enquiries had been made however and employment had been found for the immigrants in question.

The Minister of Labor, continued Mr. Forke, was keeping close check to see that too many immigrants were not brought in.

Furthermore he was convinced that there was less unemployment in Canada to-day than there had been for a number of years past.

50,000 SQUARE MILES MAPPED

Planes Used To Cover Large Amount of Land During 1926.

GREAT GROWTH.

OTTAWA, Feb. 12 (By Canadian Press).—How Canada's aerial surveys have grown from 50 square miles a year to 50,000 square miles a year in the short space of five years, was related at the Dominion Land Surveyors' convention recently by W. A. Fletcher, D.L.S., who presented the report of the aerial Topographic Surveys Committee.

"Just five years ago," he said, "one of your members, A. M. Narraway, now chief aerial surveys engineer, photographed for experimental purposes some fifty square miles of unmapped territory in Northern Saskatchewan. This, the first flight of a surveyor over such territory, marks the beginning of aerial surveys in Canada." Year by year the experiments were extended until during the past year approximately 50,000 square miles were covered by useful aerial photographs. Mr. Fletcher characterized it as "a record which demonstrates clearly the adaptability of Canada's surveyor and the investment which this country has in his years of training and experience in all parts of the country and on all classes of surveying and mapping."

Tribute was paid to the splendid co-operation of the Royal Canadian Air Force. It is to the credit of this force, Mr. Fletcher said, that not a single casualty has occurred during these five years in connection with the photographic operations.

The usefulness of aerial surveys is to be measured in terms of the utility of the photographs themselves and of the maps produced from them in the development of Canada. That the aerial photograph is of great value as a permanent record of the terrain is emphasized, Mr. Fletcher said, by the number of requests received from widely different sources for photographs of the same area and the various uses to which they may be put.

Aerial surveys, Mr. Fletcher said, are intimately connected with the development of the mining industry. The publication of the Red lake map, within a few months of the first discovery, and of subsequent maps of adjoining country, has opened up thousands of square miles to intensive prospecting. The prospector is enabled to carefully and thoroughly cover the country rather than to grope blindly through a maze of unknown waterways.

The report of the Committee indicated just how wide the field for mapping from aerial photograph has grown. It is not being confined to mining districts but has taken in many other areas, land classification and topographical surveys were carried out on air photographs over an area of 1900 square miles north of Edmonton, Alberta, last season; aerial photographs were also used in mapping the rough and hilly districts west of Calgary and in the vicinity of the Turner valley oil field in Alberta; 800 square miles were photographed in Central Saskatchewan to aid in the production of the Battleford sectional map. One of the recent developments is the use of the aerial method for detailed mapping proposed power developments.

The Committee reports that maps in print so far cover The Pas, Manitoba, mineral area, the Red Lake District of Ontario, the Reindeer lake area of Saskatchewan and the Minaki tourist region lying partly in Ontario and partly in Manitoba. Eight of these maps are in course of preparation. In addition during the past summer the Air Force were able to make available for the first time plans and photographic equipment for use in Western Quebec and these planes were successful in obtaining detailed vertical photographs of some 5,650 square miles of territory in the Rouyn field. This represents the largest operation of detailed aerial surveys ever undertaken in Canada.

Seriousness of Problem Worries Manager of Toronto Humane Society.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 12 (By C.P.)—The manager of the Toronto Humane Society, returning from American centres declared that the seriousness of the cat problem was worrying him. RIVER'S SOURCE IS DETERMINED Surveyors Reveal Route of Thelon River In North West.

OTHER ACTIVITIES.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 12 (By Canadian Press).—The myth as to the headwaters of the Thelon river, one of the great rivers of Northern Canada, was one of the geographical mysteries solved by a topographical surveyor during the field season of 1926, according to the report of the topographical Surveys Committee, presented by R. W. Cautley, D.L.S., at the annual convention of Dominion Land Surveyors in session here.

School geographies and even the best of government maps have shown this stream as heading a relatively short distance northeast of Lake Athabaska. Last summer, G. H. Blanchet, D.L.S., made an exploratory trip into the country northeast of the Athabaska, selecting for the first part of his journey a traditional Indian route from Tazin lake to the headwaters of the Thelon river. A river known to the natives as "Skin of an Animal" was ascended to a plateau 1,000 feet above Lake Athabaska where another river was discovered flowing northeast along Hearne's course of the Thelewaze river (supposed to be the Thelon). This river, after flowing one hundred miles in the desired direction, turned southeasterly—instead of northerly—and joined Dubawnt river at Wholdaia lake. Thus the exploration removes the myth of the Thelon headwaters which has persisted for 150 years, since Hearne's time.

Mr. Cautley referred to the "practically unexplored, uninhabited and almost totally unsurveyed" portion of Canada as the larger part of this country, and stressed the need of reliable maps in connection with the development of the wealth of mine and forest in in this great hinterland—development which is always retarded, and in some cases made impossible for want of them. Discovery of the great mining camps of Cobalt (1903), Porcupine (1909), Kirkland lake (1911), Rouyn (1923) and Red lake (1925) waited on and followed railway construction.

Modern Aids Utilized.

Wireless telegraphy and air-flying—the two most amazing developments of modern science—are being utilized by the topographical surveyor in making known this north country—in placing on the maps the maze of rivers and lakes which will make it possible for the prospector to enter the country, and to travel in whatever direction he pleases. Transportation, Mr. Cautley said, is not difficult in Northern Ontario and Quebec, but the lakes are irregular, and deeply indented, and the traveller must know how far it is expedient for him to follow any one particular system of waterways before transferring by portage to another, the existence of which he must also know about.

Aerial photographs used in conjunction with the ground work of the topographical surveyor is providing this information, and Mr. Cautley reported that last summer the Topographical Survey of Canada had four parties engaged on this work in Northern Ontario, and that the Royal Canadian Air Force worked in conjunction with the Survey in taking photographs.

The north country, while literally unknown, and unexploited, is not the only country needing maps, and Mr. Cautley spoke of the situation in the older parts of Canada where information depends on individualistic surveys of all kinds, many of them ancient, not to say obsolete. Through such modern surveys as are being carried out the old information is being correlated and new information gathered, from which national maps are prepared.

In Western Canada, the Dominion Land System of Surveys—a system of surveying land which covers a greater area than any other preconceived method of subdividing land for settlement in any part of the world—provides the basis for mapping, and that adequate mapping of this vast area was conceived at an early date is shown in the naming of the survey organization. The Topographical Survey has lately been able to devote more of its energy to this, one of its original objectives.

Dominion Land Surveyors, Mr. Cautley pointed out, were last season engaged in mapping in twenty-one areas of Canada. These were scattered throughout all the provinces and two parties invaded the northwest territories. The work ranged from the highly detailed map of areas of great economic importance to the exploration work of the North, where in addition to solving the mystery of the headwaters of a river, an investigation was made with a view to showing on a map the feeding resources of the new Wood Buffalo Park.

The growing tourist traffic in Canada was not being overlooked by the map makers, Mr. Cautley pointed out, and three parties were engaged in mapping areas decidedly attractive to tourists. In British Columbia, the photo-topographic system of survey, developed to a high degree of perfection in Canada, was being utilized to portray the relief of mountainous areas, the rivers, creeks and trails which would make the glories of the Selkirk mountains accessible to the tourist. The boundaries of the latest addition to Canada's chain of mountain parks—Kootenay Park—were also delineated during the season.

HIGH RATE EXPLAINED.

Insurance Company Answers Criticisms Made in Montreal.

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 12 (By C. P.)—A leading insurance company has been criticized in the French Press of the city for discrimination in its rates against French-Canadian married women. Recently the President of the Company issued a statement relative to this: "In the combined experiences of the American and Canadian companies, covering the entire United States and Canada, deaths from this cause are 7.8 per cent. of the total number of deaths among married women. In our experience among French-Canadian women, the ratio is but 8 per cent. It will be seen, therefore, that the higher birth rate among French-Canadian women is not the real cause of the extra mortality.

"The chief trouble is that our French-Canadian women are hard-working and self-sacrificing to an extreme. Too often, the wife of a farmer or artisan does not take sufficient rest after the birth of a child, but is up and about in a very few days, attending to the housework and other duties at a time when she is physically unfit for tasks that are frequently burdensome and exhausting. One cannot but admire her pluck and sympathize with her difficulties, but the results may be disastrous. Her constitution may become undermined, making her susceptible to almost any form of disease. Tuberculosis then becomes a grave menace. The fact that so much of her life must be spent indoors adds to this danger. Pneumonia, pleurisy and peritonitis also take heavy tolls. It is noted that while there is a connection between child-bearing and the heavy mortality, that connection is not a necessary one, and is to a large extent preventable. If the value of thorough ventilation of our houses were better understood, and if there were more facilities for the care of tubercular patients in the earlier stages of the disease so that these unfortunates might have a better chance of recovery, and matters would greatly improve.

DEPORTATION IS CELEBRATED

Friends of Emma Goldman Hold Party To Mark Anniversary.

WATCH PRESENTED.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 12 (By C.P.)—Many anniversaries are celebrated, but a unique party was held in the city recently to mark the seventh anniversary of Emma Goldman's deportation from the United States. Her comrades carried her off to the party, almost by force, after she had given her lecture. It was a gay party, rather like a birthday, or even the first happy hour of a wedding reception, and had no tinge of regret that the guest of honor had lost her citizenship papers of the country to the south. After the dinner was over Emma Goldman was presented with a gold wrist watch from her "comrades," men and women who are in sympathy with her ideals and her actions.

On her return from a trip to the West Miss Goldman intends to give a lecture in this city on the topic, among others, of birth control. In conversation with a reporter she referred to the clinics operated by Dr. Marie Stopes in London. "They are more enlightened over there," she said. "Why, the House of Lords itself voted in favor of birth control."

$250 MILLIONS IN ONE YEAR

Unparalleled Public Acceptance Shows a World's Confidence in Chrysler Standardized Quality

During 1926 the motoring public throughout the world purchased 250 million dollars' worth of Chrysler products.

Three years ago the Chrysler was a new car, ranking 27th in the industry according to 1924 production.

Today, with a sales record of more than 170,000 cars during 1926, for an aggregate of 250 millions of dollars, Chrysler occupies fourth place in the industry having passed 23 other cars in volume of world sales.

This surpassing sales record—the most phenomenal that the industry has ever known—is evidence that discriminating men and women are paying eager tribute to Chrysler leadership.

Not only America, but all the world has discovered in Chrysler—"50", "60", "70" and Imperial "80"—an unprecedented soundness of value.

For the unique engineering and manufacturing plan of Chrysler Standardized Quality gives a superiority of performance, dependability, long life, economy, safety, handling and riding, which other cars in the Chrysler price range of $1055 to $5265, have never before presented.

UNITED W.M.A. HOLDS MEETING

Millbrook Branch To Take Up Thank Offering Early in March.

MILLBROOK NEWS.

MILLBROOK, Feb. 12.—The February meeting of the Woman's Missionary Auxiliary of the United Church was held at the parsonage on Wednesday afternoon, over forty members being in attendance.

On motion it was decided to hold the annual Easter service on the first Sunday in March; when the usual thank-offering will be taken up; and if possible a missionary will be secured as speaker. The Auxiliary; Circle and Band will attend morning worship on March 6 in a body, occupying the centre front pews.

The annual meeting will be on March 9, the president; Mrs. (Rev. Howard, announced, when all reports from group leaders, and other officers, will be received and the election of officers for 1927 will be held.

On Friday, March 4, the annual World Day of Prayer will be observed, and the sister auxiliaries will be asked to join for the service.

The President made touching reference to the passing of one of the group leaders, and a faithful officer, the late Miss Agnes Hampton, and asked, in conclusion, "Upon whose shoulders will the mantle fall?" a suggestive thought left by a former pastor, Rev. S. T. Tucker, at the funeral service the previous day.

Word from headquarters at Toronto brought the information that of the $21,000 allocated to this Presbytery, only $9,200 has as yet been received, hence the need for united effort if the objective is to be reached. Miss Hetherington, superintendent of Christian Stewardship, reported 14 pledged tithers, and urged that others try this plan of providing for the Lord's share and work.

Mrs. R. H. Edmunds gave an interesting account of a worker in Korea, a niece of the first missionary, Dr. Kate McMillan, and had also a Christmas card from Miss Viola Cardwell, with a circular descriptive of the Ham Heung mission and its history.

Mrs. C. C. Garside, leader of Group H, then took charge, Miss L. Crocker reading "An Easter Meditation," Mrs. H. J. Armstrong taking up the chapter from the study book on "Hindooism," and Mrs. A. J. Brown "Preaching among the Villages."

The Auxiliary decided to serve the hot dinner on Winter Fair Day, Thursday, February 17, the meal to be from 3 p.m. until all comers have been served.

Group H assisted the hostess in serving lunch, and a pleasant social hour was enjoyed before the gathering dispersed.

A very delightful social evening took place, under A.Y.P.A. auspices, in the parish hall of St. Thomas' church on Wednesday evening, the affair taking the form of a masquerade with prizes offered for the best costumes.

The interior of the hall was made attractive with decorations appropriate to the proximity of St. Valentine's Day, red hearts, large and small, with red and white streamers, tri-color flags, and red shades on the lights, providing a suitable atmosphere.

A parade, to music, by those in costume gave opportunity for the judges to come to a decision regarding the prize winners, the awards for the best "Hard Times" attire going to Miss Gladys Gray, whose coat and skirt bore patches of many sizes and colors, and whose shoes and stockings were quite evidently not mates; and to Rev. P. C. Howard, who was lavishly bandaged on head, arm, and foot, and used a broom for a crutch. The prizes for this class were donated through the generosity of Miss Ella Grandy, and for the best fancy costume by Mr. R. Stone. The winners in the latter class were Miss Maretta Gray, who wore white, daintily trimmed with cupids and hearts, and to Mr. Lynden Russell, who was quite effectively gotten up as a "Flapper."

Community games, in which everyone present could participate, were a happy feature of the evening, creating plenty of fun and activity, and following this refreshments were serveda and a very pleasant gathering was brought to a close.

Mrs. (Rev.) P. C. Howard is president of the A.Y.P.A. and Mrs. W. Hilton, secretary. There is a membership of about forty.

A "Pancake Social," with a mock trail, is planned for the next regular meeting on Wednesday, February 23, at 8 p.m.

The weekly "Church Night" at the United Church was under the auspices of the Seventh Line group on Wednesday evening, fully three hundred being in attendance.

Mr. H. Argue was chairman, and the reception committee included Mrs. W. Larmer, Mrs. F. Lang, and Messrs. Hilliard Lang and Edgar Fallis; Misses Gladys Williamson and Bertha Lang furnished piano music while the guests were gathering.

The formal programme included:

Song: "The Old Gray Bonnet," by the Seventh Line Group;

Piano Duet by Misses G. Williamson and Bertha Lang;

Recitation: "Shall and Will" by Barbara Argue;

Song: "Bring Back My Kitty," by Marie Douglas;

Reading, "The Wrong Train," by Mrs. H. Lang;

Chorus: "Song of the Camel," by seven girls;

At this point a contest was interjected, for which Rev. Mr. Howard acted as judge, the competition being to see which lady could have the tie of the gentleman who stood opposite her properly tied before time was called. The winners, Miss S. Hetherington and Mr. C. Sanderson, made their bow to the company.

Lunch was served before the items on the programme were concluded:

Recitation, "A Sunny Smile," by Irene Carbeth;

Song, "The Moustache on the Chin," by 7 boys;

Reading, "A Psalm Marriage," by Elinor Fallis;

Recitation, "Tit for Tat," by Hazel Morton;

Song, "The Kingdom Coming," by the Seventh Line Minstrels;

Community singing, with the hymns thrown on the screen, was followed by a brief talk by the pastor, on "Christ's Care for the Individual," with reference to "The Book Nobody Knows."

This was the most largely attended Church Night yet in the series, and considered one of the most enjoyable so far held. The west end group in the village is responsible for the one next Wednesday evening.

Mrs. H. Armstrong, of Toronto, has been visiting her mother, Mrs. S. Eakins, this week, expecting to return home on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. William James, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Whitfield, of Peterborough, were in town on Tuesday and attended the funeral of the late Miss A. Hampton.

Mr. C. Jeffrey, of Port Perry, is visiting his brother, Mr. A. Jeffrey, manager of the Millbrook Creamery.

A Smart New Frock

This chic little frock is smart in every detail, yet very simply fashioned. The bodice front is joined to the skirt having an inverted plait at each side seam to provide for the necessary fulness, while the back is in one piece. The rolling collar, wide belt and wrist-bands finishing the long gathered sleeves would be effective if made of contrasting material. NO. 1477 is in sizes 4, 6, 8 and 10 years. Size 6 years requires 2⅛ yards 36-inch material, or 1⅛ yards 54-inch, and ¼ yard 36-inch contrasting. Price 20 cents the pattern.

Home sewing brings nice clothes within the reach of all, and to follow the mode is delightful when it can be done so easily and economically, by following the styles pictured in our new Fashion Book. A chart accompanying each pattern shows the material as it appears when cut out. Every detail is explained so that the inexperienced sewer can make without difficulty an attractive dress. Price of the book 10 cents the copy.

SAINT and SINNER

By ANNE AUSTIN

When Faith reached home, she was greeted by her father with the news that Dr. Atkins had put her mother to sleep with a mild bromide, and a not so mild lie.

"He told her Cherry would be home by morning, safe and sound," Jim Lane shook his head despairingly. "I don't know what we've deserved to have this trouble fall— A reporter has been here and the news—about Cluny's death. A detective has been here rummaging Cherry's room and snooping over the whole house."

"Oh, Dad!" Faith took him in her arms as if he had been a forlorn little boy, instead of a tired out, bewildered father. "If only Cherry had listened to you!"

"They think Cherry done it," her father quavered. "This will kill your poor mother. I don't know what to do, where to turn. Young Pruitt was here," his voice rose on a slightly hopeful note, "when the reporter chap told me about—about Cluny. And George spoke right up for the Lane family. I can tell you; said he and his family would stand by us in our trouble. It's because he loves you, Faith. He's a noble young man—"

"I know, Dad." Faith held him tighter. "They don't come any finer than George Pruitt. But, Dad—I've been wanting to tell you, but was waiting until after—until after today. Bob and I love each other, Dad, and we've been engaged for weeks. I tried to release him tonight but he told the chief of police that we were engaged, that he wanted everyone in town to know that he was on our side, even if it was his uncle who was killed. But I won't marry him until Cherry is clear of all suspicion. If she—if anything happens to her, I couldn't let him be disgraced—"

"I'm glad we've got such good friends," Jim Lane said heavily.

"Dad, you don't think Cherry did it?" Faith cried.

"I don't know what to think honey," he turned his face from her.

"You've got to believe in her, you've got to know she couldn't do it!" Faith sank to her knees beside him and gripped his gnarled, brown hands. "For Mother's sake, for Cherry's sake. The reporters won't give us any peace now, Dad. Don't you realize that we've got to help Cherry by showing in every word and look that we know she couldn't possibly have done that terrible thing? Cherry has disobeyed you, flouted your authority, but she's good, Dad, in spite of everything. You will stand by her, Dad?" she pleaded.

Jim Lane's tired, dim brown eyes filled slowly with tears, before he answered. "Cherry's my daughter, Faith. I reckon she can count on her Dad."

Faith kissed him with passionate gratitude, then she asked, "Where's Junior, Dad? The detectives told him to stay here until he was called for."

It was a few minutes after eleven when Bob Hathaway came to the little house in Myrtle street, bringing Junior, grim, white-faced, with him.

"The coroner will hold his inquest tomorrow morning at ten, at Uncle Ralph's house. They won't remove the—the body until after the inquest, Bob told Faith and her father. "Dr. Murchison—he's the coroner, you know, told Morehouse that Uncle Ralph had been killed between eight thirty and a quarter to nine. They may fix the time more definitely to-morrow. I got there at a quarter to nine or a minute or two after, and offhand I'd say that it looks as bad for me as it does for—for anyone else," he finished lamely, unable yet to link Cherry's name with the crime.

"Oh, Bob!" Faith breathed, new terror stamping lines in her ravaged face.

OUR WINTER WEATHER.

A Trying Time For People With Weak Watery Blood.

Canadian winter weather is a trying time for debilitated, run-down people. The close air of shut-up houses, lack of out-of-door exercise, the restricted diet of the season, all have their effect on weakened systems. There is always in such cases the danger of severe colds, attacks of influenza, or the still more dreaded pneumonia. There is no other time of year, when a bountiful supply of rich, red blood is so necessary; and the one way to keep the blood rich and pure and thus avoid winter trouble is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. If, unfortunately you have fallen a victim to influenza, or other winter troubles, this same medicine will restore your health and strength. Among those who have proved the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is Miss Margaret Pearson, R.R. No. 3, Chatham. Miss Pearson had passed through a severe attack of influenza and says: "It left me so weak and run-down, that I could scarcely walk. Anaemia set in and it almost seemed as if I would not pull through the winter, as I grew so weak that the least exertion would bring on fainting spells. I was under medical treatment, but it did not help me. Then one day in our local paper I read an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and decided to try them. By the time I had used three boxes I felt much better, and continuing the use of the pills it was not long before I felt better than I had been before the influenza attacked me. My rapid recovery surprised my friends, and when asked "What did you do?" I would proudly say, "Not my doing, but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills." To me, at least, the pills have been worth their weight in gold."

As a precaution against winter ills take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills now. Sold by all medicine dealers, or sent by mail at 50c a box by The Dr Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Professor Answers Criticisms Levelled Against Non-Canadian Books.

HISTORY CITED.

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 12 (By C.P.)—People who criticize the use of text books published in foreign countries in Canadian schools, lack something of the spirit of internationalism. This is the opinion that Professor Carris Derick, M.A., of the Protestant Committee of the Council of Education expressed before the Notre Dame de Grace Women's Club.

"'We should not have text books except they are made in Canada,' is what I am told continually," stated Professor Derick. "What are you going to do about that history, The World's Progress?" I am asked by others. I have replied to persons who speak in this way that if they will prepare a history even better or quite as good as this American volume, which is not anti-British, I would be very glad to see if it can't be adopted for use in Canadian schools. The important thing is this, should we give our children less than the best, if the best is not made in Canada? There should be in intellectual circles, the spirit of internationalism."

CHILDREN BURNED.

Fires Show Danger of Leaving Little Ones Alone.

TORONTO, Ont.; Feb. 12 (By CP.)—In this city four small children were burned to death last week, the parents having left them alone while on a visit to friends. The father, did indeed return; but finding all sleeping he went away again. Fifteen minutes afterwards he was childless.

A more fortunate fate was that of four small children carried from a burning house a few days later, by two garagemen who noticed smoke issuing from it.

Significant is the paragraph in the news item which follows: "The fire started in a clothes closet, where one of the children is reported to have dropped a lighted paper. The mother was out of the house at the time of the blaze, returning just as the children were carried out.

DRESS

By MARY MARSHALL

String-colored net and lace were used to make this French evening cape, embroidered with silk in pastel tones.

By the time women in the cooler climes are ready to turn their thoughts to warm-weather clothes there is no longer any special novelty about the subject—nor is there usually any uncertainty as to what sorts of frocks, wraps and hats will be worn. That is one of the decided differences between the process of establishing spring and summer fashions and those for autumn and winter. Palm Beach, the Riviera, and other fashionable winter resorts serve as experiment stations in this matter of spring fashions, and we who remain at home profit by the experience of the women who have worn summer frocks and hats and wraps in January and February.

In the meantime there no longer seems to be anything incongruous in seeing wide-brimmed straw hats in the shops shortly after Christmas and to peer through the snow and frost at show windows showing light-colored linen sport frocks. We wrap ourselves in our heaviest furs when we go out on cold February nights and think the while of new evening wraps of lace, georgette or silk.

Of course, if you are going South for the tag end of winter you will want to have one of these new light-weight evening wraps. Maybe you will find it worth while to get one now even if you stay home, for the wrap that is all you need for evening on warm spring and summer nights makes a delightful little extra wrap to wear indoors now when even indoor air may not be warm enough to make low-cut frocks comfortable.

One evening wrap of this sort is made of coarse, black net edged and lined with silk crepe. Rather heavy, coarse flower embroidery decorates the front and sleeves of the coat. There are charming black or grege-colored lace capes that give a bit of warmth and a touch of novelty to the evening frock and may be worn now as one would wear a shawl. Some of the French dressmakers are making many of these lace capes for evening and usually they are embellished with embroidery.

HOROSCOPE

The Stars Incline, but do not Compel.

SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 13, 1927
(Copyright, 1927, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Threatening stars appear to rule on this Sabbath day, which should be passed quietly.

The clergy may perceive lack of interest and even a reluctance to fulfill obligations, while this rule prevails.

They who write letters under this direction of the stars may regret the effort unless they are uncommonly cautious in expressing opinions.

Rumors of wars probably will prevail while this configuration prevails and preparedness will be advocated more than ever, if the signs are wisely interpreted.

Old folk may be unreasonable, garrulous and altogether trying under this sway, which makes for discontent with whatever means progress.

Farmers and dwellers in small communities may be exceedingly difficult to deal with while this rule continues.

Food will now come much to the front and diet will be a subject of paramount interest.

Labor interests become more powerful in Great Britain as the winter advances and there may be sensational political events.

The Prince of Wales comes under a direction of the stars which appears ominous. He may lose his popularity suddenly.

A forgery of international scope is forecast for the early spring and there may be many crimes committed to obtain money which will not be plentiful in certain quarters.

Women should be especially careful not to transgress the laws in any direction, for they are subject to a rule making for daring and dishonest practices.

Music is still subject to the best influences making for new demands for it and increased returns for artists.

Persons whose birthdate it is should be especially careful to safeguard property and money in the coming year.

Children born on this day have the augury of success though things that appeal to women, dress, jewels and amusements.

MONDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1927
(Copyright, 1927, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

One of the rarely fortunate days has dawned, according to astrologers who find all the planetary influences good.

It is a date most favorable for love affairs and he who becomes a Valentine under this sway should be faithful and devoted.

There is a promising sign for the meeting of young folk and casual acquaintances may become long friendships under the kindly rule of this day.

This is read as a lucky day for journeys, particularly for those having as their goal a fiancee.

Under this direction of the stars it is lucky to make plans whether they be concerned with business or pleasure.

Men and women who can make quick decisions and who have definite views on what they desire to do are well directed under this planetary government.

This is a favorable rule for executives of every sort and for all who would lead others.

There is rather an uncertain sign for theatres, making apparently for changes in management and in the sort of plays offered.

Return to sentiment and romance in the drama and fiction is indicated. New authors are to gain sudden fame.

Much energy and initiative should be evident to-day and there should be good returns for effort in the right direction.

Colors are now to be studied scientifically and to attain popularity through novel symbolisms.

Many schemes for human betterment are to be worked out at this time when England will take the lead in a scientific movement to eliminate poverty.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of travel and pleasant change. Whatever is constructive should prosper.

Children born this day may have widely different talents. Many naval officers are born under this sign and many girls are musical.

HOW YOUR HAIR CAN BETRAY YOU

Any hair on your head is just as certain a mark of your identity as are your finger prints. That criminologists make use of this scientific fact was disclosed in recent reports of the importance attached to a single red hair in the notorious McPherson case in Los Angeles.

Scientists say that human hair, examined under a powerful microscope, has tiny overlapping scales, much like the scales of fishes. In the centre of the hair is a hollow canal containing the coloring matter. In no two individuals, says Popular Science Monthly, is the hair structure exactly the same. Among the points of identification are the size of the hair, size of the central canal, size of the scale units and the nature of the hair surface.

A—Alberta is Canada's largest oil producing province, owing to the remarkable output of Royalite naptha well No. 4 which is controlled by the Imperial Oil Co. in Turner Valley, by the steadily growing output of crude oil from wells in the Wainwright field and by production from other wells in various parts of the province. Producing wells have also been obtained north of the Alberta boundary and these include the two Imperial wells at Fort Norman, near the Arctic Circle, which produce at the rate of about 100 barrels of oil grading 36 degrees Beaume, a day.

A Narrow Escape

A New Statement Concerning Evolution

(By J. H. Burnham.)

The epoch-making book, "The case against Evolution," lately issued with the imprimatur of His Eminence Cardinal Hayes of New York, has produced a profound impression upon the Christian and scientific world and will be of the utmost interest to all thinking people. Mr. Burnham has found it inadvisable to "review" this book in the usual way, by giving extracts with descriptive comments, because it is next to impossible to do so within reasonable limits and in an intelligible way. He has therefore summed up "The Case Against Evolution" under the two following heads: "The Body of Man" and "The Soul of Man," with added remarks upon Evolution itself.

"The Body of Man."

"Evolution" has come a long way since Darwin and presents to-day a condition of knowledge, half-knowledge and guesswork that is very puzzling to many people. Just as the peace of God is evidently beyond all understanding by some people, so is the origin of man. Briefly, "Evolution," when it began in its late or modern phase with Lamarch and especially Darwin, as a history of the development or gradual evolving of man from lower types through long ages up to his condition at the present day, was fought by many "religious" people as an attack upon the Word of God and Christianity. This idea of its purpose or effect is now generally abandoned except by Bryanites and others of that ilk.

In "Evolution" there is not and never was any reference to the soul of man. Science takes no notice of anything super-natural or spiritual. It deals with nature or material things only. Hence it deals only with the material or physical side of man and not with the spiritual. The "Soul of Man" remains what it always was to the believer—the special gift of God to man and that which makes him immortal and destined for a different future. Science and Religion are therefore not opposed. They are not really much at variance on this question. Religion agrees with Science that there has been or may have been an evolution or development of physical man from a lower type, or at least does not dispute it, whilst, on the other hand, Science has nothing to say of that peculiar province of Religion, the human soul itself and the spiritual world. There is, therefore, logically speaking, nothing to discuss in this matter, but it is the very fact that the question has reached this stage that will surprise, interest and perhaps please people interested in it. Certainly it will be a matter of surprise to know that the hub-bub over Evolution, which almost rent the world in twain, has largely subsided. Let us now proceed to give a brief history and critique of Evolution with a view to defining more clearly our present knowledge of it and the conclusions arrived at concerning it.

The Bryanites (a term I will use to describe all that class of people who are afraid that God will be beaten and that the truth will not prevail unless they take a hand in it) seem to overlook the statement in Ecclesiastes, "I said in my heart concerning the estate of the sons of men that they might see that they are themselves beasts. For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts, even one thing befalleth them; as the one dieth so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath so that man hath no preeminence over a beast; for all is vanity—All go into one place; all are of the dust and all return to dust. Who knoweth the spirit of man whether it goeth upward and the spirit of the beast whether it goeth downward to the earth?" and then again in Chapter XII., 5-7, "the dust returneth to the earth whence it was: and the spirit returneth to God who gave it."

The Bryanites of Tennessee and elsewhere would rule Ecclesiastes out as a dangerous book if they knew it. The present state of the case, then, is that so far as Evolution deals with the body of man, Science and men generally are at liberty to discuss it without let or hindrance, but if it once trenches upon the Spiritual world it would go too far and farther than it has gone or seems at all likely to go.

To those who have always regarded "Man" as a darling of the gods, and specially made and created in every part, body and soul, by God Himself, this present state of "Evolution" will be as much a cause of surprise as of grief. To them we might say, without incumbering our remarks with Scientific argon, let them study the Scriptures, especially Ecclesiastes, and govern themselves accordingly. It cannot be denied that the "especial creation" theory has its consolations and spiritual satisfaction as well as its idealistic bearing, but the pre-ponderating opinion of the religious, as well as of the scientific world, is that Man's body was made of the dust of the earth and is mortal, whilst it is his soul alone that is immortal and the subject and object of all our tears and prayers. Though some of us may lean more to the idealistic view, a review of "Evolution," as it is to-day, cannot be otherwise fairly put than as I have tried to state it.

"Surely," says an author, "there was no need of the profound research or delicate precision of modern science to detect the all too obvious similarity existing between man and beast"; and then again, "Indeed it would be a libel on human intelligence to suppose that anyone in the whole history of human thought was ever sufficiently fatuous to dispute the patent fact that man is a sentient organism compounded of flesh, blood, bone and sinew like the brute."—(George Barry O'Toole, Ph. D., Professor of Theology, &c., St. Vincent Archabbey.) It has always been a matter of doubt if the craving of the human soul will be satisfied with this view and many will still feel convinced that what God deemed worthy of a soul He surely deemed worthy of a nobler body than indicated by physical Evolution.

The Soul of Man.

In my preceding reference to "Evolution," it may be remembered that I stated that the position of this question at the present time is that the body of man has evolved just as that of the horse has, from earlier types. Going still farther back it is held that all known types of animal creation developed from one simple animal form and that plant life did likewise from a simple plant form. It is contended also that at one time still further back there was only one simple form of life of any kind from which later on both plant and animal life developed. Then the question arose, "How did life itself first come upon the earth?" and Science answers, "By the action of solar energy upon lifeless materials." Religion does not specifically deny this statement of Science, contenting itself with its own domain of the spiritual world and the Soul of Man with which Science has nothing to do. Religion and Science therefore have now practically nothing to do with each other, each going its own way, scientifically speaking. There arose, however, a demand for proof that there is a soul and to those who are not content with Revelation an explanation or description of this proof is given in recognized and "orthodox" religio-scientific treatises. Briefly, the Soul of Man is said to be that power of abstraction or abstract thought which does not deal with concrete or material things. An analysis of the mind shows that whilst the soul, mind and spirit are all enclosed in and dependent upon, for their bodily continuance, the continuance of the body and may appear therefore to be the mere result of the functioning of the brain they are not really so but something different and probably different. It is shown that while all the powers of the brain except the soul deal with material things and are dependent upon them whenever they function the soul does not necessarily deal with material or concrete concepts and is in no way dependent upon them when it functions.

It deals with abstractions such as Religion, Justice, moral responsibility and all that which is comprised within the moral law which obviously must have a higher sanction than man himself. It is clear I think that thoughts of spiritual things deal with something more than the things of the material world. In fact, in material things there is no such thing as right and wrong. It will be found that it is upon this fact or otherwise of "right and wrong" that this claim for man's spiritual nature depends. Right and wrong are wholly a matter of conduct and humanly speaking depend upon the conscience of the individual which is the power of choice in the individual and when normal is simply a desire to do right and that "right" and that conscience cannot come from man's material nature or body but must come from some other and Higher Power which we call "God" who through this conscience and desire to do right (or spiritual sense) is brought into touch with Man's consciousness or personality by means of those elements in him. That man does transcend the body in this respect is apparent since by no possible conception can it be alleged that what does not deal with the body and material things or concepts is itself derived from the body or material things. Some may here suggest that it may be all "imagination." But the imagination does not deal with abstruction and only visualizes in a vivid and material way that which it conceives. The imagination reaches up often towards unknown heights but always from a material ladder like dreams. On careful thought it will be seen that the imagination and the power of abstraction are two fundamentally different things. Nor are abstractions in any way dependent upon material facts being true whether corresponding "facts" are in existence or not as in the case for example of "right" which in the statement that it is right to do right derives its sanction and force from nothing in nature but only from something within us which we call and must call the spiritual sense. The capacity for correctness in abstract reasoning is dependent upon our powers of thought alone and the reasoning or thought itself could be maintained if there was no material thing in existence there was no material thing in existence but that from which this thought is acting. Whatever this power which is called the Soul may need in the way of a physical basis in our personality to speak from it has the power of dealing with or concerning that which has no physical materiality itself. To disprove this it would be necessary to prove that abstractions are merely generalizations from recurring instances in life and nature but there can be no instance anywhere recurring or otherwise of the Absolute but God and it is wholly with the Ultimate and Absolute that this power of abstract thought greater or less names the soul deals. The soul's loss or slva-tion depends upon its obedience to its sense of responsibility to Right—to Absolute Right which is God, Who illumes us as we desire. It is upon this capacity of man to understand the spiritual that the idea of the "soul" depends just as it the idea of the "soul" depends just as it is upon his ability to deal with material things that the theory of the "mind" depends.

I am not, it will be observed, dealing at all with Revelation, but wholly with those who require "proof," the "proof" being necessarily of the inductive type up to a certain point after which it becomes deductive or absolute.

But some urge in refutation of transcendentalism the waste in nature, idiots and the like. There is no waste in nature. All proceeds according to Law. We might es well find fault with earthquakes as with human unfits. If we believe in a conscious Supreme Power (and if unconscious how could we conceive of His acting at all)—we must suppose that all that this Supreme Power does serves His purpose and when we do not understand, that is our fault, not His. We see where, according to Evolution, the body came from but where could this sense of right and wrong and a knowledge of a spiritual God come from except its source, God?

For those who need a rgument to be convince d, this is the argument (in brief form) advanced by moralists for that purpose. It is not put forth as a substitute for Revelation but as a means of showing those who do not feel convinced of a Revelation that apart from that there is proof of a soul and from that conviction it is only a step to the acknowledgment of a revelation and of spiritual things and of what they imply here and hereafter. We derive our knowledge of water from water but we cannot derive our knowledge of things not of the material world from the material world. The possibility of deriving a knowledge of immaterial things and the means of so doing are shown. It only remains therefore for each to realize or know what each has learned in that respect.

A Year Round House

(By H. G. MacDonald & H. G. Magoon, Architects.)

Here is an example of the type of house which with the snow of winter or the foliage of summer for its setting, looks equally attractive and comfortable. It is a sensible little house, the exterior charm of which depends on simplicity and good proportions, aided by proper planting and a small area of good turf.

The plan is commendable for its compact arrangement to include three closets, two bedrooms, kitchen and bathroom, together with practically all the articles which tend to make housework easy, and recreation enjoyable, upon one floor size 28 feet by 25 feet. Being almost a perfect square it would be an easy home to keep warm and cosy during the severest weather.

The rear bedroom, linen closet, and bathroom open from an inner hall which is entered through the living-room, while the front bedroom may be reached directly from the living-room or through the adjoining bedroom.

The kitchen is replete with those devices which make cooking a pleasure of not too long duration, and contains a range with hot water boiler, table, refrigerator, sink and cupboard. The rear entrance is combined with stairs to basement, making access to laundry either from drying-yard or kitchen equally convenient.

It will be noted that the living-room, in common with every other room in the house, has windows on two sides and is thus assured of good lighting and cross-ventilation. A cheery sight indeed would meet the homecomer as he entered from the vestibule and was greeted by the fireplace blazing out warmth and cheer; and meals, too, would be taken in its flickering light.

Well lighted and roomy, the basement extends under the whole house, and is divided into a laundry which is equipped with tubs, coal-bin, and a large space for heating and general storage purposes. The basement walls are concrete below the grade and stucco above, while from the ground floor up the walls are stucco on frame. An alternative which would give a delightful effect would be to use shingles above the window-heads.

Care has been taken to have the fireplace, range, and furnace flues run up together and so form a substantial looking chimney, an arrangement having the additional advantage of a saving in cost.

The cost of this home may be expected to approximate 4,000.

Readers desiring further information regarding the plans and specifications of this house should communicate with the architects direct. Address Messrs. G. H. MacDonald & H. A. Magoon, Tegler Building, Edmonton, Alberta. Copyright 1927, MacLean Building Reports, Ltd.

DENTIST ATTACKS VITAMINE CRAZE

Says Good Teeth Largely a Matter of Food and Feeding.

WINNIPEG, Man., Feb. 12 (By C.P.)—J. S. Wallace, D.Sc., M.D., L.D.S., lecturer on preventive dentistry at King's College, London, England, now on a lecture tour of Canada, scores what he calls the "vitamine craze," and condemns the practice of feeding children soft foods. Sound teeth, he says, are largely a matter of food and feeding, and the instruction of mothers in what and how to feed their children was of more importance than any amount of practical dentistry. Dr. Wallace is the originator of a movement of preventive dentistry. He is conceded to be revolutionary, but such has been the result of his work that he has been awarded medals and a prize. In a certain district in England the average of 6.4 carious teeth in each child out of a total of more than 37,000 was reduced to 1.9 from 1914 to 1920, as a result of putting Dr. Wallace's theories into practice. The percentage of children of the same age entirely free from caries was raised from 5 per cent. to 48 per cent., in the same time.

CREDIT FOR MOTHER.

Comment Inspired By Victory of George Young at Catalina.

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 12 (By C.P.)—Local editorial comment on the victory of George Young, the 17 year-old boy who achieved fame at Catalina Island has a word for the mother. "Who should receive the credit for the Catalina swim? The boy who did it or the mother who inspired him? Both, no doubt," says the Globe. And the 'Mail' has a word for parents to ponder over: "One of the defects of our educational system is that it does not lead young people to believe in themselves. A father who says to his disheartened son, 'You will overcome every difficulty in your studies, every obstacle in your path, if you only think so and manfully stick to your work,' will be an influence for good in the making of that son."

Uncle Wiggily

To-day's Bedtime Story.

By Howard R. Garis

When Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy promised forty 'leven little bunny children of Uncle Wiggily that she would make ice-cream one day, such a jolly shouting and so much merry laughter you never heard in a month of Mondays.

"I love ice-cream!" cried Tooter.

"I could eat it all day!" shouted Scooter.

"Pooh! That's nothing! I could eat it all night!" said Jingle, and all the others thought Jingle was very smart.

"But to make ice-cream," said Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy, the kind muskrat lady housekeeper, who helped Mr. and Mrs. Longears to look after the bunny children, "to make ice-cream I must have ice."

"Oh, take some from the refrigerator!" suggested Jumble.

"I'll get it for you," offered Bumble, who was named after a bee that nearly stung him one time.

But, when they looked in the big chest where the carrots, lettuce and turnips were kept, there was hardly a smitch of ice. I don't know just how much a smitch is, but that's what Bumble said, and he ought to know.

"Not a smitch of ice!" sadly cried the little rabbit boy.

"Oh, Mr. Whitewash, the polar bear iceman, must have forgotten to leave us any," said Nurse Jane. "I can't make ice-cream without ice."

"Daddicums will get it for us!" said Jingle. "He knows how!"

That's always the way it was in the hollow stump bungalow where Uncle Wiggily lived. If there was ice to get, coal to bring up, a sticky window to shut or an adventure to seek, the bunny rabbit gentleman had to do it.

But bless your rubber boots, he didn't in the least mind. He liked it! And so when the little bunny rabbits came crowding around him, saying there was no ice for the cream, Mr. Longears twinkled his pink nose, put on his tall silk hat and said:

"I'll get it! I'll go to the cold cave of Mr. Whitewash, the polar bear, and bring back a big chunk of ice!"

"Oh, goodie!" cried Tingle!"

"How I love ice-cream!" sang Baby Bunty.

"May I have two dishes, mother?" asked Scramble.

"I could eat three!" laughed Amble.

"We'll see about it," was all Mrs. Longears said.

So Daddicums, Uncle Wiggily, set forth, as they say in grown up books, and all the little bunny rabbits watched him, wishing he would hurry back with the ice so Nurse Jane could freeze the cream.

Well, Uncle Wiggily had not been gone more than a few minutes before he was heard hopping up the back steps.

"My! your father is back quick!" said Mrs. Longears. "He must have gone in his airship."

"But he hasn't any ice!" sighed Jingle, looking from the window.

"Oh! Oh! Oh, dear!" cried all the little bunnies.

"A terrible storm is coming!" said Mr. Longears as he hopped inside the bungalow. "I didn't want to be caught in it, so I came back. See how black it is getting!" and it was, really! The sky was filled with inky clouds.

"But what about our ice-cream?" cried all the bunny boys and girls.

"There will soon be some sky ice," said Uncle Wiggily. "Ice will fall from the sky in this storm and, when it is over, we can scoop it up from the ground and freeze cream with it."

"Sky ice!" laughed Tooter. "There isn't any such thing!"

But the clouds gathered thicker and blacker. Soon the wind blew. Soon the lightning flashed. Soon the thunder rumbled and then it rained. And, with the rain came hail stones, or frozen rain drops, as big as the blue eggs of a robin. Down pelted the white, cold hail stones, covering the ground. And when the storm was over the laughing bunny boys and girls rushed out and gathered many pans of the hail stones.

Nurse Jane put this funny ice, which really fell from the sky, in the freezer with salt, and soon the cream was frozen as nicely as you please. And, if their Daddicums had said lollypops would rain from the sky, I think the little bunnies would have believed him.

But, if the bread knife doesn't cut the cake of soap, thinking it is a piece of pie, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily and the door mat.

ONE SOLID WEEK IN WITNESS BOX

Operating Expert For C.P.R. Testifies at Freight Rates Hearing.

STILL GOING.

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 12 (By Canadian Press).—After one solid week in the witness box W. M. Neal, Operating Expert, and assistant to the vice-president of the C.P.R. was still going strong before the Board of Railway Commissioners in the freight rates investigation at the close of yesterday's session.

Mr. Neal proved to be a mine of information on the physical condition of the Western sections of his company's system and had both the theory and practice of operation down to the smallest detail. For two days he described conditions and methods of operation under the guidance of E. C. Flintoft, C.P.R. chief counsel, and for twice that length of time he stood a barrage of inquisition from a succession of counsel from each of the prairie provinces and from British Columbia.

The early part of yesterday's session was taken by S. B. Woods, counsel for Alberta, who, among other interesting items elicited the fact that at one time during the grain embargo last summer, more than 3,000 cars loaded with westbound grain were held up en route. The delay was caused by lack of ocean tonnage to carry off the grain as it reached Vancouver. This was in support of the statements previously made that the company had never had all the traffic it could handle.

The witness was next taken in hand by H. T. Symington, representing the province of Manitoba, and the trend of his cross examination was to demonstrate that on practically every point the west offered a more favorable transportation proposition than the east. In the west there were longer hauls, less interchange of traffic, less frequent terminal and switching interference, fewer transhipments and a number of other features all of which operated to the advantage of the west. To these contentions witness gave assent, and finally admitted that railroad operating in the province of Manitoba was cheaper than in any other part of the system. From this position counsel drew the deduction that the rate schedule should favor the section which costs least to operate.

Mr. W. H. McEwen, representing Saskatchewan started his cross-examination shortly before adjournment.

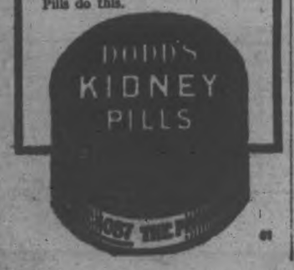
He Always Keeps a Box In the House

So Says Mr. A. M. Thomson of Dodd's Kidney Pills

"I have used Dodd's Kidney Pills for years for lame back, rheumatism and kidney trouble," writes Mr. A. M. Thomson, of South Sanwich, Brentwood, B.C.

"I have found them very beneficial in every instance and have highly recommended them to others whom I have heard complaining of the same disorders. I keep a box of them in the house at all times and take some when I feel any pains anywhere. I am over seventy years old."

To be assured of good health the kidneys must be kept in good working order. Dodd's Kidney Pills do this.



PROFESSOR PRATT LECTURES ON WORKS

Will Give Excerpts From His Own Writings in Y.W.C.A. Course.

Professor E. J. Pratt of Victoria College, Toronto, who has been giving a series of very popular lectures on English literature at the Y.W.C.A. during the winter months, is concluding the series within the next three weeks, and has promised to give excerpts from his own work in the last two lectures of the course.

It is interesting to note, in this connection, that Professor Pratt has achieved considerable fame of late with his published volumes of verse, which include "Newfoundland Verse," published in 1923, "The Witches' Brew," (1925) and "Titans," just off the press. One of his earlier poems, "The Sea Floes" is in one of the High School readers.

The reviewer in "The Bookshelf" in Toronto "Saturday Night" speaks of "Titans" as follows:

"Novelty is the first quality of Pratt's narrative poems to catch the eye: humour and whimsicality playing with and through the technical vocabulary of the sea, and biology, is not the stuff many poets have chosen: and we are piqued and amused to note the skill of the rhyming and the development of the stories. They are highly entertaining, and occasionally impressive; always clever and sometimes witty. It would be unjust to call them "stunt" poems, though they share some-"stunt" poems, though they share something of that character: facetiousness like this poet's is not intended to masquerade as the sublime. Their virility and merits of versification are worthy more serious use: that these have been put to this comparatively light use makes the novelty. They are unquestionably entertaining and pleasing, and filled with an exuberance that is welcome as at least a temporary change from the melancholy of most poets."

Professor Pratt comes originally from Newfoundland, and has written several works in description of coast scenes.

PROSPEROUS YEAR FOR DOMINION LIFE

All-Canadian Company Reports Increased Dividends for Policyholders.

The remarkable progress of The Dominion Life Assurance Company, particularly during the last few years, was forcibly made evident at the Annual Meeting of the Company held yesterday at its Head Offices in Waterloo, when the Thirty-Eighth Annual Report was presented to the policyholders and shareholders.

In referring to the steady, well-balanced development which the Dominion Life has enjoyed, the President, Thomas Hilliard, drew attention to the fact that the Company has more than doubled in size during the past six years and at the same time predicted an equally rapid expansion during the evident era of prosperity which Canada as a whole is now sharing.

That this Company, established in 1889, enjoys the confidence of Canadians is borne out by the substantial increases in every department as referred to in the Directors' Report for the past year. New assurances issued during the year amounted to $21,187,000—a figure which exceeded that of 1925 by over 17%. Ten years ago the Dominion Life had $19,000,000 of insurance in force. On December 31st of 1926 this total was $93,880,000, practically five times as much—and an increase for 1926 of $12,000,000.

Large Profits.
